Over 48% Turnout

Bellotti, Cerasoli, Marshall, Brett Win

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Robert A. Cerasoli won the nomination for the vacant First Norfolk District State Representative seat and Clifford Marshall the man who gave it up to run county-wide for the first time nailed down the nomination for sheriff in local election highlights.

In a statewide feature, Quincy's Francis X. Bellotti, former lieutenant governor, took a giant step forward in his political comeback by rolling up an impressive vote to win the Democratic nomination for attorney general.

Democrat state representative incumbents Joseph E. Brett and Thomas F. Brownell won easy renominations. William D. Delahunt was unopposed on the Democratic side.

Another big winner in Quincy, it would seem, was Democracy itself as 22,630 or about 48.4 per cent of the city's eligible 47,062 voters turned out. A slim 30 per cent had been

ROBERT CERASOLI

Runnerup was Atty. Thomas F. Williams with 1,785. James A. Papile was third with 1,429 and Patrick J. Faherty trailed far behind with only 161.

In Quincy, the vote was Cerasoli 1,757; Williams 1,389; Papile 874 and Faherty 116.

Cerasoli will meet Weymouth Republican Sumner H. Given in November and is expected to win without too much trouble. There are only two North Weymouth precincts in the district.

Marshall, who gave up the seat to make the race for sheriff ran strong throughout the county.

CLIFFORD MARSHALL

forecast. For the record, 18,844 Democrats and 3,786 Republicans cast ballots.

Quincy voters went pretty much the same way as did voters across the state in both the Democratic and Republican primaries.

They went for: Michael Dukakis and Francis Sargent for Governor, Thomas P. O'Neill III for lieutenant governor [Republican Donald Dwight was unopposed] Democrat Bellotti and Republican Josiah A. Spaulding attorney general; Paul H. Guzzi, secretary of state over incumbent John F. X. Davoren [Republican John J. Quinlan unopposed] and Thaddeus Buczek for auditor.

But they gave Mark Furcolo a slight edge over Treasurer Robert Q. Crane as the pair locked in a tight state-wide battle.

The Republicans had no candidates for treasurer, auditor or governor's councillor.

Quincy went for Congressman James A. Burke who rolled over Joseph M. Tierney in the 11th Congressional District and gave Governor's Councillor Patrick J. McDonough the nod over Weymouth's Edward W. Owens. The latter did well in Quincy, however, polling 5,956 to McDonough's 7,318.

Cerasoli, a former assistant to the Senate Committee on Rules, climaxed a slam-bang campaign in the First Norfolk District to win by a 643 vote margin.

Cerasoli polled 2,428 votes in the district which includes two North Weymouth precincts.

$1,500 Quincy Heritage Poster, Slogan Contests

Can you draw? Or are you pretty good with words?

Would you like to become part of Quincy's history?

Well, you could be one of 48 winners who will soon share in $1,500 in money prizes and take your place in Quincy history.

The prizes are being offered in poster and slogan contests co-sponsored by The Quincy Savings Bank and The Quincy Sun in cooperation with Quincy Heritage.

There will be 48 winners—24 in each contest—with two top prizes of $300 on the theme: "Quincy's Pride: Patriots, Presidents, Possibilities."

Announcement of the contests was made jointly today by Rev. John R. Graham, director Quincy Heritage, Charles A. Pearce, president of The Quincy Savings Bank and Henry W. Bosworth, publisher of The Quincy Sun.

The winning poster and slogan will become part of Quincy's celebration of its own 350th anniversary and the nation's Bicentennial.

The contests are open to Quincy residents only—but to residents of all ages. You can enter either or both contests and be eligible for two instead of one prize.

So, if you live in Quincy, can

'Want It This Year'

Firefighters Looking For 10-To-14% Salary Hike

Quincy's 265 firefighters and 61 ranking officers are looking for at least a 10-to-14 percent pay hike—retroactive to July 1 of this year.

Maximum salary of firefighters is now $11,575.

Quincy patrolmen were recently given a $1,400 pay raise boosting their yearly salary to $12,975 effective Jan. 1, 1975. It allows for a cost of living adjustment on July 1, 1975.

"We want it this fiscal year and we want a one-year contract," says James Donovan, president of Firefighters Local 792 and chairman of its bargaining unit.

Donovan told The Quincy Sun that one fact-finding session has already been held and the second is scheduled for Oct. 3.

Donovan said that a fact-finder furnished by the American Arbitration Association is sitting down with representatives of the union and city.

"We present our side and the city presents its side," said Donovan. "The fact-finder then decides what the city can afford."

The fact finder's decision, however, is not binding.

If they are stalemated the two sides make final offers in a sealed envelope. A third party then accepts one of the two as the final decision.

Donovan said the firefighters are also looking for some "language items which wouldn't cost the city a nickel."

Among them, he said, is a request that the working schedule of the firefighters be put in writing.

"Right now," he said, "the chief can change our hours anytime he wants to."

Representing the city in the fact-finding session will be Atty. Joseph P. McParland and perhaps City Auditor Alexander Smith.

The firefighters' negotiating team includes the union's other officers, Peter Quinn, vice-president; Thomas Gorman, Jr., secretary and George Lamb, treasurer.

Adolescence Problems Course

The Social Health Department of Quincy Public Schools is offering to adult Quincy residents a 10-week program dealing with the problems of adolescence.

John Mahoney, social health coordinator, will be the course instructor. Topics will range from the psycho-social aspects of drug involvement to human sexuality to alcoholism to a discussion on lifestyles.

The course will meet on Wednesday evenings at 7:30 p.m. beginning Oct. 2. Each two-hour session will be held in the Lincoln-Hancock Community School. The final wrap-up session is Dec. 11.

Course enrollment is limited to 50. Certificates will be awarded at the completion of the program. Adults interested in attending the course must contact Mahoney by Wednesday, Sept. 25.

FOLLOW WHITE CARPET - Mr. and Mrs. Redmond Fitzgerald, trailed by an entourage of well-wishers, walk down a white carpet leading almost all the way from Our Lady of Good Counsel on Sea St. to their destination - an outdoor wedding reception at 18 Chickatabot Rd, Merrymount.

Bride, Groom, Guests Get White Carpet Treatment...Outside

Linda Blake and Redmond Fitzgerald were married Saturday afternoon in Our Lady of Good Counsel, Merrymount.

But the couple were not whisked away to their reception in a black, chauffeured limousine.

Instead, Linda and Redmond, accompanied by 325 guests, walked on a 1500-foot white carpet stretching from Sea St. [across from Our Lady of Good Counsel] to 18 Chickatabot Rd, Merrymount, where an outdoor reception was held in honor of the couple.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Blake of 18 Chickatabot Rd, is a hairdresser at the Charles Rizzo salon in Milton. The groom, son of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Fitzgerald of 64 Chickatabot Rd, is employed at the Prudential Insurance Co.

Following the reception, the couple left - by car, not on foot - for a honeymoon to Nantucket and Canada. They will live in North Quincy.

To Seek Bicentennial Funds

Hannon Backs Upland Rd Park

Mayor Walter J. Hannon will support and assist with an application for state Bicentennial funds to develop a Bicentennial Park along Upland Rd between Adams St. and Dimmock St.

"Until recently," said Hannon, "I felt that a tax-producing development on this land would be best for Quincy. Since the city needs increased revenues and job opportunities, we need to boost the city's economy whenever we can."

However, he indicated that strong support was expressed at a recent public hearing by community representatives and the Quincy legislative delegation for a Bicentennial Park.

"This hearing was held to find out how people felt about the use of the Upland Rd land," he said.

The Mayor noted, however, that the development of a distinctive open space area would require "considerable funding. In light of the city's tight budget, I do not feel that local tax funds should be utilized," he said.

At a recent meeting with Senator Arthur H. Tobin, plans for the funding of this project were discussed.

"In the past, the city had obtained assistance from federal and state sources to develop and maintain other open space facilities in the city," he said.

"I urge our legislators to take the action needed to secure this funding," said the Mayor. "I am making members of my staff, Quincy Heritage and the Department of Planning and Community Development available to assist in any way possible."

"I feel that we can work together to develop a program which will improve our physical environment, enhance the unique character of this historic area, and appropriately mark the 200th birthday of our nation."

Alcoholic loses wife

By PAT and MARILYN DAVIS

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
Last night I came home and my wife had left me. I more than deserved it and here is why. Three years ago I would enjoy two or three drinks before dinner. Then I got married and the number of drinks increased with my new responsibilities.

The stepped-up volume of liquor was not noticeable to me. I could hold more, or so I thought. No horrible trauma made me drink. I just enjoyed it. The rest of the tale has been told a hundred times so I won't repeat it. When I fell in the door last night, my wife was gone. She simply could not take the forgotten dinners, late evenings, drunken cursing and general unhappiness. I'm sober this morning and I hope I stay that way. Maybe my little scenario will turn somebody off the booze. It is a drug, too.

Loser

Dear Loser:

You quit being a loser when you quit drinking. Look up Alcoholics Anonymous in your telephone book and give them a try. You might also inform your wife of your new outlook.

Here is a note to teen-agers who are turning to liquor. Alcohol is a drug and can be harmful. It is not an innocent alternative to pot, pills or hard drugs.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

How long can a growing girl go without food? I think that my daughter is trying for the record. Either that or she is fasting for some unknown cause. She feels that at 5 feet 5

LOTS OF DOCTORS

The total number of new doctors licensed in the United States in one year doubled be-inches she should weigh 110 pounds — even if this means that she lives on salads, carrots and an occasional glass of skim milk. It is fine to be slim but she carries this thing too far. It has to be bad for her health. I cannot force food down her throat. How do other parents handle this?

Dad

Dear Dad:

I'd suggest that you make an appointment with your family doctor. He can set up a properly balanced diet for your daughter so that she can maintain her weight. He can also explain the lasting health hazards of a starvation diet. Good luck, Dad.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

My little girl is very pretty. People often stop and touch her. Even complete strangers who have colds will pat her on the head or take her hand. She is only 10 months old and I do not want people touching her. I know this sounds picky and I've read it before but I have no solution. I can't put a "Do Not Touch" sign on the baby. My husband thinks I'm foolish.

Rachel

Dear Rachel:

When someone reaches for the baby simply say, "Please don't touch my daughter." That should be sufficient. I'm with you — adults should keep hands off tiny children. A verbal compliment is nicer.

Today's Women

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY

Beautiful days here again

By ANN RUDY
Copley News Service

For you mothers of school age children who are sick and tired of going into the broom closet to eat a candy bar, I have good news for you: back to school days are here again, the sky is turning blue again.

Soon you will be able to wipe the sticky fingerprints from the refrigerator in the morning and they will stay off until after school. You will be able to watch the newlyweds and not explain why you're laughing.

And more. Little luxuries, like taking a bath in the afternoon without fear of exposure, like reading a book and getting to page 125 without having to settle a fight.

But first, there's something you have to do. You knew there would be, for nothing worthwhile is ever gained without a struggle.

You are going to have to get them to go shopping with you for back-to-school clothes. Which means you will have to catch them — there they go now, down the hall playing tag, dripping wet, after a brisk run through the sprinklers.

Open the car door and say, "I'm going to pick up the sitter." That will bring them running with protests of, "Why can't we go with you?" Say yes quickly before they have a chance to quiz you, slam the car door and take them to the nearest department store.

There, you will go through your final agony of summer as they go up the down escalator, slam fitting room doors, refuse to try on anything you like and hold out for shoes that make them look like rock singers.

But night must fall, the store will close, and you will emerge, I assure you, with 12 bags of new clothes, three new thermos bottles and three free pencil boxes the nice man in shoes gave your kids just after you said yes to the two-tone elevator shoes.

And on that first morning, as you wave them goodbye and they use the newly painted yellow crosswalks on your corner, you will know it's true: school is open.

You will turn off Bugs and his Buddies and pick up the morning paper. Pour yourself another cup of coffee, life can be beautiful.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

Does it look funny for a girl to wear another ring besides her wedding band on her left hand?

Wondering in Montpelier

Dear Wondering:

I assume your question refers to wearing a ring on the middle finger. My personal opinion is that it detracts from the engagement ring and wedding band. I stress the fact that it is my own opinion and if you like to wear more rings, do so. Today's fashion decrees it in vogue.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

Why is it that an extra woman at a party always seems so "extra" while three extra men always seem to make the party "go"?

San Diego Hostess

Dear Hostess:

I do not believe your statement is true. It has been my experience that a single woman who is a spritely conversationalist, attractive and interested in your other guests can make a party "go" far better than three dull bachelors.

ARIES: (March 21 to April 19 — Also Aries Ascendant) — Carefully investigate various aspects of projects in process, then make firm decisions. Be responsible in the discharging of your commitments. Work cooperatively with others. Be emotionally very discreet.

TAURUS: (April 20 to May 20 — Also Taurus Ascendant) — Speculative affairs involving your money or abilities should be very carefully considered. Get professional advice before signing contracts — refuse to be rushed into decisions. Get plenty of rest and guard diet.

GEMINI: (May 21 to June 20 — Also Gemini Ascendant) — Sale of real estate involving change of residence is a possibility. Give attention to domestic relationships and settle old issues. Social life increases. Use your wit in considerate ways — curb sarcasm.

CANCER: (June 21 to July 22 — Also Cancer Ascendant) — Get in touch with relatives and neighbors whom you may have been neglecting. Unexpected expenses with the home could strain your bank account or credit.

Accept in good grace the responsibility of a parent or elder.

LEO: (July 23 to August 22 — Also Leo Ascendant) — Use this period of a lull in hectic activity to rest, meditate and catch up on personal affairs. A short trip is possible. Be very clear, concise, and to the point in letters and all communications. Don't misrepresent.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22 — Also Virgo Ascendant) — Attend to routine matters — plug along without expecting too much action or cooperation. Legal matters appear activated but unsolved for now. Guard possessions carefully since you may be in a "loss" cycle.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22 — Also Libra Ascendant) — Guard against overemphasizing your ego needs and taking things personally and resentfully. It is important to your future security that you operate wisely toward your long-range goals now, without bearing grudges.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21 — Also Scorpio Ascendant)

— Something on a personal level comes to fruition now. Be careful to use your good humor and wit without malice or sarcasm. Be especially careful not to become involved in anything not strictly "above board."

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21 — Also Sagittarius Ascendant) — As you enter the "final stretch" toward goal fulfillment, remain calm and relaxed. Listen to and utilize the advice and support of a mate or partner. Answer wisely a question posed very unexpectedly.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19 — Also Capricorn Ascendant) — A business trip is possible now. Reworking advertising, written materials for submission to publishers is favored. Be philosophical and positive about criticism, instead of taking offense and overreacting.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18 — Also Aquarius Ascendant) — Matters connected with long-range goals, writing and publishing, communications of all kinds are emphasized now. Inner philosophical search is favored. Watch the money out-flow, curb extravagance.

PISCES: (Feb. 19 to March 20 — Also Pisces Ascendant) — Friends and associates are a source of support and you can "fall back" a little to rest and recoup energies. If there has been past dishonesty with a loved one it could come to light now. Curb extravagance.

Lynn Redgrave warm, restrained

By JOANNE B. ROMINE
Copley News Service

Lynn Redgrave — actress. Lynn's writing reveals her to be a complex mixture of a variety of conflicting characteristics. There is a natural tendency to be warm, spontaneous, loving and sympathetic. A desire to reach out and share with others.

Yet, on the other hand, she is restrained by the influences of her upbringing, which insists on self-discipline, poise, reserve, and the aloofness that goes hand in hand with what older generations would call tradition and good breeding.

Lynn finds security in following the dictates of her childhood training. As a result, she will usually exhibit natural poise and dignity. She finds opportunity for emotional expression in her work as an actress. In this way she can reach out and to some extent, satisfy her need to share and communicate with others.

However, in private life, she is a difficult lady to get close to. She is highly selective of her friends, and close, intimate relationships will be few.

Though not always apparent, there is a bit of the rebel in Lynn's personality. She is a most independent little lady, with a strong desire to break free from convention and restrictions of any kind.

Usually the desire to defy convention, to rebel against social custom, is dealt with and controlled mentally. However, there will be occasions when a surge of independence is so strong it will break through her barrier of reserve and surprise even those who know her well.

Lynn's writing also reveals her to be a sensitive person. She can be easily hurt by those who question her way of life, even though she may appear to be indifferent to the ideas and opinions of others.

She is blessed with an abundance of artistic, creative talent. She likes simplicity and directness. She is likely to be quite frank when she has something to say, but can be inscrutable if she wants to conceal her thoughts and feelings.

Inner conflicts serve to motivate her as an actress, as well as cause her to become restless and irritable. She is capable of cutting a person to the bone with sarcasm, once she has reached her level of tolerance.

In summing up, Miss Redgrave is a unique and interesting lady. She has taken the negative, disquieting forces within her and channeled them into a productive life. She will always be striving for excellence, and at the same time be underestimating her potential.

Drinking is very 'in' among U.S. adults

More Americans are drinking alcoholic beverages than ever before and a quarter of those who do say they sometimes drink to excess, according to a Gallup Poll. Among people 18 or more years of age, 68 per cent (or 95 million) say they drink.

In the highest income groups, the proportion of drinkers is now nearly 90 per cent. — CNS

Old And Young Pedestrian Victims

Last year almost 10,000 pedestrians were killed and some 150,000 injured. Of this tragic toll, more than half of the people killed were 4 years of age and under or 65 and over. In fact, the figure is precisely 62% of those injured were among the youngest and oldest members of our population.

The reasons for this are not too difficult to analyze but solutions are hard to come by. Here are a few guidelines which may help avoid potential death for our old and young pedestrians.

Avoid standing or walking on roads at night. If you must walk the road at night, walk on the left side facing the oncoming traffic and wear white - or better yet, reflective material, to make yourself highly visible to drivers.

If you're using an umbrella, hold it high enough so it doesn't block your vision. Cross only at intersections [40% of pedestrian deaths are jaywalkers].

Proceeds from Fair Day will benefit the American Field Service International Scholarship Fund.

Market Report

Green Tomatoes Just Hanging Around

If you're wondering how to get those green tomatoes into eating condition this week, you have lots of company, reports the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture [MDA] this week.

Home gardeners across the commonwealth, uniformly puzzled by tomatoes just hanging there on the vine, the same bright green, day after day, are trying every method they can think of to ripen the fruit. Windowsills are loaded with tomatoes, and they're not doing much, either.

The sudden change to cool, grey weather has stopped the growing process, says Guy Paris of the MDA Division of Markets, and the tomatoes are just as they were when the sun disappeared at the end of August.

Nothing you can do to the plant will help, says Paris. Tomatoes need warmth as well as sunlight, and the absence of both puts the plants into a kind of dormant state.

You can ripen green tomatoes indoors, but not on the windowsill, he says. When the sun shines on them through the glass, the tendency is to turn them yellow rather than full, bright red; indeed, they get sunburnt, and can actually rot before they ripen.

In any case, they must be mature for best success. You might as well try to ripen a tennis ball as a half-grown tomato.

Warmth, says Paris, rather than indoor sunlight, is the best cure. Put the mature tomatoes preferably some place like above your furnace, and spread them out so they do not touch each other. The steady warmth should do the trick. Test the process with a few of the largest tomatoes, then move ahead.

Of course, if you have several hundred green ones hanging on the vines, you may have a bit of trouble finding the indoor space at the right temperature. All you can do is pray for sunshine - soon; one sudden frost and your worries will be over for this season.

The weather change has, of course, cut shipments of commercial tomatoes, keeping the market strong. One market chain, however, is advertising vine-ripened tomatoes - probably from California - at bargain prices.

Over 200 In Seniors 'Nite Out'

More than 200 persons will participate in the eighth in a series of "Nites Out" for Nursing Home Patients tonight [Thursday] at the Bryan VFW Post Home.

Arrangements are being completed by a committee of Senior Citizens Club members and representatives from 10 nursing homes. The event will feature refreshments, entertainment and prizes.

Entertainment will be by "The Barretts". Refreshments will be provided and served by a committee of Senior Citizens. Prizes are also donated by the nursing homes and Senior Citizens Clubs. Transportation for the patients by ambulance, buses, taxis and private cars is arranged by the participating nursing homes.

Macs Make Debut

In good supply from Massachusetts farms this week are apples - first-of-the-season Macs are coming in well - and the fall squashes, buttercup, butternut, Des Moines and turban. The turban is pretty well matured right now, ready for squash pies and for cooking. It's the orange drum-shaped squash that looks like a pumpkin, growing up to a foot in diameter. It is marketed whole or in sections, and is fairly plentiful at roadside farm stands and produce counters.

Green cabbage is heavy this week, with prices down. Bell peppers, too, are very reasonable.

The pick-your-own apple season has begun in the Bay State. Watch for orchard ads in your local newspaper.

Food Stamps Available

The State Department of Public Welfare announces that food stamps can be purchased in Quincy at South Shore National Bank and Norfolk County Trust Co. and their branches.

The Massachusetts Food Stamp Program was initiated July 1, in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The program enables low, moderate and middle income households to buy more nutritious food by adding "bonus" coupons to their food-buying power.

Applications for the non-public assistance food program are available at the Quincy Welfare Service Office, 25 School St., and at the Quincy Community Action Organization Inc., 372 Granite St.

St. John's Mini Fair To Be Held Saturday

St. John's Parish will hold a Mini Fair Saturday from 8 p.m. to midnight on the church grounds.

This is a fund raising affair for Mass. Citizens For Life. There will be tables for food, breads and candy, Pro-Life, Crafts and White Elephant.

A feature will be square dancing Arnie Kanash and the "Gingham Swingers" with audience participation. Tickets are being sold by Bea Lindwall [773-6221] and Phyllis Ross [773-2213].

The parish picnic will be held Sunday, Sept. 29 at Pageant Field, Merrymount Park. There will be children's and adult's games, prizes, music and dancing. Parishioners are invited to pack a lunch. The picnic will be held from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

St. John's Women's Club To Open With Covered Dish Supper

The St. John's Women's Club will open its 1974-75 season with a covered dish supper at 6:30 p.m., Monday, Sept. 16 in St. John's School Hall.

After the supper a brief business meeting will be held, the Executive Board will be introduced and the 1974-75 program presented. "The Rhythm Dames" will provide entertainment.

New members will be welcomed by Mrs. Rita Connolly, president.

Other programs for the season will include:

A Christmas Bazaar Nov. 2, and a Jan. 20 wine-tasting party with Mrs. Maurice Randall as chairman. The Investiture Ceremony for the new Brownies and Girl Scouts will be Jan. 26 at 3 p.m. February will feature a Valentine's Dance.

The Girl Scout and Brownie Mother-Daughter Communion Supper will be March 9.

On March 31 Mrs. Grace Sasauone will entertain the club at a regular meeting with Handwriting Analysis. A Mystery Ride will be conducted on April 21.

The annual Field Day will be May 10 on the church grounds. The season will end June 10 with the annual banquet.

Purpose of the Women's Club is to promote the furtherance of the Girl Scout program within the parish and to provide financial support to the youth in various organizations such as the CYO, baseball and softball programs, the basketball program, Pre-Cana Conferences, hockey, Junior Renegades Drum and Bugle Corps. It also makes contributions to St. John's Parish.

Officers of the club in addition to Mrs. Connolly, are Mrs. Jean Hall, first vice-president; Mrs. Ruth O'Shea, second vice-president; Miss Louise Williams, recording secretary; Mrs. Marjorie Williams, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Norma Gacia, treasurer. Spiritual director is Rev. Joseph M. Connolly.

Mrs. Frances Lindsay is the Women's Club representative to the parish activities commission. The Advisory Board includes Mrs. Lola Randall, Mrs. Regina Fruzzetti and Mrs. Phyllis Buttner.

34 New Girls At Woodward

Thirty-four new girls entered Woodward School for Girls this week.

Twenty-one enrolled in the seventh grade and the other 13 are scattered among the five upper classes. The total enrollment of 83 is the highest since 1959, and marks an increase of 30 per cent over last year's student body.

New Quincy and Wollaston seventh graders include Jane Brouillard, Helaine Hajjar, Lorraine Hedberg, Denise Hogan, Judith King, Jeanne Masticola, Therese Morris, Nancy Neilson, Debbie Purnell, Sheila Ryan and Barbara Wynn.

At the annual pre-school cookout held last week Mrs. Eunice Gilford, principal, introduced the faculty, including new member, Mrs. Leonard Buck. A reading specialist, Mrs. Buck received her B.A. from the University of Pennsylvania and her M.E. from Boston University. Mrs. Buck returns to Woodward after a leave of absence in which she served as a reading supervisor in the Newton, school system.

Mrs. Gilford also announced Opening Week plans which include a trip to "Strawberry Bank" in Portsmouth, N.H. and initiation of new girls by seniors Friday.

Quincy Diet Workshop Plans Open Houses

The Quincy Diet Workshop announces it will hold Open Houses during the entire week of Sept. 16.

The public is invited to attend without obligation at the following locations:

Atlantic Memorial Congregational Church, 136 Sagamore St., Tuesday 7:30 p.m.; Quincy YMCA, 79 Coddington St., Wednesday 9:30 a.m. and 8 p.m.; Bethany Congregational Church, 18 Spear St., Thursday 7:30 p.m.

Because of the high holidays, Open House at Temple Adas Shalom will be announced at a later date.

A spokesman said that a leading national consumer publication recently gave The Diet Workshop the highest possible recommendation citing the fact that their groups give extra personal attention to each dieter. The Open Houses will provide the opportunity to see first hand why this method of losing weight has proved so helpful.

The liberal diet, nutritionally balanced by Dr. Morton B. Glenn of New York, Medical Advisor to The Diet Workshop, has been combined with optional exercises, low-calorie recipes for the whole family and the moral support of group participation.

Men, women and teenagers will be welcome to join at the conclusion of the Open House and at future meetings.

For those who would like to try some of the low-calorie foods that members enjoy, free recipes are available upon request by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to 118 Canton St., Randolph, MA 02368.

The Pardon: Cheating History

President Gerald Ford has done what he apparently believes is right in granting a full unconditional pardon to former President Richard Nixon.

It would seem he came to that decision after much soul searching and with a full, compassionate heart.

For Mr. Nixon it was a day to be grateful. And he was. In fact, he was so grateful that for the first time since the Watergate scandal began to seep up over Washington like the insides of a broken, stinking, septic tank, he even expressed his regret over his mistakes in allowing Watergate to become "a national tragedy".

Until he received the pardon, he hadn't admitted anything, really. But after he was safe, he was willing to say he was sorry.

But he still hasn't said he is guilty.

To those who feel Mr. Nixon has suffered enough, President Ford's action was the right thing to do.

But to those who feel the American people have the right to know the full story about Watergate, it was the wrong thing to do.

Frankly, we feel history is being cheated.

The American people do have the right to know just what went on during this shameful period. So do the generations to come.

Years from now, they'll be arguing over whether Mr. Nixon was innocent or guilty...really, was it so bad...after all, Mr. Nixon was never prosecuted, etc., etc.

But more important than that if the details were unveiled now in their true ugliness, it might keep a sordid situation like this from ever happening again.

The pardon also again raises the question: Do we have a double standard of justice for the mighty and the little guy?

If Mr. Nixon is pardoned, why shouldn't every one else either in jail or about to go to jail for their involvement in Watergate, be pardoned? Why not, while we're at it, pardon Spiro Agnew? And how about opening all the prison doors and letting everyone out?

We think President Ford's action was premature. There was still plenty of time to give Mr. Nixon a pardon after the facts were documented.

Mr. Nixon is still only admitting making mistakes in allowing Watergate to become "a national tragedy". He still hasn't admitted his part in plotting the coverup and pay-offs to keep witnesses quiet.

Ironically, President Ford in his announcement on the pardon said: "...If I am wrong ten angels, swearing I was right would make no difference..." Those very words were once used by Mr. Nixon.

President Ford's action was taken, he said to "firmly shut and seal this book". But it may not seal it. It may do just the opposite.

President Ford's action was a hasty one. And haste spawns speculation and nasty suspicion.

Already, for example, some people think Mr. Nixon must be ill and President Ford rushed the pardon because of that. Others, are more suspicious and can you blame them as they quite vividly remember a President—with an American flag pinned to his lapel—lying to them night after night on television that he was innocent of any wrongdoing in Watergate.

Suspicious enough to wonder if it wasn't part of a deal when Mr. Nixon picked Gerald Ford as his vice-president. Suspicious enough to wonder if he was selected with the condition he would pardon Mr. Nixon if the latter had to resign.

Thus, instead of "firmly shutting and sealing this book," the pardon may have opened it even wider with all kinds of new speculation and insinuations that we could have done without at this time. In the long run, the pardon could do much more harm than good. Instead of binding the nation's wounds, it may pour more salt into them.

There was time, unless Mr. Nixon indeed is ill, to grant the pardon to keep him out of jail if he were convicted. But he still has not admitted his guilt nor has he been found guilty.

Now, the true full story will never be learned.

Mr. Nixon got a good deal but history, we believe, has been cheated. So has posterity.

Sargent On Pardon:

'I'm Concerned'. . .

By HENRY BOSWORTH

"I'm concerned...it was important for the American people to know Richard Nixon's role in it."

That was Gov. Francis Sargent's reaction to President Gerald Ford's full pardon of the former president's Watergate involvement during a reception for Sargent Sunday night at the Monroe Rd. Quincy home of Ernest and Kay Montilio.

It was just a few hours after the news of the pardon had broke. And it was the topic of discussion for a good many of the more than 200 guests attending as they waited for the Governor to arrive.

Sargent, speaking to the crowd briefly from the steps of the Montilio home, did not really say flatly whether he agreed or disagreed with Ford's action.

He said he believed the President must have given it careful thought and that he obviously is trying to bind the nation's wounds and put Watergate behind.

But he may have said a lot as time goes on in those few words "it was important for the American people to know Richard Nixon's role in it."

Ford may have slammed the door on that forever.

Incidentally, the gathering at the Montilio home was a good cross-section of political figures including Republicans, Democrats and Independents.

Among those attending: Mayor Walter Hannon, Senator Arthur Tobin, former Mayor-Senator James McIntyre, Ward 3 Councillor John Lydon, Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets, Larry Antonelli, Guy Faiella, Anthony Losordo, John Flavin, Paul Marini, Agnes Costello, Hugo Fabrizio, to mention a few.

As someone remarked: "Quite an interesting and surprising group."

WOLLASTON'S John J. Sullivan Jr. gave up what looked like a budding political future some years back and there must have been times when he wondered if he did the right thing. But not now.

Sullivan was named administrative assistant to the Norfolk County Commissioners in 1968 at a salary of about $9,000. In 1971, his duties increased and so did his salary when the commissioner promoted him to executive assistant at $15,500.

Well, he's been promoted again by the Commissioners. Now his title is Director of County Operations. The job pays $18,000 and will go to $21,000 in seven steps.

The new post has increased duties and is the second such one established by a county. The first was in Essex County.

Sullivan is the son of Quincy School Committee member John J. Sullivan Sr., who is also a well known federal mediator.

Young Sullivan back in 1962 at age 21 ran as a Democrat for sheriff against Republican incumbent Charles Hedges and polled just shy of 100,000 votes.

You can't help wondering what he might have done if he decided to stay in the political arena.

SIX AND FORE! The Adams Heights Men's Club has another hole-in-one. John Smith came up with that golfer's delight the other day at Lost Brook, Norwood.

Smith, playing in the Men's Club Sunday Morning League, joined golfdom's elite by parking his hole-in-one on the 172-yard first hole using a 5-iron.

Other club members to recently perform the feat are Mario Berredinelli [Smith's cousin], Tom Farquhar, Don Mignosa and Dick McKenzie, Warren Bober.

MILESTONE: Relatives and friends will honor Dave and Roberta Crowley on their 40th wedding anniversary at a 4 p.m. reception Sunday at Humarock Lodge, Marshfield.

Dave, of course, is the former city councillor who fought for the working man and Roberta is now assistant city treasurer.

Whenever I think of Dave, I fondly recall the time in 1952 when we were aboard Adlai Stevenson's Presidential campaign train and arrived in Quincy.

Aboard the train were the likes of Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall and Robert Ryan and a number of political wheels.

Dave was running for Congress himself that year and as a city councillor, had the honor of introducing Stevenson to the crowd from the rear platform of the train.

And, he naturally introduced Stevenson as "the next President of the United States." He was wrong, of course. But there was a future President standing on the platform whom he also introduced: a young, not too well known Congressman named John F. Kennedy.

SPEAKING OF FORMER councillors, Carl Anderson, now a member of the Quincy City Hospital Board of Managers, has been a patient there a couple of times in recent months. But he's out now and looking as spry as he did when he used to like to raise a little hell on the council floor.

SMILE DEPT: Gov. Sargent, guest of honor at the reception given by Ernie Montilio Sunday night got a big laugh when he turned to his host and said: "Ernie, if I knew you were coming, I'd have baked a cake."

draw or put a few words together with a little imagination, you yourself could become part of Quincy's history and the winner of one [or two] of 48 prizes ranging from $10 to $300.

A panel of judges to select the winners will be announced soon. The contests officially open Oct. 3 and close Nov. 30, 1974. But you can get an early start now by trying out your drawing and word skills.

Mayor Walter J. Hannon and Rev. Graham, director of Quincy Heritage, hailed the Quincy Savings Bank-Quincy Sun co-sponsored project.

"What I like most about this contest is that it allows people of all ages and backgrounds to directly participate in the city's unique heritage," said Hannon.

"All too often citizens can only read about city programs as they unfold; rarely do they become involved dramatically in bringing them about. The extent to which the community becomes involved in Quincy Heritage will, in large measure, determine its success."

Rev. Graham characterized the contest as "symbolic of our major effort to stimulate citizen participation in Quincy Heritage's programs."

"We at the Quincy Savings Bank are pleased to join in partnership with Quincy Heritage and the Quincy Sun, to co-sponsor these two contests that will set the tone for celebrating Quincy's 350th birthday," said Pearce.

"Even though there are many cash prizes to be awarded, I feel certain that a large number of citizens would still want to participate because of long standing ties and loyalties they have for Quincy."

"It is a privilege to be associated with The Quincy Savings Bank and Quincy Heritage in this worthy civic project," said Bosworth.

"We are proud of Quincy's rich historic past and we have the utmost faith in its present and its future and possibilities. That is why we founded The Quincy Sun six years ago this month and why we carry with pride the name Quincy in our banner."

For each contest there is a $300 first prize, a $100 second prize, a $50 third prize, four $25 prizes and 20 $10 prizes.

Forty-eight prizes in all: two $300, two $100, two $50, eight $25 and 40 $10.

The rules are simple:

- You must be a resident of the city of Quincy.
- Poster size is 11 inches wide by 17 inches deep, drawn in pen with black ink.
- Slogan must be eight words or less.
- Contests are open to all ages.
- You may enter either or both contests.
- All entries become the property of Quincy Heritage.
- Decision of the judges is final.

Posters publicizing the contest are now on display at The Quincy Savings Bank, main and branch offices, and at The Quincy Sun office. They are also being distributed to Quincy business firms and schools.

Contest entry blanks are attached to the posters. All you have to do is peel one of the blanks off, fill it out and submit it with your poster or slogan entry. There is no entry fee or any other financial obligations. The entry blank will also appear in each issue of The Quincy Sun until the contest is over.

Entries may be submitted in person at The Quincy Savings Bank main or branch offices and at The Quincy Sun office or by mailing to:

The Quincy Savings Bank, Box 349, Quincy, Mass. 02169. The Quincy Sun, 1601 Hancock St., Quincy, Mass. 02169.

Employees of The Quincy Savings Bank, The Quincy Sun and Quincy Heritage and members of their immediate families are not eligible to enter either contest.

New Year 5735

Local Jewry Prepare For Rosh Hashana, Yom Kippur

By LESTER H. GLASSER

Most of us take it for granted that New Year's Day comes on the first of January when it is cold and wintry.

We also are quite sure that it never starts until midnight, and that it is a day of gay and carefree rejoicing. As a matter of fact, though, New Year's Day throughout history has been celebrated at different times of the year and day, and in different fashions.

Jewish children, with their fellow Americans, celebrate Jan. 1 as the national legal New Year's holiday, but they still observe Rosh Hashana as their religious New Year just as the Bible tells them to [Leviticus 23:24; Numbers 29:1].

This year Rosh Hashana, which starts Sept. 16, will mark the Jewish New Year 5735. In Hebrew it means "first of the year", comes in the autumn and begins, not at midnight, but at sunset of the day before [just as, for example, Christmas begins with sunset of the holy day itself. Rosh Hashana is one of the two most important Jewish religious holidays called the "High Holidays" or sometimes "The Days of Awe"].

The other high holiday is Yom Kippur, the "Day of Atonement" which comes 10 days after Rosh Hashana, and this year will start Sept. 25. According to Jewish tradition, Rosh Hashana is the day on which God judges the deeds of every man.

There is an old Jewish legend which says that on Rosh Hashana, there are three books placed before the heavenly judges. One of the books is quite thin. In it are written the names of all of the completely wicked people of the world. These very wicked people are immediately condemned on Rosh Hashana to a year of trouble and unhappiness. Another book, which is even thinner, contains the names of those who are completely good. These people are given a year of peace and happiness. But by far the largest and thickest of the books is the one in which are written the names of those plain ordinary people who are neither wholly good nor wholly bad. What happens to these people, says the ancient story is decided by the sincerity of their repentance and the way they act during the 10 days which begin on Rosh Hashana and end with Yom Kippur.

Of course this is only a legend, but it is true that on Rosh Hashana Jewish people do resolve to live better lives and do pray for forgiveness and year of peace and happiness for all the world.

Many people in Orthodox and Conservative synagogues, celebrate Rosh Hashana for two days in accordance with ancient tradition. Others in Reform synagogues, observe the holiday for only one day.

Following is the schedule of the High Holy Day Services at the three synagogues in Quincy.

At Beth Israel Synagogue, 33 Grafton St., Quincy Point, services will be conducted by Rabbi Jacob Mann Monday and Tuesday evening, Sept. 16-17 at 7 with afternoon services at 6:30. Morning services, Sept. 17-18 will be at 8. Shofar is sounded, both days in the morning.

The Yom Kippur Kol Nidrei service will be Wednesday, Sept. 25 at 6:15 p.m. and on Thursday Sept. 26, there will be an all day worship, starting at 8 a.m.

At Congregation Adas Shalom, 435 Adams St., Quincy, services will be conducted by Interim Rabbi Samuel Kenner and Cantor Tevele Ring, Monday evening, Sept. 16 at 8 there will be a family service. On Tuesday morning, Sept. 17 at 9 and Wednesday morning Sept. 18 at 9 there will be regular services. Evening services both days at 6. A Yom Kippur Kol Nidre service will be held Wednesday Sept. 25 at 6:30 p.m.

On Thursday, Sept. 26 an all day service will start at 9 a.m., with memorial service [Yizkor] at 10 a.m.

At Temple Beth El, 1001 Hancock St., Quincy, services will be conducted by Rabbi David J. Jacobs and Cantor Morris Semigran.

Monday evening, Sept. 16 will start at 8. Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 17-18 there will be services at 8:30 a.m. with the sounding of the Shofar at 10:30 a.m. An evening service will be at 6:30 p.m. A Yom Kippur Kol Nidrei service at 6 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 26, an all day service will start at 8:30 a.m., with memorial services [Yizkor] at 10:45. The concluding service will be at 7 p.m., with the sounding of the Shofar.

Miss Alice Trickett, a member of the Leaders' Team from the District Methodist Women will discuss the possibility of developing a program that will be of interest to women.

Chapel Services Resume At Bethany

Chapel services at Bethany Congregational Church will be resumed Sunday at 9 a.m.

Rev. John D. Banks, pastor, announces that while the early service omits the musical program and a few other parts of the later service at 10 a.m., it is designed for church school workers and those who prefer the early service.

A Family Service at 10 a.m. will celebrate the beginning of the Church School and the return to the usual Sunday program of worship. Rev. Mr. Banks, will speak on "I Wonder As I Wander" based on Psalm 77:11 and John 5:20-21. After the service in the Allen Parlor the Fellowship Hour will be observed with coffee and cookies being served.

The Christian Education Committee and the Church School staff will begin weekly meetings for Bible study, discussion, and prayer at the second parsonage, 34 Ridgeway Drive, Sept. 25, at 8 p.m.

God's Power Christian Science Lecture

God's power can "change for the better any human situation," Horacio Omar Rivas, C.S., will emphasize in a free public lecture in Milton Sept. 20.

"The power of God, the healing power of infinite good, is capable of restoring health and morals to any person through spiritual means alone," Mr. Rivas will say. "The infinite power of God is available to all."

A native of Buenos Aires, Argentina, Mr. Rivas will speak in the Milton Woman's Club, 90 Reedsdale Rd, Milton at 8 p.m. under the auspices of First Church of Christ, Scientist, Quincy. William B. Ellington,

HORACIO RIVAS

First Reader, will introduce the lecturer.

Mr. Rivas studied economics at the University of Buenos Aires and was in business there at one time. In 1967 he went to Boston, as a translator for the Translation Department of The Christian Science Publishing Society. A year later he went into the healing ministry of Christian Science.

In his lecture, entitled "The Power of God", he will show insights about healing through wholly spiritual means.

A member of The Christian Science Board of Lectureship, he is one of some 30 Christian Science lecturers who give more than 4,000 talks and lectures each year on six continents.

Ministry Sunday At Adams Shore

Ministry Sunday will be observed at the Adams Shore Community Church Sunday at the 9:30 a.m. service. Rev. Kenneth L. Miner, pastor, will speak on "Time To Harvest".

Rally Sunday will be observed Sunday, Sept. 29 at 9:30 a.m. with a Continental breakfast to be served. Bibles will be presented to the Sunday School students and promotions will be announced.

An all church supper will be held Wednesday, Sept. 18, to open the season. Rev. Mr. Miner will lead devotions and there will be a "singspiration".

Wollaston Baptist Communion Service

Sunday the Church School of the Wollaston Baptist Church will meet at 9:45 a.m.

At 11 a.m. the morning worship service will be conducted by the pastor, Rev. Charles L. McEachern. There will be Communion.

The Junior Choir and the Youth Choir rehearsals will start Tuesday with the Primary Choir rehearsal starting Sunday, Sept. 22. The inter-church training session for the Finance Campaign will start Friday, Sept. 20, at 7:45 p.m. in Fellowship Hall.

Lesson-Sermon

First Church of Christ, Scientist, 20 Greenleaf St., Quincy will hear a Lesson-Sermon on the subject of "SUBSTANCE" Sunday.

Follow The Rules

School Safety Requires Cooperation

By GUIDO PETTINELLI
 Quincy Schools Safety Officer

To be blessed with a school year free of accidents and mishaps, the entire city of Quincy must cooperate - the School Department, the Police Department, motorists, parents and children.

In Quincy we have almost 20,000 students ranging from pre-kindergarten to college age. Many of them will be crossing main streets and crowded intersections where the Quincy Police Department has 44 women traffic supervisors working fulltime and one traffic supervisor helping parttime.

Eight police officers spaced throughout the city also monitor traffic for the protection of the youngsters. We are also assisted by an estimated 1,000 pupils serving on the School Safety Patrol.

To make the many traveled miles of pedestrian traffic safer, youngsters should follow these rules:

- Always walk on the sidewalk.
- Cross only at corners, look both ways before crossing.
- Use a crosswalk whenever possible.
- Don't cross from behind parked cars.
- When crossing at a traffic light, wait for the light to change and wait for the traffic to stop before crossing.
- Obey your school traffic supervisor and patrol.
- Watch for turning cars.
- Never dart out onto the street.
- Walk defensively - be especially alert for careless drivers.

There are also important safety rules for youngsters traveling to and from school by bus. They are:

TRAFFIC SUPERVISOR Claire Speranzo crosses pupils of the new Lincoln-Hancock School at Water St. She is one of 45 women traffic supervisors guarding school crosswalks in Quincy.

- Wait for the bus in an orderly line.
- When boarding or leaving the bus, walk - don't run.
- Stay quietly in your seats.
- Save snacks and homework for later.
- Place books and bundles where they cannot slide or fall.
- Keep arms and legs out of - aisles.

- Your head, arms and bundles are safest inside the bus.
- Don't talk to the bus driver except in emergencies.
- Don't open windows without permission.
- Remember that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

School No Place For Dogs

Dogs prowling around schoolyards, sniffing near bicycle racks and yapping outside school windows are a nuisance and a menace to young school children.

Stray dogs can frighten, nip or bother youngsters playing on school grounds and can distract them from their schoolwork by barking outside.

The Quincy Police Department warns dog owners to keep their pets at home.

Parents Should Set Good Safety Example

Children learn by imitation. Parents, then, should set a good example for their children by understanding and obeying traffic regulations and safety rules.

A parent's disregard of such safety rules can chisel away at the positive efforts of others working for a child's safety. The following tips, practiced by parents, can contribute to a child's safety:

- Follow safety rules when a pedestrian.
- Teach your child the danger of talking with strangers and of accepting rides from strangers.
- Be observant and courteous while driving.
- Be extremely watchful near school zones.
- Treat other children as you would want others to treat your child.

Mayor Hannon Proclaims League Of Women Voters Week

Mayor Walter J. Hannon has proclaimed this week Quincy League of Women Voters Week in recognition of the League's service to the community.

In issuing his proclamation, Hannon said:

"For 50 years, the League of Women Voters has helped its members and other citizens to become aware of the problems of government and to gather facts in order to form their opinions. It is appropriate that we commend the League of Women Voters for its active efforts on behalf of the citizens of Quincy."

The League, now open to men as well as women, is a non-partisan organization which encourages informed and active citizen participation in government and politics.

Locally, the Quincy League has sponsored voter service programs including voter information, registration drives and candidate nights. The League has also conducted a survey of the individualized learning process in Quincy Schools.

An Observer Corps of the League regularly attends city council and school committee meetings and it is preparing a booklet which lists the time and place of all city board meetings.

The League is also undertaking studies of land use and health care in the city.

Mrs. Janet Poole of 125 Winthrop Ave., Wollaston, is the League's president and Mrs. Agnes Cooney of 40 Cushing Ave., Wollaston, is membership chairman. Anyone over age 18 who is interested in good government can join the League.

$16 Million United Way Campaign Now Underway

Over 50,000 volunteers, including many Quincy residents, are participating in the annual campaign of United Way of Massachusetts Bay which has a $16,000,000 goal. The campaign opened Sunday, and continues until Nov. 19.

Atty. Terry Flukes of Quincy, assistant clerk of Norfolk Superior Court, who headed the Quincy division last year, which went over the top and won the community cup for outstanding work, is chairman of the south division this year. This division includes Quincy and 20 surrounding towns.

Atty. Betsy Leebos, also of Quincy, who chaired the Quincy professional drive last year, is Quincy division chairman.

A GROUP OF Wollaston senior citizens enjoyed a recent cruise of Boston Harbor as guests of Boston Gas, which hosts the tours throughout the summer for senior citizens and youths from non-profit organizations. Among those participating in the hour-long excursion were, from left, Mary Hale, Annabelle Chisholm, and Martha Syme. The group was from Wollaston Neighbors, a senior citizens unit sponsored by the Wollaston Church of the Nazarene.

7 New Faculty Members At Eastern Nazarene College

Seven new faculty members have joined Eastern Nazarene College announces Academic Dean Dr. Donald L. Young.

Dr. William E. McCumber, formerly a member of the faculty of Point Loma Nazarene College, San Diego, Calif., has been appointed Professor of Religion and Chairman of the Department of Religion.

Dr. Charles R. Gailey, former principal of the Nazarene Bible College, Siteki, Switzerland, has accepted the position of Professor of Sociology and Chairman of the Department of Sociology and Social Work. Dr. Gailey is a 1958 graduate of ENC and was previously a member of the faculty in 1960-1964, and 1969-1970.

Joining the faculty in Mathematics as Associate Professor is Sheldon O. Sickler of Culver City, Calif. He has been awarded the National Science Foundation Faculty Fellowship and has served as teaching assistant and, most recently, as a lecturer in the Department of Mathematics at UCLA.

Carl A. Winderl of Mount Prospect, Ill., will be an Instructor in English at ENC.

Donald P. Macedo of Scituate, has been appointed as instructor in Spanish for 1974-75.

Mrs. Esther Truesdale will be a Lecturer in Education this fall at ENC.

A recent graduate of ENC, Miss Rayelenn Sparks, has been named a lecturer in Freshman English for the coming school year. After receiving her B.A. in English and Psychology, magna cum laude, in 1973, Miss Sparks spent last summer with Wycliffe Translators in an intensive summer institute of Linguistics at Gordon College. She will teach two sections of Freshman Composition while she does graduate work at Simmons College.

Central, Atlantic Students In WBZ-TV Program

Eight former Elementary Laboratory students, now seventh graders at Central and Atlantic Junior High Schools, participated in the WBZ program, "For Kids Only".

The program will be taped on Friday for airing Saturday at 7 a.m. and Sunday at 10:30 a.m.

Steven Sweet, Julia Stasio, Robert Howlett and Kristin Williams will interview Commissioner of Education Gregory Anrig and a member of the New England Patriots.

Michael Linehan, Ellen Berenson, Michael Ricciuti and

Karen Buhler will serve as alternates.

After the taping session, the students will tour the studio. They will be accompanied by Quincy's two Elementary Laboratory teachers, Lorraine Sholler and Gerald Butler.

Stephen Hennessy In Philippines Exercise

Navyman Stephen J. Hennessy, husband of the former Miss Patricia A. Desmond of 151 Marlboro St., Wollaston, participated in exercise "Pagasa III", on the island of Panay in the Republic of the Philippines, as a crewmember aboard the dock landing ship USS Monticello.

The joint U.S.-Philippine exercise involved 14 ships, 120 aircraft and 10,550 Navymen and Marines.

The ten-day exercise provided essential training to ensure the operational readiness of the participating forces, primarily in the area of amphibious operations.

A 1971 graduate of North Quincy High School, he joined the Navy in October 1972.

$40,338 Grant Awarded To Continue RSVP Program

The Quincy Council on Aging has been awarded $40,338 by ACTION to continue the South Shore RSVP for a second year announces Executive Director Putnam S. Borden.

South Shore RSVP [Retired Senior Volunteer Program], is federally funded and designed to place senior citizen volunteers, 60 or over, in municipal and non-profit agencies requiring their services.

The program, presently operating in Quincy, Weymouth and Braintree is headed by Winfred L. Pulsifer, director and Robert F. Tweedy, assistant director.

Since January 1974, the program has grown rapidly, in response to the dual needs of the elderly participants and the community service agencies. As of July, volunteer enrollment reached 115 and total volunteer hours, since January, approached 6,500 at the 31 participating agencies.

Volunteers have filled a variety of necessary continuing roles such as; a cook at the Girl's Halfway House, a bookbinder at the Public Library, crafts instructors in schools, as well as involvement in the Bicentennial program, the Chamber of Commerce, Quincy District Court, the YMCA and the South Shore Mental Health Center.

In addition, teams of older volunteers have undertaken group projects such as assisting with mailings for the recently held Job Fair and preparing kits for the Muscular Dystrophy drive.

A newly initiated phase of the program involves establishment of a Friendly Visiting group. These people will contact by telephone and in person, the disabled elderly in the three communities.

The program has also been asked to expand operations into surrounding towns. A feasibility study involving the towns of Randolph, Avon, Canton, Stoughton, and Milton is now being conducted by the RSVP staff.

Applications For Early Childhood Center

Stewart S. Sargent, Title I administrator in Quincy Public Schools, is now accepting applications for 1975 admission into the Early Childhood Education Center at St. John's School.

A child eligible for enrollment must attain his fourth birthday during the calendar year 1974 and must live in the area served by Title I schools - Snug Harbor, Lincoln-Hancock, T. B. Pollard and Daniel Webster.

This program, for which there is no fee, is designed for pre-kindergarten children who will be entering kindergarten in September, 1975. Transportation to and from the center will be provided.

Applications must be returned to one of the above-mentioned schools no later than Sept. 13, 1974.

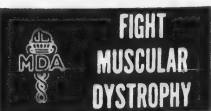

Applications may be obtained at the following locations: St. John's School, Southwest Community Center, Germantown Service-Center, J. F. Kennedy Health Center and the four elementary schools listed.

St. Ann's Seniors To Hear Win Bettinson

St. Ann's Senior Citizen Club will hold its bi-monthly meeting, Monday, Sept. 16 at 1 p.m. in St. Ann's Youth Center, St. Ann's Road, Wollaston.

Plans will be completed for an overnight foliage trip.

Win Bettinson of WJDA will speak on Quincy Heritage and show films. Refreshments will be served.

Quincy Makes Suburban Debut

Quincy's soccer team won the Norfolk Association championship the last three years, losing only one game, but Coach Ronnie Martin is not at all optimistic as the Presidents make their debut in the Suburban League.

Quincy played its first game in the new league Tuesday at Waltham and they started with only two veterans. A year ago the Presidents had nine veterans to start off with.

Last year Quincy tied B.C. High for the Norfolk title with a 10-13 record following sole championships the previous two years with 12-0 and 10-0-2 marks. Before losing to B.C. High, 2-0, late last year, Quincy had been unbeaten in 36 straight league games.

"We are really young and inexperienced this year," Martin said. "I will be starting a sophomore in goal and we will have a number of juniors in the lineup. The boys have a lot of desire, however, and I think we will give a good account of ourselves but certainly I'm not predicting another championship."

Like North Quincy Coach Lou Ioanilli, Martin doesn't expect the competition in the Suburban League to be much better than that in the Norfolk Association. "The schools are bigger but such schools as Franklin and Foxboro, which benefit from good summer programs, have really come along fast," Ron said.

Mike Kennedy, last year's Sterling Junior High goalie, will be the Quincy starter with junior Joe McCarthy as backup man.

Martin expected to start a lineup of Kennedy in goal, juniors Scott Simpson and Tom Connolly and senior Tim Kane fullbacks, seniors Mark Ramondi and Mario DiCenzo, the lone veterans, and senior Scott DeMarco halfbacks, and forwards Joe McEachern, Pete Keenan, Ken Donovan and Glen Slagher, all juniors.

Others expected to play varsity ball are senior Henry Pakkala and juniors Emido Michaelangelo and Sal Leone.

Martin had about 50 candidates turn out, many of whom played junior varsity ball last year, and those not making the varsity will play with Charlie McLaughlin's jayvees this fall.

Quincy hosts Rindge Tech Friday and Monday plays at Weymouth South.

Raiders' Defense Looks Strong

By TOM SULLIVAN

North Quincy's football teams have been noted for their strong defense and it appears this year's squad will fit into the same mold.

"Right now I'd have to say the defense is far ahead of the offense, but that is usually the way it is at this time of year," Coach Ralph Frazier pointed out last week as the Raiders prepared for their non-league opener against Milton Sept. 21.

The defensive coaches, Dick Meyer and Ken McPhee, expressed themselves as satisfied with the progress and agreed the secondary in particular is strong and experienced.

North has six defensive players who saw a good deal of service in 1973, led by Tri-Captains Paul O'Donnell, an end, and Bruce Shea, who had a brilliant 1973 season at defensive halfback.

The other veterans are End Tom Callahan, Linebacker Dennis McGuire, Halfback Steve Lothrop and Safety Jack Hatfield.

Although Frazier admitted there could be some changes before the opener, the most likely defensive starting team has O'Donnell and Callahan ends, Jack Gallagher, 6-2 and 225 pounds, and Billy Pitts, 6-4 and 220, tackles; McGuire and Steve Wentzell or Pat Connolly linebacks, Frank Strazula and Chris Morton cornermen, Lothrop and Shea halfbacks and Hatfield safety.

Backing up this group are Rich Joyce and Brian Doherty ends, Bruce Hall and Alf McHugh tackles, Mike Nee and John McKenna linebacks, Al Kelleher or Mike Riggins and Ralph Crevier cornermen, Joe Wilkinson and Mark Donaghue halfbacks and Paul McGuigan safety.

Others due to see plenty of action on defense are halfback Jerry Baldeck and linebacker Bob McCullough.

"We have good experience on defense and Chris Morton in particular looks awfully good," Meyer said. "The ends are experienced as are our linebacks and the secondary. Our main problem is depth."

"If the two big tackles, Gallagher and Pitts, come through as we hope they will, we should be all right," McPhee added. "McGuire is small but is an excellent player."

"Wentzell looks good as a linebacker as does Connolly, who is coming off an injury. All in all, the defense looks very promising with good size, speed and experience."

Frazier is pleased with the Raiders' progress following scrimmages with Catholic Memorial, Walpole and Norwood and feels the Raiders will be ready when they renew an old rivalry with Milton, a team North has not faced in several years.

He also is confident that North will give a good account of itself when it makes its bow in the strong Suburban League. Its first Suburban League game will be Oct. 5 against Weymouth North at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Squantum Tennis Tourney Starts Friday

The Third annual Squantum Invitational Tennis Tournament will get under way Friday at 3 p.m. at Faxon Park. Play will continue Saturday morning starting at 8 and the finals will be played on Sunday at 1:30.

Director Lawrence Courtney announces that there will be 64 players in the men's singles and 30 teams in doubles competition. The tourney is for men only.

"Since many of the best young local players will be participating, we hope that many tennis enthusiasts will come out to watch and support the tourney," said Courtney, who is being assisted by Mark McGuinness.

Presidents Building Strong Defense

From all indications, when Quincy's football team opens its season Sept. 21 and makes its Suburban League debut Oct. 12, it will feature another tough defense.

Following scrimmages with Boston Tech and Somerville, Head Coach Hank Conroy and Bud Mosher, who handles the defensive linemen, expressed their satisfaction with the defense.

"We have good size up front and the depth is starting to show," Mosher said. "I just hope we scrimmage a team which runs a good option play because we need work against this type of offense."

The only returning defensive starters are Jake Columbus, a 220-pound tackle, and Doug King, 195-pound end. However, several other players on defense saw considerable service last year.

They include Mike McKenzie at halfback and John Riggs, a good-sized line backer.

Rich Hennessey and Frankie Guest will play in the secondary and are looking good.

Jim Grimmer, a 250-pound defensive tackle, like Columbus, will probably play both ways. In fact several of the Presidents may go both ways.

Jerry Durante and Dave Gosselin are fine inside men and Mark Wysocki looks good at defensive end.

Steve Coleman, a 225-pound defensive tackle, is another who may play both ways and other good looking linemen include Bob Carrella, Bob Varraso, Paul DeCristofaro and Bud Hawkins.

Riggs, Paul Coletti and Paul Coner are strong line backers, and Tony Cedrone, Paul Ferris, Joe Megnia, Steve Silva, Ted Wiedemann, Glen Menchi and Tony DiRico are others who look good and will see a good deal of service on defense.

"Our offense has been coming along well but right now I'd have to say the defense is our strong point," Conroy said. "However, the offense is always ahead of the defense at this point and I think we move the ball all right."

Incidentally, Guest, the top sophomore in the Greater Boston League, and Wiedemann, then a junior, were among Quincy's standout hockey players last year. Wiedemann has been one of the school's top jemen for two years.

Before the Presidents make their bow in the Suburban League Oct. 12 against Waltham, they will play three non-league games against Dedham, Weymouth South and Revere.

'Y' Indian Guides Program Begins

William Johnson, associate men and boys director of the Quincy YMCA announces the beginning of a new father-son program this month called "Y" Indian Guides.

A national father-son program, "Y" Indian Guides is sponsored by each local YMCA.

Fathers and sons [aged six to eight] participate in story-telling, handicrafts, camping and other activities as "big and little braves" within small units known as Tribes. Tribal meetings are held in rotation in the homes of the braves.

For further information, call the YMCA [479-8500].

YMCA Volleyball Program

Quincy YMCA is now offering volleyball at both recreational and competitive levels.

James Rendle, assistant physical director at the "Y", announces that men as well as women can join competitive volleyball teams.

Men can try out for one of two teams: Massachusetts Bay Volleyball League or USVBA Region on tour. Tryouts begin Wednesday, Sept. 19 from 8-10:30 p.m.

North Makes Bow In Suburban League

North Quincy's soccer team made its bow in the Suburban League Tuesday when it played Weymouth South but, despite the larger schools, Coach Lou Ioanilli expects the competition to be similar to that in the Norfolk Association.

"I know the schools are much larger than those in the Norfolk Association, but coaches who have played teams in both leagues told me they don't feel the Suburban League is that much stronger," Ioanilli said. "Brockton is always strong and Newton also has a strong team, but I feel we can give a good account of ourselves."

North has scrimmaged Somerville twice and B.C. High and the Raider coach was pleased with what he saw.

North will play at Cambridge Latin Friday and will host Brockton Monday at Montclair Field. The Raiders, who have usually played a 14-game schedule, will play 18 games, all in their new league, this fall.

Ioanilli, whose team had an 8-5-1 record a year ago, had a fine turnout of 55 with about 23 staying with the varsity and the rest playing with Rich O'Brien's junior varsity squad.

North has only five players with varsity experience and, strangely enough, they do not include the co-captains, Fullback Bill Donovan and Halfback Bob Mewis, who excelled with the jayvees last year. Two of the veterans are goalies, Ken O'Sullivan and Gary Nankin, who shared the duties in goal a year ago.

The only other varsity returnees are Halfback Dave Nesti and Forwards Walter Melton and Pete Donovan.

Ioanilli has a number of seniors including Bill Donovan and Mewis, Nesti, Melton, O'Sullivan, Nankin, Fullback Tim Clifford, Halfback Danny Finn, Fullback Ron Colon, Halfback Steve Brown, Forward John Penella, Forward John Mackey and Forward Ralph Richards.

Juniors are Pete Donovan, Fullbacks Dave Adams, Jack Brown and John Lawson, Forwards Kevin O'Neil, Steve Cronin and Bill Wildes and Halfbacks Jim Maibach and Ed Coutts.

Two sophomores who are expected to stay with the varsity are Jim McGinley, a probable starter at fullback, and Forward John Dolbec.

"We will be depending heavily upon graduates of last year's junior varsity squad, which did a fine job under Rich O'Brien," Ioanilli said. "I wish we had more time to practice, but all schools are in the same boat. I would have been happy to see the schedule open a week later."

●Quincy Youth Hockey Greens Mite Champs

The Green team won the Mite House championship last week when it defeated the Reds, 5-0, to break a first place tie on the final day of the summer league.

The Greens finished with a 7-2-2 record and the Reds with a 6-3-2 mark.

Bobby McCabe had two goals, John O'Connor, Bob Forman and Mark Walsh one apiece. O'Connor, McCabe, Steve White, Jim Seamans and Mark McManus had assists.

The Whites topped the Yellows, 6-3, with Mark Chambers having two goals and Steve White, Bill Heeney, Kevin Zanardelli and Brian Chase one each, with Chase and Jim Daley having three assists each and Chambers one. For the Yellows Paul Marshall scored twice and Jim Milano once. Marshall, Bobby Kane and Chris Hurley had assists.

The Orange team defeated the Blues, 4-2.

.....And Bantam, Too

The Greens captured the Bantam House League championship with an 8-2-1 record and finished up last week with a 3-1 win over the Reds.

The Yellows defeated the Whites, 6-3. Bobby Hayes had the hat trick, Tommy Brennan two goals and Billy Deitsch one, while Deitsch had three assists, Bob Molloy two, Brennan and Hayes one apiece. Paul McDermott, Mike Pitts and Mike Collins had the White goals with Don Perdios and Jackie Quigg having assists.

The Oranges rolled over the Blues, 9-2, sparked by Mike Storer's hat trick. John Newcomb had two goals, Leo Doyle, Howard Chadbourne, Pat Bamberg and Mike Noone one apiece. Kevin McGrath had four assists, Storer and John Cotter two each, Bamberg, Doyle, Bobby Brennan and Danny Gorman one apiece. Mike Bondarick and Mike Van Tassel had the Blue goals and Steve Colman an assist.

Blues Win Crown In Pee Wee Loop

The Blues walked away with the Pee Wee House League championship as they ate up the Oranges, 5-2, to finish with a 10-1-1 record. The Yellows finished second with a 7-4-1 mark.

Freddie Palmer had two goals for the Blues and Rich McCarthy, Tommy Mullen and Mark Boussy one apiece. Mullen had two assists, John Lyons, Palmer, Boussy and Mark Veasey one each. Brian Sullivan and Joey Rathgeb had the Orange goals with Steve Shoemaker having an assist.

The Yellows finished up strong by breezing past the Whites, 10-1. Bobby Bolster and Steve Walsh came up with four goals apiece, Mike Ferreira and Mike Doherty had the others. Doherty and Ferreira had two assists apiece, Walsh, Bolster, Tony Chiochio and Kevin Coyman one each. Paul Melia had the White goal with Mike Barry assisting.

The Reds walloped the Greens, 8-3. Robbie Craig and Robbie Zanardelli each had the hat trick and Kevin Craig and Ed Doherty had the other goals. Zanardelli also had four assists, Robbie Craig three, John Coleman two, Kevin Craig and Gerry Redmond one each. P. T. Kelly was outstanding in goal. Paul Dunphy had all three Green goals with Chuckie Marshall having three assists and Paul McGrath two.

Junior Baseball Tryouts

Tryouts will be held Saturday for the Quincy's Junior Baseball League.

Boys who are 13 and 14 years of age will report to Merrymount Field and those boys who have reached their 9th and 10th birthdays will report to the Southern Artery Field. Announcement was made by Commissioner Robert T. Woodman.

Reds, Greens Share Squirt Championship

The Squirt House League wound up with co-champions, the Greens topping the Reds, 6-1, last week to tie the Reds for first place. Each team finished with an 8-2-1 record.

Mike Marshall had the hat trick for the winners, Kevin Craig had two goals and Tommy Murphy the other. Craig had four assists, Marshall and Murphy three apiece and Billy Gray one.

The Whites walloped the Yellows, 8-2, with John O'Connell and Bobby Ready having two goals each. Keith Blaney, Brian Mock, Mike O'Hare and Paul McCabe had a goal apiece. McCabe had three assists and Blaney, Rich Milano, Rick Reardon, Ready and O'Hare one each. Yellow goals were scored by Tommy Schofield and Mike Cullen with Schofield having an assist.

Whites Midget Champs

The Whites took the Midget House League crown by edging the Reds, 4-3. The White team finished with a 6-2-1 record.

Dave Previte, Jim Connolly, Tom Bamberg and Bud Campbell had the White goals and Dave Peters, Pat Cummings and Dan Maurano had assists. For the Reds Dennis Berton had two goals and John Kelly one. Ed MacDonald, Dennis Doherty and Rich DiPietro had assists.

The Greens skinned the Oranges, 6-4 with Joe Carty exploding for four goals. Ed Martin and Mark Kelly had one goal apiece, Rich Troy and Bob Carmody each had two assists, Ed Laracy and Carty one apiece. For the Orange team Jack Powers, Bill Morrison, Jim Constat and Dick Carnali had the goals and Jim Connolly and Rick Bowe assists.

YMCA Women's Volleyball Tryouts Sept. 17

The Quincy YMCA women's volleyball season will get under way in December and tryouts for the teams which will play in Mass. Bay League competition will begin Sept. 17 and run to Oct. 22, when the teams will be selected by the coaches.

It is hoped there will be enough interest shown to enter two Quincy teams in the league this year.

There will be about six weeks of practice before the league opens in December and runs until March.

Gym hours for evening volleyball are Tuesdays from 8:15 to 10:30 p.m.

Membership in the Quincy Y is required and anyone interested in playing volleyball is welcome to try out. Further information can be obtained by calling the Y office at 479-8500.

Koch Club Seniors To Bowl Friday

The Koch Club Seniors Bowling League will bowl Friday at 4:45 p.m. at the Wollaston Boulevard Bowladrome.

They will not meet on Saturday mornings at 9:30 a.m. as they have in the past.

Survival, Inc. To Take Part In Drug March

Survival Inc, the Quincy based youth and drug program serving the South Shore, will take part in the 1974 March to Prevent Drug Abuse sponsored by the Boston Mayor's Coordinating Council on Drug Abuse.

The march, which begins at 9 Sunday, Sept. 22, will benefit Boston area drug programs. Each program will have its own marchers who obtain sponsors to pay them for each mile they walk. The money they earn then goes back to their particular program.

Survival is hoping for a large turnout of marchers. "Our program has expanded, increasing our need for funds," explained Executive Director Robert Hassey. "The more marchers we have, the more funds we raise. We need volunteers to march, and we also need sponsors from the community to back these marchers. So if people feel they can't march, they can still help."

Anyone wishing to participate may obtain information at Survival's office, 725 Southern Artery, Quincy, or by calling 773-5704.

Lincoln— Hancock School Dedication Planned In Fall

An open house scheduled for the fall will mark the official dedication of the Lincoln-Hancock Community School in South Quincy.

School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon said a firm date will be announced later.

The three-level elementary school opened its doors last September, replacing two other Quincy Schools: the Hancock School, the city's oldest built in 1886 and the Lincoln School, the city's third oldest school built in 1892.

Approximately 550 children attend the Lincoln-Hancock Community School which cost a total of $5 million to construct, including the taking of land and land development. The school by itself cost $3.5 million to build.

'A Disgrace Out There'

Dr. Mahoney Blames Sewage Plants For Bay Pollution

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

"It's a disgrace out there."

That was Dr. Alfred Mahoney's candid description of Quincy Bay as he prepared to meet yesterday (Wednesday) with Sabin Lord, head of the state's department of water pollution and local officials.

The meeting was to take place in the City Council chambers at 2 p.m.

Dr. Mahoney called the meeting not only to pinpoint the cause of the bay's pollution but also to find a solution to the problem. He said:

"You can go out in a boat in Quincy Bay any day and you'll see raw sewerage, cans, bottles and lumber floating in the water. It's a disgrace out there."

Dr. Mahoney has labeled the problem a state and not a city problem. "I know it isn't Quincy" [polluting the Bay], he said. "We must force the state to cure the problem."

Dr. Mahoney charged that the sewage plants in Quincy Bay - Moon Island, operated by the city of Boston, and Nut Island, operated by the MDC - are "inadequate" sewage facilities. Calling both the city of Boston and the MDC "stumbling blocks" in the solution to the problem, Mahoney said:

"If they can be made to put up more sewage plants to chlorinate, the problem could be alleviated. It's a crime to let Quincy Bay be polluted."

The city council's Environmental Committee, headed by Councillor Dennis Harrington, was also to attend the Wednesday meeting.

In addition, Dr. Mahoney invited to the meeting South Shore area state representatives as well as delegates from area health centers.

"To solve this problem," Dr. Mahoney said, "we need a coordinated effort from all the towns in the involved area."

MPA To Conduct Airplane Noise Survey Here

Mass. Port Authority will conduct a noise survey in those Quincy neighborhoods plagued by low-flying aircraft.

The announcement came in response to a query by Rep.

Thomas Brownell [D-Quincy] whose constituents had complained to him about the noisy planes.

Edward King, executive director of Mass. Port Authority, told Brownell the results of the survey will be discussed with the Federal Aviation Administration Air Controllers at Logan who supervise flight operations. King said:

"We will cooperate with the FAA and do our utmost to alleviate, within safety rules, any flights that are unnecessarily noisy."

King said he doubted that planes had been flying over Quincy at lower altitudes during the summer months.

He did note, however, that a runway was under "repair and rehabilitation" during the summer, resulting in "a higher volume of operations on other runways, including those that are approached over Quincy."

8p.m. Public Meeting

South Quincy MBTA Project Report Tonight

The first public workshop in connection with an environmental analysis of the proposed MBTA station-highway project in the South Quincy area will be held tonight [Thursday] at 8 p.m., at the Lincoln-Hancock School, 300 Granite St., South Quincy.

The workshop is open to all who are interested in the South Quincy area station proposal which also includes parking facilities and new access ramps from Route 3.

It is possible the expressway ramps would also connect with a proposed new arterial street [Upland Rd. Extension], currently being studied by the City of Quincy between Quincy Center and Route 3.

An additional transit station at South Braintree would also be accessible from Route 3 to serve Braintree and communities to the south and east. Future plans call for possible extensions of the rapid transit line beyond Braintree to Hingham, Weymouth, Holbrook, Brockton or Plymouth.

472-2467

A special telephone line will be installed Tuesday, Oct. 1 in the offices of the consultants for citizens' questions and suggestions on the South Quincy environmental analysis.

The number is 472-2467. The line will be open between 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays.

The environmental analysis, required by federal and state environmental laws, is being conducted by the Massachusetts

Indictments Undecided

Cemetery Probe

Complete By Sept. 30

Special Investigator J. Blake Thaxter expects to complete his probe of alleged Quincy cemetery department irregularities "by the end of the month."

The former assistant district attorney from Cohasset said it was still too early, however, to determine what he will do about seeking possible indictments.

"I haven't decided that yet," he told The Quincy Sun. "I am still interviewing people."

Thaxter estimates he will probably have talked with "40 to 50 people" before the investigation has been completed. He is now interviewing witnesses at the Quincy police station.

Thaxter, who is being assisted by Quincy police detectives, was assigned as special investigator by Dist. Atty. George G. Burke in June. He was nominated by the Norfolk County Bar Association after Quincy-Braintree Atty. Edward H. Libertine declined the assignment.

Thaxter has complete charge of the investigation and if he decides to seek indictments, he will present the evidence to a Norfolk County grand jury. He would then prosecute the case in Superior Court.

The investigation which includes the re-sale of graves, and other alleged irregularities, was touched off after the resignation of Cemetery Supt. Anthony Famigletti early this year.

$1,500 In Prizes

You Can Enter Heritage Contests As Often As You Like

Your chances of winning one of the 48 prizes totalling $1,500 in the Quincy Savings Bank - Quincy Sun co-sponsored Quincy Heritage poster and slogan contests are even greater than you may think.

They are greater because you can enter either or both contests-as many times as you wish.

Theme of the contests is: "Quincy's Pride: Patriots, Presidents, Possibilities".

For each contest there is a $300 first prize, a $100 second prize, a $50 third prize, four $25 prizes and 20 $10 prizes.

Forty-eight prizes in all: two $300, two $100, two $50, eight $25 and 40 $10.

You may submit as many poster or slogan entries as your talent for drawing or putting words together permits. It's up to you.

But each entry has to be accompanied by an entry blank now available at The Quincy Savings Bank main and branch offices, all Quincy public schools, City Hall, The Quincy Sun and Quincy Heritage offices.

The forms are also being placed at business firms in the city.

The entry forms are also being published in The Quincy Sun and may be used for submitting entries.

The winning poster and slogan will become part of Quincy's celebration of its own 350th

'Situation Scandalous'

Heavy Pollution Could Make Quincy Bay 'Dead Harbor'

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

Ward 6 Councillor Dennis Harrington, chairman of the City Council's Environmental committee, has warned that Quincy Bay will become "a dead harbor" if action is not taken to curb the Bay's present heavy pollution.

Recent water samples show levels of pollution as high as a coliform count of 24,000. The safe level is a count of 1,000 or under.

"There is a pollution problem in Quincy Bay. There's no question about it," said Harrington.

Harrington, Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly and other Quincy and South Shore officials last week toured the Nut Island pumping station which operates under a system of primary treatment.

Primary treatment is a retention system which settles out 50 per cent of the sewerage and then chlorinates the material before sending it out to sea.

Harrington, however, feels that the Nut Island station should be operating under secondary treatment, a process which settles out approximately 90 per cent of the solids. He said:

"Primary treatment will never suffice. Quincy Bay will become a dead harbor."

During last Wednesday's open hearing on the subject of pollution in Quincy Bay, Kelly charged that one-third of the Nut Island plant was non-operational and that replacement parts for certain mechanisms were unavailable.

However, Allison Hayes, director and chief engineer of the city's sewage division, countered that the plant need not perform at its capacity in order to handle the daily amount of sewage. He said, in fact, that the plant was producing a 99 per cent bacteria kill.

The Environmental Committee disagrees. Harrington said, "It would seem that the plant could produce better

Sun Starts 7th Year-- Thanks To You!

The Quincy Sun begins its seventh year today.

The Sun was established in September, 1968 as "Quincy's Own Weekly Newspaper".

It was our intent then for The Sun to be a community oriented newspaper concentrating on Quincy news and Quincy people.

We said back then we would let the dailies, TV and radio take care of the news of the rest of the world. Our purpose was to present to Quincy comprehensive coverage of Quincy news.

And that is still our purpose today.

We now have, of course, the Copley News Service and other features. And we will be adding more as time goes on.

But we will faithfully remain a Quincy oriented newspaper. That's not only our purpose, but our job, and we intend to carry it out to the best of our ability.

We have expanded local coverage considerably since we started. Today, there is more Quincy news, sports, photos, features in The Sun than any other newspaper. That's a fact.

And there will be more and more in the months ahead.

The Quincy Sun is a paid circulation newspaper published Thursdays by The Quincy Sun Publishing Company, 1601 Hancock St., in downtown Quincy.

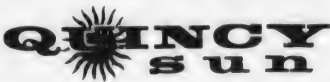

The Sun is still only 10 cents a copy at newsstands or by carrier boy or girl. Yearly mail subscriptions are $4 inside Massachusetts and $5 outside the state.

As we begin our seventh year, we want to sincerely thank you--our readers and advertisers--for your support and encouragement these past six years. You are as much a part of The Sun as we, the staff.

Without you, we wouldn't be here.

Sheets Seeks Report On Badger's Quarry

City Councillor James A. Sheets presented a resolve at Monday's City Council meeting calling for a report from Mayor Walter J. Hannon and City Solicitor Richard McCormick on the status of Badger's Quarry.

Sheets said that the abandoned quarry hole:

- Continues to be used by youths as a swimming area.
- Several deaths and injuries have occurred over the years.
- Rescue attempts of victims place firefighters and police in danger.

- Youths using the quarry hole have been trespassing and using private residential property.

- Parking on Willard St. has created traffic hazards.

- Youths using the quarry have stoned automobiles both on the Southeast Expressway and Willard St. thus creating a hazard.

The resolve cites the fact that Badger's Quarry is privately owned and calls for a report to be filed within three weeks with the appropriate city agencies.

Council Meeting Monday On Germantown Landtaking

Leo Kelly, chairman of the City Council's Public Works Committee, has requested an open council meeting Monday for the taking of a $7,000 parcel of Germantown land.

The Council will convene at 7:15 p.m. to vote on the taking of a five parcel, seven acre site on Lind St., Germantown owned by E. A. Weedn Morton and Nils Bjork Larson.

According to Kelly, the area would be used for park and conservation purposes.

treatment if the full plant were in operation."

The councillor noted, too, that the retention period during which solid wastes settle has been cut in half, from 90 minutes to 45 minutes.

City officials and council members also took water samples during their tour of Quincy Bay and Nut Island. Kelly reported that six of the eight samples taken in Quincy Bay were above the coliform count of 1,000 deemed safe for bathing. Two counts registered 15,000, one 24,000 and another 1,200.

Harrington noted that the low count at the outfall closest to the Nut Island plant itself indicated that sufficient chlorination was taking place there. Kelly added that the build up of what he called "sludge" on the bottom of the outfalls might require new discharge locations.

He continued, "Taking into account both what we have seen during the boat trip and the counts which were taken, I'd say the situation is scandalous and frightening to future generations."

Harrington suggested four short-range steps to ease the pollution of Quincy Bay: a longer retention period of sewerage at Nut Island, the daily testing of the quality of the effluent at outfall release points, the prior notification of the health commissioner in the event of the MDC's emergency dumping of raw sewerage, and the checking of the actual amount of sewerage to evaluate whether a discharge was "reasonable".

Harrington added that his committee would continue to conduct open hearings and to test the water of Quincy Bay. He asked:

"How long can Quincy Bay continue to accept 300 million gallons of sewerage a day - sewerage only primarily treated? How long can Quincy Bay be the only dumping point for sewerage? The sludge build-up on the ocean floor has certainly killed parts of Quincy Bay already."

Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA) and the Massachusetts Department of Public Works (MDPW), under sponsorship of the U.S. Department of Transportation's Urban Mass Transportation Administration and Federal Highway Administration.

Consultant for the study is the planning-engineering firm of Parsons, Brinckerhoff, Quade & Douglas.

The analysis will predict the impacts of the proposed facility on both the physical and social environments in the area. Several alternatives to the proposal will also be studied. Among specific items to be analyzed are traffic, water resources, air and noise pollution, economics, community resources, natural systems, and engineering considerations.

Purpose of the workshop is to provide for an exchange of information between the planners and engineers conducting the study and the communities that would be affected by the transit project.

Representatives of the MBTA, MDPW, and the planning-engineering firm will be present to explain the project and environmental analysis and to answer questions from the audience.

Several additional public workshops will be scheduled before the study ends in late January. These later workshops will review the progress and findings of the environmental analysis and discuss in more detail some of the alternatives being considered. A public hearing on the project is expected to be held in February.

Throughout the study, citizen participation will be encouraged. In addition to the workshops, a transportation study committee will be established to represent diverse points of view in the community and region. The committee will meet on a regular basis to provide liaison between the study team and community.

A newsletter will also be published to furnish information on the environmental analysis. Anyone interested in receiving the newsletter may write to: South Quincy Area Study, PBQ&D, 711 Boylston St., Boston 02116.

Helping Hands

Quincy Youth Commission Puts Accent On Finding Jobs

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

Quincy Youth Commission, dedicated to helping youngsters help themselves, has developed seven distinct programs during the commission's first year of operation.

According to William Connolly, 26-year-old youth coordinator of the commission, the Program emphasizes employment for youth. Four of the seven programs deal with job-getting.

A pragmatic philosophy underlies this focus on employment. Connolly noted that the main reason for pick-pocketing, shoplifting, purse-snatching and breaking and entering is the lack of employment - or more simply, the lack of money.

A job, part-time or fulltime, would not only put money in a youth's pocket; it would also give the individual a feeling of worth and responsibility.

The commission operates on a $42,000 budget. The state's Department of Youth Services contributes $32,000 while the city of Quincy provides $10,000.

One work-oriented program is a pilot project with Quincy's Neighborhood Youth Corps. Youth aged 14 to 18, who come from a one-parent family, who are bordering on delinquency or who are experiencing difficulties in school, are exposed to a structured work experience within a non-profit organization.

Connolly said that approximately 65 youth have been placed during the year. Before entering the program, many youth had contemplated quitting school, he said. Yet after joining the project, many decided to continue their education.

A second work program, "Job Bank", is geared for older teenagers.

Under the program, the commission places youth with private employers who pay only half of the youth's salary for three months. The commission pays the other half of the salary.

Connolly said, "After three months, the youth has developed expertise and would no longer be a liability but an asset to the employer."

The third work project, geared towards junior highschoolers, is catchily and cleverly called "Rent-A-Kid". According to the renting rules, citizens can call the Commission asking for a youngster who will babysit, iron, rake or mow the lawn, shovel, house clean or perform myriad other tasks.

Connolly said that over 150 applicants are on file while 75 to 80 kids have been placed in jobs. Some have even landed two or three jobs, Connolly added.

The fourth job-oriented program seeks to place youth in private, fulltime employment. Unlike "Job Bank", this program offers no compensation from Quincy Youth Commission.

Connolly emphasized that youth can remain in these work programs only without jeopardizing their scholastic achievement.

The other three programs are not job-oriented. One is a "Big Brother, Big Sister", a recently-launched program which has thus far made seven matches. Mrs. Phyllis Rudnick coordinates this program.

Big brothers and big sisters are asked to make a one year commitment, spending two hours with a little brother or sister once a week. Connolly said that mature volunteers as young as juniors and seniors in high school are sometimes accepted.

Another program, "Group Home For Girls", is geared towards housing and counseling girls experiencing temporary problems at home. The program focuses on re-integrating girls into their family environments.

Sister Rita McCarthy and Sister Marie Connolly of the Sisters of St. Joseph operate the three-story home on Hancock St., which houses six to eight girls. Since the opening of the home six months ago, six girls have been reunited with their families.

The girls are asked to donate five dollars a week during their stay at the home. Connolly noted that a girl's stay can range from two weeks to several months.

The facility offers a wise and safe alternative to running away from home. Classes are offered not only in academic subjects but in sewing and make-up as well.

The sisters contact a girl's parents and speak to them alone before meeting jointly with parent and daughter. Unless home conditions are intolerable, the program aims at the reunion of parents and child.

The final commission project began only last month. Under a contract with the South Shore Mental Health Center, Quincy Youth Commission is allotted three hours of consultation time every month. These hours can be used for any purpose and by any person involved in the commission's programs.

Last spring a 20-member advisory board to the Youth Commission was formed. The board consists of five high school students, five people under 35 and 10 people over 35. Representing a cross-section of Quincy, these 20 people will submit program suggestions to the Commission throughout the

Chairing the Quincy Youth Commission is John Mahoney, social-health coordinator for Quincy Public Schools. Other members of the commission are: Dr. Carol Griffin, head of pupil personnel in Quincy Public Schools; Sgt. Daniel Lyons, head of the Juvenile Division of the Quincy Police Department; William Ryan, Quincy recreation director; Richard Venna, chief probation officer at Quincy District Court; William Connolly, youth coordinator; Thomas Hughes, member of the drug education unit of the district attorney's office in Dedham; Robert Fitzpatrick, equipment installation foreman with the New England Telephone Company and an active member in the Quincy Youth Hockey program.

Quincy Youth Commission, located on 37 Washington St., in Quincy Square, is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The telephone number is 479-3942.

STRICTLY PERSONAL

Mom opposes braless look

By PAT and MARILYN DAVIS

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
I am 38 years old and not bad looking. I am still trim and young enough to wear youthful styles, but tastefully. My daughter is 17 and she has a wonderful figure. Clothes look great on her but she spoils the entire effect by not wearing a bra. Many of her friends also go braless and it ruins the appearance of the outfit. I cannot understand why they do this. Am I obsolete at 38? Is my idea of good taste crazy? My daughter says that I should live with the dinosaurs. Aside from the obvious, this braless craze must be unhealthy. What would you do?

Cave Woman

Dear Cave Woman:
Move over, I'll join you in the cave. The braless look will pass. In the meantime, if a 17-year-old wants to dress in that manner, you can't stop her. The most you can do is to suggest that she buy carefully. Some blouses and dresses can be worn without a brassiere and still look very nice. Good luck, Mom, you are probably in a boat with about a million other parents.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

My grandmother lives with us. She is a wonderful person, and I enjoy our talks together but lately I began to think that she is psychic. She commented on a boy that only I knew and told me that he had a dangerous job. He is a policeman. Then she told me that I better not go on a vacation because she felt airplanes were dangerous. No one knew that I was considering a vacation except the travel agency. They had sent me some literature.

Well, last night I caught her going through my room. Why on earth would she do this? She is not senile and she has always seemed to know a great deal about my activities. I guess that her snooping has been going on for years. How can I handle this situation? She is not going to stop and I love her and do not want to hurt her.

Cathy

Dear Cathy:

If you feel that Grandma would not benefit from a frank discussion, keep your letters in a place where she will not find them. If necessary, lock them up.

Today's Women

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY

pear shape key to success?

By ANN RUDY
Copley News Service

From London comes word that pear-shaped men are most likely to become world leaders.

John Byrne, writing in the Director magazine, said this shape — also known as the burgundy bottle look — was the key to success in business and politics.

John Byrne even went so far as to say, "there is the beginning of a new sort of management game which could be developed indefinitely." He suggests that people's shapes could well be taken into account when they applied for jobs.

I don't know how the rest of you women feel, but I suspect John boy's theory may be a subtle attempt to undermine the new demand for women in key business and political positions.

I mean, I'll apply for any job I think I'm qualified for and fight toe to toe with either sex to maintain my position, once gained. But I'll be darned if I'll admit to being pear-shaped. A little top-heavy, yes, but pear-shaped, no.

Can you imagine a job interview with a personnel manager who scanned your resume only to fling it aside to scrutinize your figure? If John Byrne hadn't extolled the pear-shaped man, a lot of us could have come through such an examination with flying colors. But after all our liquid lunches, leg-lifts and magic-finger girdles, it is too late for most of us to make it as a burgundy bottle. We are slim and attractive and we can't help it.

Why should any woman be denied equal job opportunity because of the shape of her skin? Byrne cites Napoleon and Charles de Gaulle as prime examples of pear-shaped success. Maybe so, but I've seen a lot of pear-shaped winos too.

John Byrne, be honest, if you were sick and in the hospital, would you tell the guys at the office about the terrific pear-shaped nurse who rubbed your back every night? I didn't think so.

And you probably wouldn't vote for her if she were running for parliament, either.

Don't pull that pear-shaped jazz on us, John, just get going on your leg-lifts. One, two, ...

ARIES: (March 21 to April 19 — Also Aries Ascendant) — Catch up on work already in progress — take care of routine matters. Be willing to compromise with disagreeing associates. Legal affairs, contracts are emphasized and dealings with competitors. Be calm.

TAURUS: (April 20 to May 20 — Also Taurus Ascendant) — You need the cooperative help of others to complete a project so be diplomatic, careful and compromising. A short trip for business purposes is possible. Be realistic and practical — don't deceive yourself.

GEMINI: (May 21 to June 20 — Also Gemini Ascendant) — You can make a fair decision now on a matter pending for some time. Perhaps the opinion of one more experienced in these matters would be helpful. Get involved in public enterprises and organizational work.

CANCER: (June 21 to July 22 — Also Cancer Ascendant) — Take control of your thoughts. Don't waste time day dreaming or reliving events in the past. Make plans — set goals. Relationships with mate or partner may be upsetting. Avoid open argument — watch and wait.

LEO: (July 23 to August 22 — Also Leo Ascendant) — Communications are emphasized now. Pull together the "loose ends" of a project or piece of work. Attend to details, plans, on your own. A domestic problem requires a final decision. Talk it over with friend.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22 — Also Virgo Ascendant) — This is a favorable time to form a business partnership — devote time and effort to business details. Romantic troubles are possible which may have financial overtones. Be philosophical about it. Guard health.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22 — Also Libra Ascendant) — Emphasis is on mate or partnerships. The unmarried may choose now to take the plunge. Give time and attention to creative projects. You could meet someone now who will eventually be a partner in business.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21 — Also Scorpio Ascendant) — The social pace subsides and you can take time to do some "inner self" evaluation and investigation. Study philosophy in the light of your own past experiences. Get home base in order — redecorate and beautify.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21 — Also Sagittarius Ascendant) — Your work seems to be "on the line" for evaluation. You'll soon be reaping the results of past efforts. Emotional frustration can be relieved through friendships. Curb resentment toward superiors.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19 — Also Capricorn Ascendant) — Home activity is apparent with remodeling and redecorating a probability. Be alert for opportunities in career world. Approach those in authority for positive results. Past efforts will now pay off handsomely.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18 — Also Aquarius Ascendant) — Be practical and realistic. Don't fall for schemes and deals that promise the moon. Don't gamble. Good time for launching advertising, promotion programs or publishing. Women appear helpful to you.

PISCES: (Feb. 19 to March 20 — Also Pisces Ascendant) — Curb critical attitudes toward partner or romantic interest. Emphasis is on partnership, money, inheritances, gifts. Good time to put your thoughts on paper — write and communicate your intuitive understandings.

Penny biting her fingernails

By NANCY ANDERSON
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Penny Marshall is biting her fingernails and tearing her hair (literally), but she's gotten through a month — "a trying period," she calls it — without her psychiatrist.

"He's been out of town," she explains, speaking of the analyst.

Penny, wife of "All in the Family," costar Rob Reiner, is a regular on the new CBS series "Friends and Lovers" a girl with more kinks (some lovable) than a hippie's hair.

"I started going to an analyst three years ago," she says, "because I was going a little crazy. And I was driving Rob crazy."

"I couldn't understand why he married me. I was afraid people were nice to me only because of Rob or because of my brother (Garry Marshall, a television writer-producer). Finally Rob said, 'You don't stand still with your problems. You go somewhere with them.'"

"He suggested I go to an analyst. So I did. At first I went to his, but that didn't work very well, so I got one of my own."

Penny and Rob were born across the street from each other in the Bronx and lived face-to-face for seven years. But they only met in Hollywood.

Penny went to the University of New Mexico where she became a recreation major, married a football player, bore a daughter, now 10, and got a divorce.

In 1967 she came to Los Angeles where she found even reader acceptance than she'd been accorded by the Albuquerque theatrical set. And she also found Rob.

"He knew my brother, and

we sort of crossed a lot," Penny relates. "But we didn't get together right away, because he was very crazy then. He was going through an identity crisis at 21."

"Finally, though I knew I was in love with Rob."

"We lived together for a year and a half, and then we got married because we both come from families in which people marry."

"We would have married sooner than we did, but 'All in the Family' interfered, so we waited for the hiatus. We did the hip thing, and then we did the conventional thing."

Penny says her worst habit, aside from occasionally jerking her hair out by the roots and biting her finger nails "just a little bit," is smoking.

"Rob doesn't smoke," she reports, "so on the stroke of midnight, Jan. 1, 1970, I put out my cigarette and said I was quitting. After I gained 11 pounds in a week, Rob asked me to start smoking again. 'I don't drink; though I've been trying to drink wine, because I consider that an adult thing.'"

"My favorite drink is a half glass of milk mixed with a half glass of Pepsi. I'm a real drag at parties."

Food cost is rising faster outside U.S.

Food prices are going up faster outside the United States, a United Nations study indicates.

Of 17 countries studied, the U.S. ranked 13th in food price increases between 1963 and 1972. American food prices went up 35 per cent compared with Denmark's 61 per cent, the hardest-hit country. — CNS

There are dozens of cures for hiccups

There are dozens of folk cures for hiccups. Some of them may be worse than the disease, though.

People afflicted with hiccups have, among other things, been advised to eat a teaspoon of applesauce three times a minute; drink a glass of water while someone blocks their ears; drink vinegar or lemon juice by the teaspoonful or make a pilgrimage to Lourdes. — CNS

Car Is Not A Plaything

There are several tragic reasons why youngsters should not be allowed to play in or around unoccupied cars. Here are three:

A three-year old girl, playing in a station wagon with the automatic window controls, put her head out the window and pressed the button that raised it. She choked to death.

A little boy removed the gasoline cap on a car parked in a driveway. Later, while playing under the car, he struck two stones together, creating a spark that set off an explosion. He was disfigured by burns over his entire body.

A little girl released the brake on a car parked on a sloping driveway. It rolled across the street and struck a curb. She was thrown out the door and fell under the wheels where she was crushed.

You can prevent most of these tragedies by insuring that your parked car is always locked, especially in the driveway.

Market Report

It's Apple Picking Time, Stock Up Now If You Can

If you like apples and have the facilities to keep them properly, now is the time to lay in a good supply.

That's the word from the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture [MDA] this week, as the Bay State harvest approaches its peak.

As apple picking continues here through mid-October, prices remain steady and somewhat lower than they must be as fresh supplies dwindle. Much of the crop goes into controlled atmosphere storage that puts the apples to sleep for several months. The added costs in facilities and labor surely increase the price of late winter and spring apples.

The New England apple crop, the MDA reports, is forecast at 7.2 million 42-pound units - some 29 percent over last year - despite a spring frost that caused dolorous predictions in mid-state. Actually lost were about 20,000 units, considerably less than originally forecast.

With the constant shortage of labor to get the crop in - even shorter this year as the U.S. Dept. of Labor restricts importation of foreign workers - more and more growers turn to "pick-your-own", inviting the public into the orchards to select their own apples right off the trees. You can take the biggest, reddest, juiciest McIntosh you can find at the going rate of about 20 cents a pound right now, a considerable saving over the counter price. This "bargain", however, is not so great if you bring more apples home than you can properly keep.

Until the weather turns cool, fresh apples must be promptly refrigerated. Lacking refrigerator space for more than a bag or two, one can bake pies like mad...and freeze them. One doesn't freeze fresh apples. Later into the fall, as the temperature gets into the 50's, you can store them on a back porch or in the garage, without artificial refrigeration.

Pick-your-own has become an annual fall recreation for many families, having reached the point where many growers depend on the public to bring in a good proportion of the crop. But putting several thousand people into an orchard in a single day has brought headaches, too.

Despite continued warnings, people insist upon climbing apple trees which don't require climbing, knocking down more apples than they can pick up, breaking branches, and generally damaging the trees.

Often, rather than picking one apple at a time, as a good picker does, they will shake the tree to see how many hundred apples will fall to the ground...and then leave them there to rot.

Families are invited to picnic in the orchards...and then they leave their litter behind.

On a Sunday afternoon last fall, one couple was found in flagrante delicto under a tree, their apple bags empty beside them. Apples can turn people on in different ways, apparently.

At least one mid-state grower plans this year to put uniformed police into his orchards to enforce his reasonable requests. The development is unfortunate, but the public can be inconsiderate. It takes six years of hard work to grow a bearing apple tree...and five minutes to destroy it.

Mary Reardon Mural Exhibit At Main Library

Throughout September, Miss Mary Reardon of Hingham is displaying her working drawings and other material used in the creation of two ceiling murals for the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington, D.C.

The exhibit is at the Thomas Crane Main Library, Quincy Center.

The two dome-shaped ceilings are each made of pieces of colored glass or baked gold and measure 84 by 30 feet. Together they required three years of studio work by Miss Reardon and six assistants.

Golden and colorful, the two ceilings are "Creation" and "Last Judgement".

"Creation" displays the six Biblical days of God's creation and includes elements of present-day science.

"Last Judgement" is "The Second Coming", an 18-foot figure of Christ, in clouds of glory, reaching out to receive figures rising through a golden sky.

The artist, Miss Reardon, is a graduate of Radcliffe College and Yale School of Fine Arts.

She is a Boston painter whose work is represented widely, particularly in Boston.

Among her works are the new lobby murals at St. Elizabeth's Hospital and the large chapel fresco in Bishop Petersen Hall, St. John's Seminary. Her studio is located on 30 Ipswich St., Boston.

Dinner Dance Sept. 28 To Climax QYC 100th Anniversary Celebration

The Quincy Yacht Club will climax its 100th anniversary celebration with a dinner dance Saturday, Sept. 28, at the George F. Bryan VFW Post, Quincy.

Cocktails will be served from 6:30 to 7:30 with dinner and dancing following immediately. All friends of yachting and the public are invited.

The famous Quincy Challenge Cup, third oldest in the nation was raced for, off the waters of the Houghs Neck Clubhouse this July and was won by Robert O'Connor of the Boston Yacht Club of Marblehead.

This trophy will be presented to the winner by C. Willis Garey, Quincy Yacht Club's Honorary Anniversary Chairman. The cup now in its 76th year of challenge has had over 21 different yacht clubs hoist their glasses in a martini toast as a winner. The Boston Club will keep the cup in its locker for the third time.

Also being presented to the Grogan Brothers of the Quincy Yacht Club is the Amos L. Merritt Trophy which was won by their Thunderbird Class Yacht, Leprechaun.

Invited guests expected are Governor Francis Sargent and Mayor Walter J. Hannon.

Thomas S. Burgin former Mayor of Quincy and past commodore of the Quincy Yacht Club will trace the history of the Yacht Club and serve as toastmaster for the anniversary dinner.

Flag officers of the club Commodore Bernard E. McCourt, Vice-Commodore Richard K. Patten, Rear-Commodore Robert Larsen, Secretary Albert R.

Jackson, Treasurer William E. Hughes, Chairman Robert Schuerch and Honorary Chairman C. Willis Garey of the anniversary committee will be on hand to greet members and friends of the Quincy Yacht Club.

Tickets are available between 7 and 9 p.m. at the Quincy Yacht Club everyday.

Seniors Club At St. John's

Quincy's 23rd Senior Citizens Club will hold its organizational meeting Tuesday, Sept. 24 at 1:30 p.m. in St. John's Rectory Social Hall.

Mrs. Marion Andrews Director, Senior Citizens Activities, Quincy Recreation Dept. announces plans for the new club were outlined at a recent meeting with Rev. John J. Tierney, pastor of St. John's Church and Mrs. Paul Ricca, a member of the Parish Council.

The non-sectarian club will be open to senior citizens 60 years old or over who live within the boundary of St. John's Church.

Mrs. Andrews will preside at the meeting when a name will be selected, a slate of officers named and a by-laws committee appointed.

North Quincy High Public Hearing Set For Oct. 17

The City Council will hold a public hearing Oct. 17 on the new $8.2 million North Quincy High School proposed at Squantum.

The hearing will be at 7:30 p.m. in the Quincy Vocational Technical School auditorium. The date was set Monday night following a discussion between Mayor Walter Hannon, School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon and council members.

Forty-three acres of land for the school and more acres of surrounding wet land at the old Squantum Naval Air Station can be obtained by the city at an estimated $1.8 million.

Land for needed roads into the school site would be deeded to the city for just $1.

Mayor Hannon Monday night introduced an order into the council to acquire the needed land by eminent domain. It was referred to the Finance Committee to await the public hearing on the landtaking.

The accreditation of North Quincy High School may depend on a new school, according to school officials. The present school has a two-year probationary accreditation. The school has had over-crowding problems for the past decade.

The new school would represent between $3.07 and $3.47 on the tax rate for the first year of a 20-year bond and that amount would then decrease over the remaining 19 years.

It would take an estimated three to five years to build the school.

Most residents attending three public meetings earlier this year, favored the Squantum site over other alternatives.

Lawrence Gray NQHS Merit Scholarship Semi-finalist

Lawrence A. Gray, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold H. Gray of 16 Flynt St., has been named North Quincy High School's semifinalist in competition for approximately 3,400 Merit Scholarships to be awarded in 1975.

Merit Program Semifinalists were the highest scorers in each state on the 1973 Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test, administered to over one million students in 17,000 schools nationwide.

Semifinalists must qualify as finalists to advance in the competition for Merit Scholarships. Every finalist competes for one of the National Merit $1,000 scholarships allocated on a state basis according to each state's percentage of the total U.S. graduating high school seniors.

A Selection Committee will judge in combination all information about each finalist — high school record, accomplishments, extracurricular activities, and test scores.

Many finalists will also be considered for an estimated 2,400 four-year renewable Merit Scholarships financed by 550 sponsors.

Art Festival, Sidewalk Sale Sept. 27-28

The North Quincy Business and Professional Association is sponsoring an "Autumn Art Festival and Sidewalk Sale" with the co-operation of the Quincy Art Association.

Announcement was made by John Horrigan, NQBPA president.

During two back-to-back bargain days - Friday, Sept. 27 and Saturday, Sept. 28 - approximately 100 Quincy Art Association paintings will be displayed at the shopping area on Billings Rd and Hancock St. Between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. during sale days, North Quincy businessmen will display sale stock either on the sidewalk or inside stores.

Richard Walsh of Curtis Compact Food Stores and Joseph Buccini of Mr. Sub are co-chairmen of the event. Edward Swirbalus of 17 Hollis Ave., North Quincy is festival coordinator from Quincy Art Association.

North Quincy Knights To Hold Clambake Sunday

The annual clambake of North Quincy Council, Knights of Columbus, will be held Sunday at Romuva Park, Brockton.

Grand Knight Edward J. Keohane and his staff of officers were installed at the council chamber Sunday. Following the ceremonies refreshments were served by Frank Schuler and Al Danna and dancing was enjoyed.

It was announced that the Charity Fund Ball of the Massachusetts State Council will be held Saturday, Oct. 5, at the Statler Hilton Hotel, Boston. Proceeds will benefit handicapped, retarded, and exceptional children. Those unable to attend may mail donations to Box 2, North Quincy, Mass. 02171.

On Sunday Oct. 6, in cooperation with the Quincy Motor Company, the Council will hold a punt, pass, and kick competition at the Veterans' Memorial Stadium starting at 9 a.m. Contestants should have their parents or legal guardian fill out the official form at the Quincy Motor Company not later than Oct. 4. Winning contestants will receive trophies.

'Nando Of Rome' Celebrates 10th Year

Nando of Rome is marking his 10th anniversary with a special celebration at his Billings Rd, North Quincy salon.

The salon is recognized as one of the finest in the Quincy-South Shore area with much of its success attributed to owner Ferdinando [Nando of Rome] Cristfulli.

Nando's styling ability and that of his excellent stylists can be summed up in three words: Experience, Imagination and Professionalism.

In his native Italy Nando served a five year apprenticeship before he was permitted to style his first client.

He has also worked as a platform artist in major cities for the L'Oreal of Paris Company, world known for hair coloring.

And the years of learning has paid off. Nando has been the personal stylist for Miss Quincy Bay Race Week, Miss Dorchester, Miss Massachusetts and many other beautiful girls, models and beauty contest winners.

Nando's talents do not end with his creative ability as his voice is well known in the musical circles. His singing appearance at the Knights of Columbus Muscular Dystrophy rally was well accepted and his voice can be heard by many as they pass his beauty salon on Billings Rd.

Locally he has sung at the St. Brendan's Church, and St. Agatha's Church of Dorchester and at the Mother's Club of the Union Congregational Church of Weymouth and Braintree.

Living, Today

By Dr. William F. Knox
Personal Counselor

'Falling In Love'

"I'm trying not to fall in love with you" ... Tom told Sonia. "Why are you trying so hard to hold back?" ... Sonia asked. He made some non-committing reply ... perhaps didn't fully know himself why he was holding back. But Tom had recently been divorced from his wife with whom he had been very much in love. They had met on a cruise and had "fallen in love" at first sight. Five months later they married.

When Tom and Sonia began to live together they found that they were totally unsuited to each other. Sonia was blond and beautiful. But she was a spoiled little girl. She couldn't carry her end of the relationship. Tom loved her but she couldn't meet his needs as an adult woman. Unconsciously, he pressed her to make the relationship work ... which only made the relationship worse ... because spoiled little girls ... or spoiled little boys ... don't want to be pressed for anything they don't want to do. She angered him ... frustrated him ... psychologically castrated him. When he could take no more ... in spite of the fact that he still loved her ... he got a divorce. Now Tom is wary.

Perhaps caution and reason blended with feelings is the combination which makes for a successful loving relationship. For one thing ... I think it is important for people to GET TO KNOW EACH OTHER ... before "falling in love" ... to avoid a descent from the level of reason ... to a level of abandonment of one's rights as a person. It can mean "I become your blind slave ... do anything your whims dictate to me and I'll still love you and take it." Only the masochist can enjoy the slave level of being in love. Get to know each other ... keep your reason in charge ... before you "fall in love". Ask questions ... "How do you feel about ...?" "Tell me about your childhood ...?" "Do you enjoy ...?" "Where have you lived ...?" Let all these come out in conversation. Listen for attitudes expressed toward life ... toward men ... toward women ... toward children ... animals ... politics ... sports. Reason could not support an avid golfer falling in love with a girl who hates sports ... or a musician with one who doesn't like music ... or a stay-at-home-body with a night person. Know the person you "fall in love with".

Secondly ... GET TO LIKE EACH OTHER before you "fall in love". Get to feeling comfortable with the partner. If there's a hassle about where you go ... what you do for entertainment ... if the needs for affection are at a very different levels ... if you feel resistance in the relationship, these are the danger signs. Shed them. You haven't time for those hassles. Get to feeling comfortable with the person ... like him/her before you "fall in love".

Thirdly ... LOOK FOR ANY OUTSIDE INFLUENCES which can prevent or destroy your love from fulfillment. For example ... the man who has lived with a domineering ... possessive mother brings into every relationship that mother. She camps there between you. Likewise a girl hung up on her father can be constantly comparing her new "lover" (unfavorably) by the "model" ... her father. Watch out for the fellow who always has to go places where he can "have a drink" ... or be with people who are drinkers. Alcohol is like a destructive person between you. Don't "fall in love" with an alcoholic.

I'm all for "falling in love" ... when you know the person ... like the person ... have no influences you can't tolerate. Be cautious ... let your reason guide your feelings.

Watergate And Tidegates

Editor, Quincy Sun:

Now that the light at the end of the tunnel appears in view insofar as the nation's so-called Watergate scandals are concerned, maybe it's time we resolved what some have referred to as Quincy's Watergate.

Although some may suggest, and possibly a good case could be made, that the cemetery scandal, the controversy over the new positions at the hospital, the garbage-trash mixing controversy, or even the Blacks Creek dredging project could be included under the umbrella of Quincy's Watergate, it would seem that even the name "Watergate" might suggest something else.

Alas, almost simultaneously with the recent dramatic events in Washington which have put that "nightmare" behind us, the facts behind Quincy's Watergate have begun to unravel. The name "watergate" itself, suggesting as it does "a gate for water" provided the clue to what would seem to be "Quincy's Watergate Affair".

What else could a "watergate" be but a "tidegate" - a gate-like device which controls the flow of water from the ocean into an estuary or marsh? Where would you expect to find such a tidegate? Undercover, of course! Quincy's Watergate Affair it would seem involves the tidegate under Edgewater Drive and the tidegate on Rockland St. which prevents the natural flow of salt-water on the Third Marsh in the Houghs Neck section of the city. The continuing lack of an adequate salt-water flow on this marsh has caused the cancerous intrusion of plants foreign to a salt-marsh so that the marsh is more and more approaching the throes of death!

Pleas of conservationists to open or remove the tidegates in order to restore the marsh to good health have been met by a concerted effort from the ward councillor in the area, along with other city officials, suggesting that the conservationists are tampering with the security of area residents in that the removal of the tide gate would flood the people's homes.

As it became apparent that the flooding argument might not hold water, a new "game plan" was devised. The city's health commissioner declared the marsh "a serious health hazard" labeling the marsh "pure, raw sewage" and finally stating according to press releases, "Under no circumstances as long as I am health commissioner will that marsh be flooded." The ward councillor and the city's DPW Commissioner, whose department regulates and maintains the gates, then stonewalled themselves behind the Health Commissioner's statement.

In view of the fact that an independent reading by a Cambridge firm confirmed the statement that the coliform count in the creek between Edgewater Drive and Rock Island Road did indicate that a serious health hazard exists, it would appear that the Health Commissioner is correct in labeling at least the creek an open sewer. In flushing out the creek, which incidentally occurs to a degree with each tide and even more so after a rain, it would appear that the pollution must indeed spread on to nearby beaches.

The question then arises as to why this situation, which has presumably gone on for many years, has not come to light until now! How soon will this deplorable condition be corrected? In the meantime, what steps have been and are being taken to protect the health of the residents who abut this so-called serious health hazard or who swim in the beaches where the outflow comes out after each tide and after rains? It is a small wonder that some child has not already become seriously ill as a result of this serious health hazard!

Given the fact that marshes have the capacity to at least provide tertiary and even secondary treatment of sewage [one very good economic reason why they should be preserved in a healthy state] might it not make sense to open up or remove the tide gate in order to provide a flushing action and to keep the marsh-treatment plant in good working order?

The Health Commissioner may need reminding that conservationists too are concerned with the health of people and sometimes a "blade of grass" - particularly salt-marsh grass - is just the remedy needed!

A 'Thank You' From St. John's

Editor, Quincy Sun:

Last week The Quincy Sun published a listing of names of parishioners from St. John's who returned from abroad in the closing event of St. John's Church Centennial observance.

The year long celebration was highly successful and most rewarding to all participants in the various religious and social events to commemorate the special milestone.

The priests of St. John's, the parishioners, and all the members of the various committees who worked so zealously to make the Centennial a most memorable one extend sincere thanks and deep appreciation to The Quincy Sun and your most cooperative staff in providing excellent coverage of the various commemorative events held throughout the past year.

John D. Noonan, Chairman
Centennial Publicity Committee

My Son, Matt

He gave me inspiration
The will to carry on,
He gave me kind and loving words
Since the day that he was born.

His smile wasn't just make believe
It was one you couldn't forget
He had time for everyone
No matter who he met.

He never said an unkind word
Or hurt a soul on earth
But our children are only loaned to us
Each time there is a birth.

God needed him for a purpose
His work on earth is done
So now he'll serve our Lord above

My precious loving son,
I da F. Kelley

Historic Pictures On Quincy Fire Hydrants?

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Quincy's traditional green and yellow fire hydrants may take on a new look in the Quincy Center area.

Quincy Heritage is looking into the unique possibility--and feasibility--of painting historic scenes on the hydrants.

The illustrations would tie in with Quincy's celebration of its own 350th anniversary and the nation's bicentennial celebration.

The hydrants would thus mark for visitors [natives, too] the Quincy historic district. You would follow the hydrants to the historic sites.

But Quincy Heritage wants to be sure that in case of a fire, the hydrants would still easily be recognized as hydrants.

Anyway, Quincy Heritage is now discussing the possibility with Fire Chief Edward Barry and Water Supt. Owen Eaton.

GEORGE McDONALD ran far behind Clifford Marshall for the Democratic nomination for Norfolk County sheriff. But McDonald isn't tossing in the sponge, politically. Insiders, for example, wouldn't be surprised to see him in next year's Quincy mayoralty race. They say he has political--and personal--reasons for wanting to take a crack at mayor.

PAUL BARRY, making his first bid for office as a candidate for sheriff, is quite pleased with his fourth-spot finish in the five-man race for the Democratic nomination.

So pleased, they say, that he's thinking of making a run for one of the city council at-large seats next year. Barry polled 12,647 votes--2,742 of them in Quincy. He finished fourth in the county and third in Quincy.

LOOK FOR Deputy Sheriff John Brownell, third in the Democratic race for sheriff, to throw his support to Republican incumbent Charles Hedges in the November finale.

Brownell got into the race only after he was virtually certain Hedges would not seek re-election. Hedges himself didn't know for sure he was going to run again until the 11th hour. By that time it was too late for Brownell to pull out. He had to go through with it.

"He's my boss," Brownell tells friends. "And he had done a good job. It's only right that I support him."

ONE OF THE nicest get-togethers in a long while was Sunday's reception for Dave and Roberta Crowley at Humarock Lodge, Humarock on the occasion of their 40th wedding anniversary.

The former city councillor and his wife, who is assistant city treasurer, had quite a cross-section of Democrats and Republicans there wishing them well. Among them: Mayor Walter Hannon, Senator Arthur Tobin, former Mayor-Senator James McIntyre, Rep. Thomas Brownell, Deputy Sheriff John Brownell, City Clerk John Gillis, City Treasurer Robert Foy, Public Works Commissioner James Ricciuti, City Assessor Henry Bertolon, Rev. Peter Corea, of the Quincy Housing Authority, Louise Brabazon, the City Council's Gal Friday, to name a few.

As someone observed: "We could start a political campaign right now."

There were many sincere tributes. Two summed Dave and Roberta up quite nicely: "He always stood up to be heard--on an issue--never to step aside," said McIntyre of Dave.

And when their daughter, Jean, presented Roberta with a bouquet of roses, Jean who so prettily cried: "There should be a thousand of them [roses] and then there still wouldn't be enough."

WJDA also just marked an anniversary--its 27th. The Quincy station went on the air Sept. 13, 1947 with, as late founder James D. Asher once mused: "A lot of hope and $130 in the bank."

The station has come a long way since those days. It has been a tremendous asset to Quincy and the entire South Shore area, giving freely of its time and talent to help numerous civic and other community projects.

To Jay Asher who now runs the station, and good friends Ken Fallon, Herb Fontaine, Win Bettinson, Mary Johnson, and the rest of the gang, congratulations and best wishes from The Quincy Sun staff.

AND, speaking of milestones, congratulations to Gus Westhrin and his wife, Elsie, on their 50th wedding anniversary. Gus, of course, is the Quincy Kiwanis Club historian.

ONE MORE MILESTONE: Nathan Feldman, founder of Jason's Luggage and Music Shop, recently attended the 60th anniversary of his Boston English High School class. They're still going strong.

QUINCY'S Ruth Gordon will appear in the "Good Morning" telecast over Television station WCVB [Channel 5] on Tuesday, Sept. 24 at 9 a.m. Appearing with her will be her husband, Playwright Garson Kanin.

SMILE DEPT: Sign in office at South Shore Television & Appliance: "It's great to work here. You not only get a pension, you age quicker."

Why Dukakis Prefers To Tangle With Sargent

"Don't mourn for me. Organize."

--Joe Hill

By WENDELL H. WOODMAN

BOSTON--About two or three weeks after Ground Hog Day, Carroll Sheehan peered over his ham and cheese sandwich and replied, "Well, it was either run for Governor or paint the house." He lost the Lucite vote on Tuesday, Sept. 10.

He reasoned at that time that there were enough disaffected Republicans to vote Frank Sargent out of a job in the primary. The only problem was getting his message across. That required money.

The entre to that money was the surprisingly strong showing he made at the mock Republican convention on June 1.

On the day after his endorsement by Lloyd Waring, financier and former State GOP Chairman, Carroll Sheehan blinked into a hamburger and said, "Sometime around the 15th of August, these people [potential contributors] are going to take a hard look at this race and realize that Sargent is vulnerable and that I can win it, and they're going to back me."

On the 15th of August, as fate would have it, Gov. Sargent ran a full-page ad in 38 newspapers repudiating the Republican Party.

The business and financial community Sheehan was counting on was out to lunch. And it stayed out to lunch.

The Sargent organization spent over half a million dollars planting and cultivating the belief that, like him or not, Sargent was the only hope the Republicans had for retaining the governorship.

The Republican Party, of course, is dead.

What knowledgeable Democrats knew and feared, what the Chairman of the Democratic State Committee admitted during a television interview, was that if Sargent were defeated in the primary, Sheehan would be virtually unbeatable in the November election. Neither Robert Quinn nor Michael Dukakis wanted to tangle with a Republican newcomer. They wanted the main course, an incumbent Governor with a long and vulnerable record to defend.

This was particularly important to Dukakis, a maverick liberal, because Sheehan would have had inroads to the Irish and hard-hat votes in what could be called the Quinn, or Establishment, bloc of the Democratic Party. Sheehan had served, after all, as regional director of the U.S. Dept. of Labor.

The Dukakis triumph over Atty. General Quinn was awesome. It was so awesome that the question of Democratic unity was rendered moot. There will be no ground swell for destruction this year.

With Thomas P. O'Neill, III nominated for Lt. Governor, you may rest assured that his father, the Majority Leader in Congress, will not tolerate any defections from the Democratic banner. The Quinn camp may be unhappy in the extreme, but it will stay with Dukakis et al.

The Dukakis appeal to win support from the disenchanted Republicans who voted for Sheehan is window dressing. Dukakis is so far to the left that most Republican dissidents will be forced to return to Gov. Sargent or simply remain neutral and blank the whole contest. That is the only advantage the Governor gained when Dukakis was nominated. If Quinn had been nominated, the Sheehan bloc would have gone to Quinn.

It would appear that Gov. Sargent's drive to get out the liberal, Independent vote was effective. It came out, but it voted in the Democratic Primary, just as the Sheehan forces predicted it would.

This leaves the Governor in very deep trouble.

The Democratic ticket -- Dukakis, O'Neill, Bellotti, Guzzi,

Crane and Buczek -- couldn't have been more formidable if a computer had recommended it at a state convention. It has Democratic Sweep written all over it.

For sheer interest value, the race for Attorney General between Democrat Francis X. Bellotti and Republican Josiah Spaulding is a dandy. Bellotti may win it in a walkaway, but the campaign itself should be lively and reminiscent of the 1966 clash between Bellotti and Elliot Richardson -- (except for the mud-slinging at the final buzzer that gave Richardson the election and endeared him to almost nobody).

The rule book on the bottom half of the ticket will have to be amended. The postulate that the offices of Secretary of State, State Treasurer and State Auditor belong to incumbent Democrats as a form of squatters' rights in perpetuity has been disproven.

Paul Guzzi's victory over Secretary John F. X. Davoren has put a real crimp in the campaign of GOP candidate John Quinlan who, like Quinn and Dukakis, was banking on a run against a vulnerable incumbent. Guzzi's momentum and the strength of the Democratic ticket itself will seriously impair Quinlan.

And State Treasurer Robert Q. Crane, who beat back a powerful attack by Atty. Mark Furcolo, won't be able to take his job for granted in the future. Crane's was considered one of the safest jewels in the Democrats' storehouse of prize jobs.

Heading into this primary, Sargent had been shifting to the left to win his nomination, and Dukakis had been moving to the right to claim his nomination. The question is where each candidate will head from here. Defections across party lines will be kept to a minimum, however, and that does not auger well for the Republican ticket.

● Question Of The Week:

'Can I Use My Maiden Name?'

"I am to be married in a few weeks. How can I retain my maiden name?" asked a woman calling the League of Women Voters Voter Information Phone.

She was told by the volunteer that there is no law that requires a woman to use her husband's name when she marries.

If she wishes to retain her maiden name, she should simply do so but she should be consistent about it, not using her maiden name on some occasions and her husband's name on others. While there is no law that prevents a woman from using her maiden name, there is no law allowing it either.

Since it has been the custom to use the husband's name, some people will say use of the maiden name is illegal. A woman using her maiden name may have to go to court to get a restraining order if denied service under her own name. Attempts to clarify the situation through legislation have been unsuccessful thus far.

If a woman wishes to change her name after she has used her husband's name, she should go to Probate Court and request a legal name change. The cost for this service is minimal.

This question is one of the many that are received by the League of Women Voters Voter Information Phone. Individuals with any questions on government may call the VIFone Monday through Friday between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. The number in the Boston area is 357-5880.

Kiwanis Club Speaker Brings Along Surprise Guest

Patrick Nolan, Public Relations Director of the Boston Zoological Society discussing new additions to the Zoo was the speaker at the luncheon-meeting of the Quincy Kiwanis Club Monday at the Quincy YMCA.

He was accompanied by a friend - a live four-foot alligator.

The speaker told of the close ties his organization has with the Metropolitan District Commission. His facilities operates several facilities in Greater Boston including the Franklin Park Zoo, the Children's Zoo, the Trailside Museum in Milton, and the Walter Stone Zoo in Stoneham.

Nolan announced that the newest attraction, "Bird World" at the Franklin Park Zoo will be opened to the public this week-end. A progressive report on the recent State Convention was given by Walter Martinson who said that 466 delegates were present. The new State officers include Carl McDonald, president; John Morton, Governor-elect; and Chester Bogushus, District Treasurer.

It was voted to authorize the Board of Directors to appoint a permanent secretary.

New Furor Over Academy Windows

A new furor erupted this week over window renovations at historic Adams Academy.

The disagreement concerns whether to block or not to block eight windows on the sides of the building.

Councillor Leo J. Kelly, who introduced an order requesting the removal of the cinder blocks filling in the windows, says he refuses, "in good conscience," the Quincy Historical Society's bid to have the order rescinded. Kelly commented:

"The blocking of the windows is not compatible with nor sensitive to the architectural dignity of this historic building."

The Historical Society has blocked filling in the windows with concrete cinder blocks to increase needed interior wall surface area.

The Society plans to transform the old academy where once stood the birthplace of Patriot John Hancock, into a museum-library-office facility.

Both Kelly and Councillor Warren A. Powers requested that a capable museum consultant inspect and evaluate the Historical Society's action in regard to the windows.

George L. Wrenn, III, associate director of the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities, personally analyzed the building and labelled the attempted window renovation as a "highly inappropriate...drastic change."

The Quincy Planning Board and City Council oppose the blocking of the windows. Kelly said the Historical Society was "indifferent to the requests of the community."

He has called a joint meeting of Mayor Walter J. Hannon, the City Council and the Adams Academy Board of Managers in an attempt to review the situation thoroughly.

Nonetheless, Kelly and Council President Arthur H. Tobin have said that the Historical Society's attorney, Stephen T. Keefe Jr., has indicated that under the lease agreement, the Society can legally block the windows despite adverse city reaction and city council resolutions.

Historical Society Obtains Consultant

The Quincy Historical Society has obtained the services of Paul E. Molitor Jr., director of the Museum of the American China Trade, as a consultant on the arrangement of its library-museum in the remodeled Adams Academy Building and the procurement of a professional staff to operate the new facility.

The availability of new facilities will require the Quincy Historical Society to revamp its organization. The consultant has been asked to do four things for the Society:

- Meet with individuals and groups in the Quincy Historical Society and in the community to determine goals and desired programs as well as resources and facilities available.
- Advise the Society on the feasibility of its goals and desired programs in the light of its facilities and resources.
- Examine the structure of the Society and its constitution and advise on desired changes in view of the anticipated opening of the library-museum and the addition of a professional staff.

Recommend the type of staff which will best meet the needs of the library-museum at this time.

In the three years that he has been at the Museum of the American China Trade, Molitor has directed that institution in accomplishing many of the goals now viewed as desirable by the Quincy Historical Society: increase in membership, involvement of volunteers in an active program, raising operating expenses through a revised dues schedule, and operating educational programs centered in a museum.

The consultant is working with an ad hoc committee of curators of the Society composed of: Professor George R. Horner, Professor James R. Cameron, Mrs. Doris Oberg, William A. O'Connell and Gordon F. Nelson. This committee has also scheduled a meeting with Rev. John R. Graham, director of Quincy Heritage, to co-ordinate the work of the Quincy Historical Society with the community-wide celebrations.

6 To Be Cited Sept. 28 At Annual Grossman Park Commemoration

The Quincy Conservation Commission will award six certificates of commendation to Quincy residents during the annual commemoration program of the Reuben A. and Lizzie Grossman Park.

The ceremonies will take place Sunday, Sept. 29 at 2 p.m. at the corner of Quincy Shore Drive and Fenn St., Wollaston.

Roy Higgins, Fausto Grippi, Robert Faxon, Douglas Brown, Linda Walker and Professor William J. Babcock will be lauded for their "outstanding contributions to the improvement of the environmental quality of Quincy."

Quincy Conservation Commission believes that these citizens have shown, through individual example, "how each of us can make this small island in space a more wholesome place in which to live."

Representing the Grossman family at the program will be Nissie Grossman. Mayor Walter J. Hannon and former Quincy mayor James R. McIntyre will speak at the ceremony.

Also participating in the afternoon program will be James F. Donahue, chairman of Quincy Conservation Commission, Clara Yeomans, executive secretary of the Commission, Richard Koch, executive secretary of Quincy Park-Recreation Board, and Dr. Norton Nickerson, president of Massachusetts Association of Conservation Commissions.

Environmental exhibits will dot the area and refreshments will be served.

In case of inclement weather, ceremonies will take place at the nearby Beechwood Knoll School on Fenn St.

Colonial Tea Sept.22 At Dorothy Q. Homestead

The Quincy Women's Club Juniors will don colonial costumes and serve confectionary sweets based on recipes of Martha Washington and Abigail Adams at 2:30 p.m. Sept. 22 at the Dorothy Quincy Homestead, 34 Butler Rd.

The "colonial tea" will be held on the lawn of the home of Dorothy Quincy, the wife of John Hancock, first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The public is invited to attend the event, according to Mrs. Judith R. Curtis, Vice-chairman of the Quincy Women's Club Juniors.

Authentic recipes of such colonial figures as Dolly Madison, Elizabeth Monroe, and President Andrew Jackson will be used in the preparation of the food, Mrs. Curtis said.

Additionally, a six-piece string quartet will be on hand to play patriotic songs for the guests.

A fashion show, utilizing clothing dating from the colonial days to the 1940's, will also be held.

The colonial tea is being held in cooperation with Quincy

Heritage to celebrate the nation's Bicentennial.

Free, Reduced Price Meals Available To Students

Students in all the Quincy Public Schools may now apply for free or reduced price meals at the school they attend.

Application forms for the free or reduced price meals have been sent home to all the parents of children in the school system. Additional copies may be picked up at any school in the city or from any one of the following agencies:

CD Mock Hurricane Exercise Set For Oct. 15

Louise F. Saba, director of the Massachusetts Civil Defense Agency [MCDA] and office of Emergency Preparedness, announces a mock hurricane exercise for the 92 communities in Southeastern Mass. [Area II] will be held Oct. 15.

The goal of the exercise, which will take place during the evening of that date, is to evaluate the current readiness and Civil Defense capability of each community to mitigate a hurricane's effect on population and property.

John Lovering, director of Area II MCDA into which the city of Quincy falls, will coordinate the program from his headquarters in Bridgewater. The exercise will involve control center personnel at the Area, Sector and Local levels. There will be no public participation in the mock program.

Lovering commented, "We are presently at the height of the 1974 hurricane season and community officials are now in the process of updating natural disaster plans and emergency procedures in the event a storm comes our way. This exercise will aid in that effort."

Tozzi Far From Optimistic As North Opens Today

North Quincy enters the Suburban League this year and Cross Country Coach Lou Tozzi was far from optimistic as the Raiders prepared for their league opener today [Thursday] against Rindge Tech over the Quincy course, which starts and ends at Merrymount Park.

"We had a poor record last year and this season our competition is going to be much stronger," Tozzi said. "Brocton has one of the state's strongest teams and has dominated cross country for the past few years. Waltham is also very strong and Newton and Weymouth North also look strong. I think the opposition is going to be much stronger than we faced in the Greater Boston League."

Next Wednesday North will run at Waltham.

Something new has been added this year, girls' cross country. In most North meets both the girls and boys will run but in the Raiders' first two meets it will be boys only as Rindge and Waltham don't have the sport for girls.

Tozzi expects his number one man, Junior Bart Petracca, to be one of the best in the league. Bart, who did 4:34 in the mile last spring, has recovered from injuries suffered when hit by a car and appears ready.

Artie Barrett, a senior, is the number two man and is another fine runner. His brother, Ken, a junior, is number three and Tozzi expects his top three to score a lot of points.

"My major problem is depth and after those top three, we have a lot of question marks," he said.

Mark Canavan, a senior, and Ken O'Brien, a junior, are lettermen and should do well, and Tozzi has two promising sophomores, Marty Levinson and Ian Sheridan, who should do some scoring.

Ed Yee, another letterman; Joe O'Connor, Rich Gorin, Andy Lakowski and Mike Morin round out the squad.

"I'm hoping for a winning season but we could improve 200 percent over last year and still not have a good record, due to the competition," he pointed out. "I'm looking for improvement and am rebuilding the program. Interest in cross country has not been good and I'm trying to build it up."

Lou has eight girls and they are totally inexperienced. They are Lauren Snook, Marie Tracy, Chris Bonoli, Roberta Mann, Mary Ann Sylvester, Elaine Murray, Mary Lynch and Joanne Troy.

"These girls are willing but this is brand new to them and they will have plenty of trouble," the coach said. "Some of the league schools have had girls' cross country for a few years and will have a big edge in experience."

The North girls will get their baptism of fire Monday, Sept. 30, when they run against Weymouth North over the Quincy course.

Brothers Divide Family Loyalty

Two Quincy families will have an equal interest in the Quincy and North Quincy cross country teams this fall and their loyalty will be divided when the Presidents and Raiders meet. Kevin O'Brien will be running for Quincy and his brother Ken for North, while Frank Yee will be running for Quincy and his brother Ed for North.

Quincy At Brookline

Quincy's cross country team opens its first Suburban League season today [Thursday] at Brookline and the Presidents' chances depend to a good extent on the availability of their top three runners.

Arnie Vorrusso, Steve Player and Tim Kane all were due back but as of last week hadn't reported for a variety of reasons. Coach Tom Hall had hopes they might change their minds and come out.

"They were my three best runners and we face a real fight if none of them turn out," Hall said. "However, even without them we have some good runners, three cross country veterans and several who ran in spring track."

"This is a stronger league than the Greater Boston League with Brockton dominating the league for five years, losing only one meet, and Waltham, Newton and Weymouth North also strong. However, our first two meets with Brookline and Cambridge Latin are with teams about equal to us and if we could win these two, it would give the boys a big boost."

The Cambridge Latin meet is at Cambridge next Wednesday. The Presidents make their home bow Sept. 30 against Rindge Tech.

The only veteran barriers, if the top three don't compete, are Kevin O'Brien, Frank Yee and Sam Gravina. Charlie Park, John Ross, Kevin White, Bob Thorne and Ed Coletta all ran in spring track and Ron Hartikka ran cross country two years ago as a sophomore but did not run last year.

Quincy has girls' cross country for the first time this fall and Hall has several girls with experience, having run for the Quincy girls' track team and also this summer for the Quincy Track Club.

The girls include Sally Rickson, Ginger Denvir, Kelly Tobin, Lisa Dimino, Jill Seamans, Eileen Squatrito and Jody Yurkis.

Hall will also use two Central Junior High sisters, whose points will not count. They are Dotty and Patty Irvine, both of whom excelled this summer for the Quincy Track Club.

"We could have a successful boys' season, despite the strong competition, and I think the girls will do all right due to their experience," Hall concluded.

● Soccer North Seeks 4th Straight, Quincy Hopes To Rebound

The North Quincy soccer team is off to a fast start in its first Suburban League season and Friday tries to stretch its unbeaten streak to four when it hosts Weymouth North at Montclair Field.

The Raiders will go to Brookline Monday and to Waltham next Wednesday.

Meanwhile, Quincy, the Norfolk Association champion for the last three years, hopes to bounce back from its first loss in the new league when it hosts Cambridge Latin Friday at the Veterans' Stadium field. The Presidents are home to Brockton Monday and entertain Weymouth North next Wednesday.

Lou Ioanilli's North team turned in an outstanding performance Monday to defeat Brockton, rated a league power, 4-1, to make its record 2-0-1. Walter Melton scored three goals and John Penella one. John Mackey had two assists and Danny Finn and sophomore Jim McGinley one.

Ron Martin's Quincy booters, however, lost to Weymouth South, 5-3. Mark Raymond scored twice and Glen Schlager once. Joe McEcheran had two assists and Kan Donovan one.

Last Friday Quincy made it two wins in a row with a 2-0 decision over Rindge Tech, while North played to a 1-1 tie with Cambridge Latin.

Raymond and Schlager scored for Quincy, while sophomore goaltender Mike Kennedy turned in his second straight shutout.

McEcheran assisted on Raymond's goal and Raymond assisted on Schlager's.

North took a 1-0 lead in the first period when Melton scored on a pass from Tim Clifford, but Latin tied it in the third period. North had an edge in the first half but missed a couple of good scoring chances and both teams were played sloppily in the second half.

Ioanilli used both Gary Nankin and Ken O'Sullivan in goal.

Quincy had opened its first Suburban League season with a 1-0 win over Waltham as McEcheran converted Peter Keenan's pass for the game's only goal.

North got away to a promising start when it rolled over Weymouth South, 5-0.

Bill Donovan had two Raider goals and Mackey, Melton and Finn one each. Donovan, Finn, Bob Mewis and Kevin O'Neil had assists. Nankin and O'Sullivan again split the goaltending chores.

Ioanilli praised Clifford, who takes all the Raiders' throw-ins. "He can throw the ball from midfield almost all the way to the goal," Ioanilli explained. "He tosses the ball high so it comes down directly in front of the net, where our forwards are positioned."

Mele To Coach Sox Instructional Team

Quincy's Sam Mele, Red Sox scout and special assignment man, will again be one of the coaches of the Sox team in the Florida Instructional League, which gets under way Sept. 23 and continues through Nov. 15. The team plays a 54-game schedule.

Rac Slider is the team manager and Mele and Broadway Charlie Wagner the coaches. Sam has been a coach for several years, among his numerous other assignments for the Red Sox.

"We have the youngest lineup in the league every year," Mele said. Most of the young players on the current Red Sox team played in the instructional league.

Among this year's players are Eddie Ford Jr., son of the Yankee Hall of Fame pitcher, and the number one draft choice last June, and Ted Cox, the club's number one selection in June, 1973.

The only New Englander on the squad will be 22-year old righthanded pitcher Al Ripley of North Attleboro, who had a 10-8 record at Winston-Salem in the Carolina League this summer.

Mele worked with several of the players during the summer on their hitting and also worked with the outfielders. When Ford was sent down to Elmira from Bristol, Mele worked hard with him trying to improve his batting and his hitting did pick up. Everyone agrees he has the makings of an outstanding shortstop defensively.

The Red Sox home base will be Allyn Field in Sarasota, which they will share with the Chicago White Sox team. The Atlanta Braves team will be at Payne Field, Sarasota, and the Pirates will operate from nearby Bradenton.

The oldest Red Sox player is 24-year old catcher Jim Merchant. Infielder Luis DeLeon and pitcher Joel Finch are only 18.

WJDA Football Schedule

Radio Station WJDA will continue its policy of broadcasting South Shore schoolboy football games this fall, beginning Saturday.

The station will do a play-by-play of one game and pick up two or three others each Saturday and will broadcast several Sunday games of Abp. Williams.

Saturday WJDA will do the play-by-play of Braintree at Weymouth North and pick up Dedham at Quincy, North Quincy at Milton and Weymouth South at Hingham.

The other Saturday broadcasts: Sept. 28, play-by-play Quincy at Weymouth North, pick up Malden at North Quincy and Weymouth North at Brookline; Oct. 5, play-by-play Weymouth North at North Quincy; pick up Quincy at Revere, Boston Latin at Weymouth South and Natick at Braintree; Oct. 12, play-by-play Waltham at Quincy; pick up North Quincy at Everett, Newton at Weymouth North and Weymouth South at Brookline; Oct. 19, play-by-play Weymouth South at North Quincy; pick up Quincy at Newton, Brockton at Weymouth North and Walpole at Braintree.

Oct. 26, play-by-play Newton at North Quincy; pick up Quincy at Malden, Duffee at Abp. Williams, Waltham at Weymouth North and Dedham at Braintree; Nov. 2, play-by-play Weymouth North at Quincy; pick up North Quincy at Brookline, Williams at Weymouth South and Framingham South at Braintree; Nov. 9, play-by-play Waltham at North Quincy; pick up Quincy at Brockton and Newton at Weymouth South; Nov. 16, play-by-play Norwood at Braintree; pick up Brookline at Quincy, North Quincy at Brockton and Boston Tech at Weymouth North; Thanksgiving, 10 a.m., play-by-play Quincy - North Quincy; pick up Milton at Braintree and Xaverian at Abp. Williams.

Sunday Abp. Williams games on the schedule are Catholic Memorial at Williams Sept. 29, B.C. High at Williams Oct. 6, Thayer at Williams Oct. 13, Williams at St. John's Prep Nov. 10 and Williams at Don Bosco Nov. 17.

Renew Old Rivalry

Raiders Open Season At Milton Saturday

North Quincy's football team renews an old and interesting rivalry with Milton Saturday in a 1:30 p.m. game at Milton High Field and Coach Ralph Frazier expects a troublesome afternoon.

"I know Milton didn't have a successful year last season and Jack Bowes is rebuilding, but I know what kind of a coach Jack is and he will have a team which will give anyone trouble," Frazier said.

Bowes is a former aide to Frazier who took over the Milton reins a year ago. The renewal of the old rivalry was made possible when schoolboy teams were permitted this year to play 10-game schedules.

North and Milton haven't met since the late 1950's and retired North Coach Jack Donahue had many interesting games against Milton teams coached by Jack Carmie and Harry McCormick. Frazier played against Milton while an outstanding lineman at North.

A year ago North was 6-1-1 and for the second straight year finished in second place in the Greater Boston League. This year North has moved into the strong Suburban League and he sees plenty of trouble ahead.

"This league has some tough teams and, of course, Brockton is probably the best team in Eastern Massachusetts," Frazier said. "They have more than 5000 students and have the second largest enrollment east of the Mississippi but our boys won't be awed by them.

"They can put only 11 men on the field at one time, the same as us, and I know we will give them a battle. Weymouth North, a league team, and Weymouth South, are old rivals of ours and we are playing two of our former Greater Boston League rivals, Malden and Everett. We have only six league games."

Frazier expressed himself as satisfied with the Raiders' progress, and is especially pleased with the way the passing game has been coming along.

"I know we can run but I was a bit concerned with our passing, with Carl Leone having graduated," Ralph said. "But we have some superior receivers and Mike Meehan has been passing well in practice. Defensively we have some experience, much more than on offense, and we will be strong again defensively. All in all, I'd say we have made progress."

Frazier expects to open with an offensive lineup of Cooper Jordan (180) or Joe Wilkinson.

Meehan (145) will be at quarterback, Brian Doherty (180) and either Rich Marino (170) or Jack Hatfield (150) halfbacks and Matty Constantino (180) or Paul O'Donnell (180) fullback.

Mike Holleran will back up Meehan at quarterback and among others due to see action on offense are Peter Hemphill, Bruce Hall, Bob McCullough and Dan Noonan.

Probable defensive starters are O'Donnell and Tom Callahan

(175) at end, John Gallagher (220) and Billy Pitts (215) tackles, Dennis McGuire and either Steve Wentzell (165), Pat Connolly (160) or Mark Donaghue (145) linebackers, Frank Strazzula (160) and Chris Morton (175) cornermen, Steve Lathrop (155) and Bruce Shea (175) halfbacks and Hatfield safety.

Others expected to play on defense include Joyce, Hall, Alf McHugh, Brian Doherty, Nee, John McKenna, Al Kelleher, Wilkinson, Paul McGuigan and Paul Crevier.

The opener is one of four non-league games for North Quincy.

Youth Football Opens Sunday

The Quincy Youth Football League will open a busy season with a "double header" Sunday at 1 p.m. at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

Former Senator-Mayor James R. McIntyre will be master of ceremonies and kick off the first ball to open the season. The North Quincy Apaches will meet the Quincy Elks at 1:30 and the St. Gregory's Raiders will play the Quincy Panthers at 3 p.m.

A colorful ceremony will precede the games. The colors will be raised by a Marine Color Guard from the South Weymouth Naval Air Station. Invited guests will include, Mayor Walter J. Hannon and School Supt. Dr. Lawrence J. Crendon who founded the league 24 years ago.

The age bracket of youngsters in the league is 11 through 14 years of age. The League this season will consist of five teams:

Quincy Elks, Panthers, Apaches, Raiders, and Manets.

All teams are divided into varsity and junior varsity teams. The JayVees will play a regulation game Saturday and a 10 minute half time game on Sunday for the Varsity teams.

The season will run for six consecutive weeks through Oct. 27 with Nov. 3, 10 and 17 as make-up rain dates. The League will hold an All-Star game on one of the rain dates.

Presidents Host Dedham In New Rivalry

By TOM SULLIVAN

A new chapter unfolds this fall for the Quincy football team with its entrance into the Suburban League after several years in the Greater Boston League.

Although Saturday's opener at Veterans Memorial Stadium (kickoff at 1:30) is a non-league game, it is with a new rival, Dedham of the Bay State League.

In fact, the Presidents' first three games are non-league games before they meet Waltham in their first game in the new league on Oct. 12.

Quincy Coach Hank Conroy admits he knows nothing of Dedham, despite having scrimmaged them the past few years.

"They have a new coach this year, and I don't know a thing about them," Hank said. "We had some good scrimmages with them during the past few years and I expect they will be tough."

As Quincy opens a new era, it appears it will again be strong on defense and Conroy is pleased with the way the offense has come along in scrimmages.

"The defense has looked very good and I don't think we will have many problems there," the Presidents' coach said. "As far as our offense is concerned, I hope it will be more balanced than the past two years."

"We have some fine runners and I expect Preston Carroll to be one of the best ball carriers in the league. And the way Jim Forrester has come along as a passer, we should have a better balanced attack."

When the Presidents take to the field Saturday and Conroy seeks his 50th coaching win, the starting offensive team is expected to include Mike McKenzie [165] and John Riggs [200] ends, Steve Coleman [220] and Jake Columbus [220] tackles, Jerry Durante [180] and Dave Gosselin [170] guards and Doug King [190] playing his first game at center.

Forrester [190] will be at quarterback with Carroll [170] and either Terry O'Day [150] or Paul Ramponi [150] halfbacks and Paul Vespaziani [160] fullback.

Also due for service on offense are Frankie Guest at quarterback, Ted Wiedemann, Dom Ignani and Jim Rose in the backfield, Bob Nolan, Bob Carella, Steve Sylva, Bob Varrasso, Jim Grimmer, Paul DiCristofaro and Ken Sunnerberg in the line and Rich Hebert, Paul Coletti and Mark Wysocki at end.

"In the first game I will go with several offensive starters on defense due to experience, so we won't be too big at the start," Conroy said. "But, when we get going, I'll have several good-sized boys playing defense."

Expected to start on defense are Wysocki and King ends, Coleman and Columbus tackles, Durante and Gosselin in the interior line, Riggs line backer, Wiedemann and Paul Coner [160] safeties and McKenzie and Rich Hennessey [165] halfbacks.

However, also playing in the line will be Grimmer [250], Varrasso [230] and DiCristofaro [235]. Others playing on defense will include Tony DiRocco, Bob Carella, Paul Ferris, Rich Hocking, Sylva, Pat Foley, Joe Megnia, Guest, Tony Cedrone and Fred McNeil.

As far as the new league is concerned, Conroy feels Quincy will hold its own. He has no fear of playing Brockton, with more than 5,200 students and the second largest enrollment east of the Mississippi.

"We had a fine series with them until it ended a few years ago, and we had some great scrimmages with them the past two or three years," he said. "They never outclassed us and I don't think they will now. There are some strong teams in this league but we have either played or scrimmaged most of them and I don't think we will be out of our class at all."

Quincy's sophomore team, with Mark Conroy, Hank's son, at the helm for the second season, opens Friday at Dedham.

Squantum Tennis Tournery

Ryan Wins Singles Crown, Courtney-Fleming Take Doubles

The third annual Squantum Invitational Tennis Classic was held last Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Faxon Park with more than 100 in attendance in perfect weather.

Fifty-nine singles players and 30 doubles teams competed in the event, which was well received by tennis buffs, many of whom said it was one of the finest tournaments they had witnessed. Larry Courtney was tournament director, assisted by Dick Courtney and Mark McGuinness.

This was the first year the event had been held at the Faxon courts, the two previous events being held in Squantum. Mike Ryan of Weymouth defeated Jack Browley of Marshfield, 6-3, 2-6, 6-2, for the singles championship.

However, the semifinal match between Ryan and Bob Fleming of Cotuit was the best of the day and most felt it should have been the championship match. Ryan won in a match which went nearly two hours, 2-6, 7-6 [5-2 tiebreaker], 6-4. Crowley defeated Bill McSweeney of Weymouth in another long match, 6-2, 3-6, 6-2, in the other semifinal.

The doubles crown went to Larry Courtney of Quincy and Fleming, who came from behind to defeat Ed McKinnon of Quincy and Bernie Kramer of Quincy, 1-6, 7-5, 6-3.

In the semifinals Courtney and Fleming defeated Crowley and Bill Courtney of Quincy, 6-0, 6-3, while McKinnon and Kramer defeated Mark McGuinness of Quincy and Dave Laiacina of Quincy, 6-3, 6-7 [5-4 tie breaker], 6-4.

Quincy Heritage To Seek $9,500 For Hancock Cemetery

Quincy Heritage is seeking $9,200 from the Massachusetts Bicentennial Commission [MBC] to begin the second phase of its restoration and beautification project at Hancock Cemetery.

This phase would involve "gridding" the cemetery, mapping of burial plots and studies of the histories of families buried there. Gridding involves dividing the cemetery into small sections in order to accurately determine locations of gravesites.

Some 50 high school students would be working under the direction of North Quincy High School anthropology teacher Richard Riley.

Quincy Heritage views the Hancock Cemetery project as one of its major contributions to the city's celebration of its 350th anniversary in 1975 and the nation's Bicentennial in 1976, according to Quincy Heritage Executive Director Rev. John R. Graham.

"Although the Hancock Cemetery has been kept in relatively good condition, much work needs to be done," he said. "Many headstones have been lost while others are broken and still others are deteriorating due to weather conditions. Walls, fences and vaults need to be painted, landscaping and screening is necessary.

"Some inscriptions need to be researched along with the feasibility of recutting the wording into headstones," he said.

The restoration and beautification of the 330-year-old cemetery is an "ideal project" for involving the youth of the city with the value and process of historic preservation, Rev. Graham said.

He cited the "tremendous enthusiasm" and "excellent work" by Neighborhood Youth Corps students during the project's first phase last summer, as the "best reason" for the program's continuation.

Child Advocacy Center Opened In Quincy

The South Shore Office for Children has opened a Child Advocacy Center at 37 Washington St., Quincy Center.

Two child advocates and a community-based representative will be located in the office.

The new center is available to all youth, parents, clergy, and interested others on the South Shore. Growing out of the realization that even when resources are available they are not always easy to obtain, the center hopes to record the gaps in service and develop programs to meet these needs.

The South Shore Council for Children is a branch of the Massachusetts Office for Children which was founded in 1973 to provide better children's services. The new Child Advocacy Center is a community branch of the South Shore Council for Children and will act as a liaison from the Council to other agencies. It will also assist the Council in advocating better children's services.

The Community Action Organization of Quincy has seen the need for this program and has agreed to act as the fiscal agency for the center.

Taylor Program Coordinator For New CP Clinic

Albert J. Marchionne, president of Cerebral Palsy of the South Shore Area, Inc., announces the appointment of Charles W. Taylor, 165 Granite St., Quincy, as medical social worker-program coordinator for the new walk-in clinic at 105 Adams St.

Taylor will be responsible for visiting homes of the cerebral palsied, interviewing parents, procuring medical reports from doctors, hospitals and other clinics, coordinating community resources with the medical, educational, vocational, social and recreational needs of the cerebral palsied, and developing volunteer programs that are geared to meet the special needs of the seriously handicapped.

He will implement and correlate the entire program of services offered by the CP organization and will report directly to Arthur Ciampa, Executive Director.

A graduate of Quincy High School and Eastern Nazarene College, Taylor received a Master's Degree in Social Work from the University of Maryland School of Social Work and Community Planning, Baltimore, Md.

While at Eastern Nazarene College, Taylor was involved in group work with ward patients at the Medfield State Hospital. He also did volunteer work with autistic children at North School in Hingham which led to paid employment for a year with this program prior to entering graduate school.

At the University of Maryland, Taylor specialized in clinical social work and had field placement assignments at the Montgomery County Department of Social Services in Rockville, Md., where he worked with foster children and foster parents. He organized and conducted a group of adolescent boys with severe behavior problems at a local junior high.

During his second year in the field he worked at the Veterans Administration Psychiatric Outpatient Clinic, Baltimore, Md., with mentally ill veterans helping them to develop a satisfactory social adjustment to their impairment. He also worked with a group of chronic schizophrenic people helping them to solve problems and develop social skills through group interaction.

Bottle Extravaganza Sept. 22

The New England Beam and Specialties Club will sponsor a Bottle Extravaganza Sept. 22 displaying 1,000 antique as well as modern, ceramic bottles.

Elizabeth Slowe of Quincy, a member of the committee publicizing the event, said that the first 100 people paying admission will receive a bottle.

Miller Studio To Host Yearbook Staffs At Seminar Sept. 25

Six communications specialists are scheduled to share their knowledge with high school and college yearbook staffs at a seminar sponsored by Miller Studio of Quincy Wednesday, Sept. 25 at Valle's Restaurant, Braintree.

Edward F. Percy, co-owner of Miller Studio will host the second annual seminar, "Graphic Sense".

Gardinier, who will be the principal speaker, has worked for the Dunkirk, N.Y., Evening Observer, Syracuse Herald

Journal, Buffalo Evening News and the New Bedford Standard Times, where he was police and waterfront reporter and later became business editor.

He resigned in 1966 to join the New England Telephone Company's public relations department. He was on the yearbook staffs of Dunkirk High School and Allegheny College, giving him some insight into the problems facing his audience.

You Can Now Dial Direct To Overseas

International Direct Distance Dialing is now available to Quincy residents living in the exchange areas 328 and 786.

This new system enables callers to dial directly to Australia, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Greece, Hong Kong, Israel, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, the Philippines, the Republic of South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, the United Kingdom and Venezuela.

All customers able to use the system will receive a special insert with their next bills. The insert will explain dialing instructions for placing the calls without an operator's aid and will give information on rates as well as time differences between local Mass. time and the time in the 20 foreign countries.

Paul Rennie Promoted

Paul T. Rennie of 100 Gridley St., Quincy has been promoted to director of building construction in the department of administrative services at John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co.

In his new position, Rennie is responsible for assisting the general director in construction activities in the company's home office complex.

Rennie joined the company in 1969 as a management trainee in the printing and purchasing department. He was subsequently promoted to senior methods analyst and in 1972 was named a communications consultant.

A graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, he is president of the West Point Society of New England Alumni Association and a member of the AMVETS.

Rennie and his wife, Patricia, have four children.

City Needs Ordinance To Keep Flood Insurance Eligibility

The City of Quincy is in the process of complying with federal regulations to uphold its statutory commitment insuring the city's eligibility for flood insurance.

Quincy's Planning Department must soon complete its work on a flood plain ordinance or relinquish its eligibility to purchase flood insurance.

To guard against losing that eligibility, Councilor James Sheets introduced at Monday's City Council meeting a resolve asking the Planning Department to finish the formulation of a flood plain ordinance and to submit it to the Council as an amendment to the existing city ordinances.

The resolve was approved by the Council and then referred to the Planning Department.

Geoffrey Davidson, Quincy planning director, is confident that the city can comply with the federal regulations within the time allotted. Noting that the Planning Department is now developing a flood plain ordinance, Davidson said:

"What is left now is merely the formal steps of adopting the necessary ordinances and controls. I'm confident that we can maintain a time schedule to insure Quincy residents their eligibility for low-cost flood insurance."

At the end of August, George Bernstein, federal insurance administrator for the Department of Housing and Urban Development [HUD], reminded the city of its yet-unmet statutory commitment made to HUD to adopt flood plain management ordinances as a stipulation for receiving flood insurance.

According to Bernstein, these ordinances would require local builders and developers "to take the necessary steps to reduce or avoid needless flood damages in connection with future construction."

Noting "specific deficiencies" in the city's land use measures submitted to HUD, Bernstein said in an Aug. 28, 1974 letter to Mayor Walter J. Hannon:

"We find that your community has not adopted flood plain management ordinances in accordance with the provisions...of our regulations."

Bernstein warned that the city's eligibility for flood insurance would be revoked if the proper ordinances were not instituted within 90 days of the receipt of his letter.

Jack Conway To Speak At Washington Realtors Convention

Jack Conway, President of Jack Conway and Company Realtors, will share the speaking platform Sept. 21 with U.S. Senator Henry (Scoop) Jackson, at the annual Washington Association of Realtors Convention in Seattle.

Conway is the national chairman of the Realtors Political Affairs Committee. Subject of the conference will be "National Political Affairs Update". Over 600 realtors and realtor-associates are expected to attend the annual state convention and educational conference at the Hanford House, Richland, Wash.

Purpose of the speakers will be to make convention members politically aware. Conway's speech will be concerned with "waking up" realtors to their responsibility in government. Said Conway, "With many of the 435 seats up for re-election it is important for realtors to be aware of their role in today's government."

In addition to being national chairman of the Realtors Political Affairs Committee Conway is a past president of the Massachusetts Association of Real Estate Boards, as well as Realtor-Of-The-Year for 1970 in the State of Massachusetts. He is also director and second vice president of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce; Director, RELO/Inter-City Relocation Service, Inc.; Vice president of the Massachusetts Co-operative Bank; and is on the Convention Committee of the Brokers Institute.

Sheets To Seek Public Agenda At Meetings

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

Ward 4 Councillor James A. Sheets wants to make City Council meetings "more meaningful" to audience observers by distributing agenda copies to them before each meeting.

Sheets plans to introduce a resolve at the Oct. 7 Council meeting, requesting such a distribution of Council agendas.

Sheets made no mention of it, but there had been criticism by spectators at special council meetings this summer. They said they were unable to follow what was taking place and said it looked like matters were being rushed through.

Noting that Council meetings may sometimes "appear cut and dried" to the listener in the audience, Sheets indicated that, with agenda in hand, the observer will experience more "educational and positive exposure" to the workings of city government.

Sheets said, too, that the agenda will be expanded to include definitions of terms and actions.

"People will then know what a resolve is, what a petition is, what a motion is, what a remonstrance is," he said.

The agenda now contains a list of all matters - pending and tabled - before the City Council. It includes an order of business as well as an indication of which committee is handling a certain measure.

The intent of his resolve is two-fold, Sheets said. It will not only "make the Council sessions more meaningful to those who come regularly to the meetings" but it will also "encourage others to attend." He continued: "One reason why people don't attend the meetings regularly is because they don't have a good understanding of what's happening. They need a road map to follow where we're going."

Sheets noted that people in the audience may speak during a Council meeting if first introduced by a Council member and then recognized by a majority of the Council.

Sheets is confident the Council will pass his resolve.

"I see no reason why they shouldn't pass it. After all it's the people's city and they should know what is going on."

Tin Still Problem

Recycling Center Taking Bottles Again

Sometime during the past month, Quincy's recycling center on Ricciuti Drive, West Quincy, was forced to dump reusable bottles directly into the city dump.

But now, the center is equipped with three new containers for reusable glass, according to Public Works Commissioner James J. Ricciuti.

Ricciuti noted that a container for reusable tin items was removed and as yet has not been replaced.

Since the center's opening last September, many Quincy residents have faithfully cleaned and carried glass to the dump in an effort to salvage and recycle raw materials.

One such faithful resident, Jane C. O'Brien, complained to The Quincy Sun that on a recent trip to the center, the "usual containers" for bottles and tins were not available.

She was then told to put her bottles into the dumptruck. She related:

"Upon questioning, I was told the recycling containers were emptied into the dump anyway."

Irritated and upset, Miss O'Brien wondered if her recycling efforts were a mere waste of time.

Ricciuti said Miss O'Brien's complaint was "a familiar one". He explained that early in the summer, the Waste Recovery Corp. of Cambridge - the company which furnished and emptied the recycling containers - informed his office of "a glut in the market" for selling recycled glass. The company could simply find no customers to buy the reusable glass, said Ricciuti.

Consequently, the company ended its service to Quincy.

Glass then began to accumulate, Ricciuti said, and the containers were filled to capacity. People began to leave brown paper bags filled with glass on the dumping grounds.

Ricciuti said that during rainstorms these bags disintegrated creating "a pollutant to the eye." The glass then had to be deposited into the dump, he said.

But Ricciuti added, "There was only one such dumping, to the best of my knowledge."

He said that a 21-month contract has been signed with the H. A. Sancomb Trucking

3 Options To Weigh

S. Quincy MBTA Study Team Gets Reaction Impact: Negative!

By JAMES QUINN

Members of a study team examining the environmental impact of a proposed MBTA station in South Quincy received a distinctly negative reaction from a group of local residents at a public workshop last Thursday night.

Approximately 100 persons attended and 15 of them spoke out.

Officials from the MBTA, state Department of Public Works and a Boston consulting firm appeared at the Lincoln-Hancock Community School to inform residents of the nature and scope of a study now underway to determine the feasibility of extending the MBTA Red Line from Quincy Center to an area between Independence Ave. and Centre St., in South Quincy.

However, all of the 15 residents from both that area and its adjoining section of Braintree who spoke during the open part of the session, voiced strong, and occasionally passionate, disapproval of the proposed project.

"I'll do everything in my power to keep this station from being built," said Robert A. Cerasoli, Democratic candidate for state representative in the First Norfolk District.

He pointed out that he has obtained enough signatures for a referendum so that voters in several Weymouth and Quincy districts can express their approval or disapproval on the November ballot.

Rep. Joseph E. Brett [D-Quincy], while affirming he was in favor of rapid transit extension southward, stressed that "We don't need a terminal station a half-mile from Quincy Center." He suggested the dump site in South Braintree, where funds have already been approved for MBTA extension, and "which has no adjoining homes or businesses," as a more feasible location.

After Jack Leary, MBTA spokesman and project manager for the South Quincy study, had pointed out that there have never been any plans for a terminal station in South Quincy, Brett suggested that if "future need showed," a platform station-without the proposed 1,800-car parking lot-could be built.

Pasquale DeStefano, chairman of the South Quincy Civic Association, lashed out sharply at the "slick public relations

'Someone Should Ask Questions'

Commission Going Shopping .. To Check Rising Food Prices

The Food Price Study Commission is going shopping.

Spurred by mounting prices, questionable zone-pricing practices and an apparent market domination by Stop & Shop, Rep. Thomas Brownell [D-Quincy] has suggested that the eight-member Commission launch an investigatory shopping spree.

"Someone should start asking questions about these price increases," he told The Quincy Sun. "Nothing seems to be happening on the national level, so we should try to do something on the local level."

The Food Price Commission, established this year by the state legislature, is composed of four state representatives, two senators, one member appointed by the Consumer Council and one appointed by the governor.

Already, the Commission has conducted two public hearings investigating prices and practices within the food industry.

However, Brownell said the Commission was "disappointed at the consumer turnout" at the most recent hearing which took place at Quincy City Hall last Friday. He said:

"The problem of rising food prices is an enormous one and we'd like to get input from the local level. The problem just won't go away by itself."

Brownell cited one concern of the Commission as "the Broad Meadows Seeks

Parent Board Candidates

Broad Meadows Junior High School is seeking candidates for its Parent Board.

Any adult who lives in the district serviced by Broad Meadows is eligible to become a candidate. Those who meet the eligibility criteria may have their names recorded as candidates by calling the school or register in person before Tuesday, Oct. 1.

The main purpose of the Parent Board is to establish an open line between the home and the school. To do this, board members meet monthly with school personnel in an advisory capacity. Agenda at these meetings consists of topics called to the attention of the Board by the school administration and citizens in the Broad Meadows district. Format at each and all meetings is such as to allow free and open discussion of all topics.

'We've Changed'

'Hot Air Night' Friday At Quincy Bank

Friday is Hot Air Night at the Quincy Bank [Quincy Co-operative Bank] in Quincy Sq.

To celebrate the opening of its remodeled and expanded main office the Quincy Bank is taking "all the hot air out of banking and stuffed it into a 70-foot balloon".

The balloonist, Ralph Hall, will attempt to raise his hot air balloon in the McIntyre Mall at 7 p.m. His efforts will be supported by the Colonial Boys Fife and Drum group from Norwood. Their attire and musical accompaniment support the bank's new symbol and musical theme.

Mayor Walter J. Hannon, will participate in the ribbon cutting ceremony, with John A. Vivian, President and Director of Quincy Bank. Other bank and city officials will also be present.

The opening will "kick off" the beginning of a week-long celebration that features three outstanding door prizes - a color TV, complete stereo system, and a 10-speed bike. There will be other giveaways and surprises. In addition, the bank will be offering a choice of three lovely free gifts for depositing $100 into an existing or new savings account.

Purpose of the celebration is to let the public know that

Quincy Co-operative Bank has changed, by adding new services, new branch offices [starting with Cohasset, soon to open], longer hours, and many other changes in addition to the remodeling and new identity.

"We've changed because you have" is the bank's current theme and promise to the South Shore residents.

In the event of rain, Hot Air Night will be held Monday.

approach" of the study committee.

"Nobody's demonstrated the need for a station. Your study won't show that. This [South Quincy station] is nothing but a political and business expediency," he said.

He added that "thousands of people" in the area had signed a petition disapproving of the proposed site and that four local legislators had submitted bills in the past against the location of the extension.

The primary function of the station, which would include highway access ramps from Routes 3 and 128, would be to serve commuters from Quincy and other South Shore communities. The "environmental impact analysis" being conducted by the planning-engineering firm of Parsons, Brinkerhoff, Quade and Douglas is to determine "impacts" on both the physical and social aspects of the area and to decide what kind of station, if any, should be built.

"We hope to have no company line on this thing," said Perry Lord, senior vice-president for the firm. "We want to get feedback from the people, to talk to them frequently, and thereby gain a meaningful exchange of ideas and activity."

Robert Joseph, project manager for the firm, told the audience that 10 major "work elements" will be employed in the study: traffic analysis, engineering and design [including aspects such as parking lot size], air quality, noise evaluation, water resources, natural features, visual aspects, community resources [including the possible effect on housing], and economics [business conditions, employment and the tax rate].

"If we find a bad impact is indicated, we'll try to develop means to minimize these impacts," Joseph added.

Joseph pointed out that the group has three options to weigh during the study. The first is simply not building the station. The second is "minimum action", or considering the use of buses on existing streets or using them on improved roads. The third is to consider "other project alternatives" for various possible station locations within the proposed 50-acre tract of land, as well as parking facilities and access ramps.

Rich Hartman, head of community development for the project, said that a community participation program has begun which will include newsletters to residents, keeping them informed of the study's progress, a special "hotline" telephone number to be installed Oct. 1 in the consultants' offices to take citizens' questions and suggestions, additional public workshops and a transportation study committee. The latter, to be composed of government, business, conservation group and civic association members from Braintree, Quincy and the area, "will meet regularly to give more information" to the public," said Hartman.

"We're not trying to keep anything from you," he added.

However, the audience of approximately 100 people weren't amenable to anything the directors offered Thursday night.

"Perhaps if you find out the noise level in the South Quincy area is going to be too high with the increased traffic, you can reduce it some," said Bernice Brater, president of the Quincy Civic Association, "but you can't tell me and other people who live in this area that it'd be as acceptable as having no increased noise at all."

Other people pointed to the pollution caused by the increased traffic, as well as the possible flooding from the wetlands in the area. Robert Joseph admitted that the wetlands and the sharp downgrade from Independence Ave. could act as "constraints" on the proposed project.

The officials were also told there was no need for an 1,800-car garage with one already in Quincy Center, and that altering the present access ramps from Route 3 to make room for ramps to the new station would provide traffic congestion in the area.

"We don't have all the answers," offered Perry Lord. "That's the purpose of this study. The point is to decide what the people want done."

After several more heated volleys from the audience, Sidney Ober, a member of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, asked "What does the people's opinion really weigh? If the people gave you an outright 'No,' would that mean you'd cancel the project?" His question was only vaguely answered.

Leary told the several people who suggested putting a station only in South Braintree and skipping the South Quincy stop altogether, that the Braintree site was "already approved and funded."

It was also suggested that the proposed new arterial extension from Upland Rd to Route 3, currently being studied by the City of Quincy, would solve the need for easy access for commuters to an MBTA stop.

"That is not necessary to our concept," replied Walter Gustafson of the Mass. Department of Public Works.

"That's something Quincy must decide."

Leary added that the arterial extension could complement the proposed MBTA station.

Future plans, Leary said, call for possible extensions of the rapid transit line to Hingham, Weymouth, Holbrook, Brockton or Plymouth. He said the Federal Department of Transportation, which is funding the project, will make its decision on the proposed South Quincy site after several more such public workshops are held. He said their decision, to be made sometime in February, will be based entirely on information received from the study team.

Dr. Paterson Reception Oct. 21

The Adams School PTA has planned an informal reception to welcome the school's new principal Dr. Henry F. Paterson, Jr., and the teaching staff.

The reception will take place Monday, Oct. 21 at 8 p.m. in the school's media center.

Dr. Paterson succeeds David Johnston who was accepted a principalship in Somerville.

STRICTLY PERSONAL Let daughter's marriage alone

By PAT and
MARILYN DAVIS

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

My daughter is beautiful, talented and a college graduate. She has been married for five years to Bill. He did manage to graduate from high school and began working in a garage. He is now a mechanic and makes a good living. He also comes home dirty and greasy.

The thing I can't understand is that my daughter doesn't seem to mind the grime at all. Why can't she talk Bill into hiring the dirty work done? Where is her sense of value?

Mother

Dear Mother:

Her sense of value is right where it should be. Why don't you stop being Mrs. Clean? Let your daughter's marriage alone. She seems to be handling the situation very well.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

I am 16 and I think I'm pregnant. I won't go into all the details but I do need help. Should I tell my parents or try to handle this alone?

Susan

Dear Susan:

Tell your parents. If they are like most parents, you will be surprised by their understanding. Remember, they are on your side.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

Some of the girls at school

mentioned a vinyl nail polish. They said it formed a protective finish. Can you tell me about this?

Sally

Dear Sally:

No doubt you're referring to a new product called Strong-Hold "vinyl nail guard." It's actually formulated with vinyl. It will brush on as easily as nail polish to coat fingertips with a strong, high gloss shine. It is colorless, quick-drying, and guards against peeling, splitting, or chipping. The product is made by Max Factor and can be purchased at the cosmetic counter of all leading department stores and drug stores.

Are women really tougher than men?

Psychiatrists find it hard to say whether men or women are the tougher sex.

More than twice as many men as women commit suicide (103.6 per 100,000 compared to 34.3 per 100,000 in a study of white men and women in 1967 and 1968) but more women than men are treated for depression each year, professionals say. — CNS

Fashion is back -- she's glad

By ANN RUDY
Copley News Service

During the last several years I have not been a slave to fashion, but that's nothing to brag about because neither has anybody else.

I was, instead, a slave to nonfashion. To radical chic. There were those who tried hard to look as if they hadn't — to look perfectly imperfect, to wear tired clothes and redeem them with status accessories, that was the game.

A worn-out pair of jeans held up by a $50 belt. A look-at-me-I-don't-give-a-damn bravado and then chickening out with a $45 Gucci scarf tied carelessly around a throat vibrating with such nonsense statements as: "Comfort is all," and "fashion is doing your own thing."

But the jig is up. Real fashion is making a comeback, complete with hats and gloves for ladies. Dresses are in. Veils on hats, behind which a woman can look demure. Soft ruffles and chiffon scarves — the whole femme fatale scene.

And I'm glad. Curses, I hate to admit it, but I am. It will be a lot more trouble and I'll have to stop sitting like one of the boys, but there is something that quickens, deep in the heart of me, to beautiful clothes. I think it's the same thing that makes me smile at babies.

At any rate, maybe the return to dressing like I care will be easier than I think.

I mean, I had to wash those jeans 1,784 times before they began to look bad enough to wear. That's a lot of energy and 152 giant boxes of detergent. At $1.10 a box, that's over $150 toward a sensational ostrich boa.

I think I can manage to look elegant on just about the same amount of money I spent on looking rotten.

I only wish I'd had the courage to be the first on my block to burn my jeans. That would have been truly radical. And chic.

Are pantsuits for wedding?

By RIV TOBIN

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

Are pantsuits suitable to wear to a formal wedding these days? There will be a reception afterward. I hope your answer is "Yes."

Mrs. Moore

Dear Mrs. Moore:

So much depends on the type of pantsuit. Full, pleated trousers, that look like a long skirt, would be very pretty. Tight or see-through trousers would not be proper to wear to a sacred ceremony.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

We went to the races at Del Mar, Calif. Friends had given us their table in the Turf Club. My husband wore good-looking slacks and a sport shirt but we were told he was not properly dressed for the club because he was not wearing a jacket. We were very put out. Comment, please.

San Diegos

Dear San Diegos:

Your host should have told you that jackets for men are de rigueur in the Turf Club at Del Mar — and all such private clubs at race tracks that I know about. In these days of casual attire, men should wear jackets and ties when they are in doubt as to proper attire. It's easier to shed coats and ties than to borrow or be denied admission.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

We were invited to an informal supper and I asked the hostess if there was anything I could bring. She said, "Yes, you bring a salad for ten." I really didn't expect to be asked to help feed such a large crowd. Don't you think my friend was out of line?

Sick of Salad

Dear Sick:

If you didn't want to help you should not have offered. A tossed salad for that many is no big deal. Your hostess was not out of line. You are, to be resentful.

10 to Midnight	Ninth sign following
Midnight to 2 a.m.	Tenth sign following
2 to 4 a.m.	Eleventh sign following

ARIES: (March 21 to April 19 — Also Aries Ascendant) — You progress in career matters by actively involving yourself in discussions, with organizations in your field. You could be in the spotlight, so conduct yourself with charm and fairness. Good time for study.

TAURUS: (April 20 to May 20 — Also Taurus Ascendant) — You accomplish much from the sidelines and working by yourself in private. Later in the week go into action to attain a goal — make important contacts. Good time to diet for a desired weight adjustment.

GEMINI: (May 21 to June 20 — Also Gemini Ascendant) — Concentrate on your long-range desires and friends but take care not to spread yourself too thin. Too much to do means not having enough time for any one thing to do it well. Assist your people in their goals.

CANCER: (June 21 to July 22 — Also Cancer Ascendant) — Attention turns from hard work to pleasure and romance. Single Cancerians could start a deep romantic attachment now. Be moderate in food and drink. Intuition is high and you may have a breakthrough psychically.

LEO: (July 23 to August 22 — Also Leo Ascendant) — Lots of activity relating to advertising, travel and close kin. Research carefully and do foundation investigation on a current idea. If dealing in real estate matters, be patient and get the right deal. Use care in transit.

VIRGO: (August 23 to Sept. 22 — Also Virgo Ascendant) — Business is accented now with the possibility of some form of expansion. Legal advice will help you. Your ideas are well received — the cycle is "up." Health improves and you have energy to push for success.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22 — Also Libra Ascendant) — Good time to start advertising or promotional programs. Partnership matters are highlighted. Don't make impulsive decisions — be flexible and work toward a compromise. Keep communications lines open.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21 — Also Scorpio Ascendant) — Lots of activity regarding social and sports events — assist when asked. Single Scorpios could begin a romance with a coworker. Opportunities for expansion could be favorable. Good time to get a house pet.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21 — Also Sagittarius Ascendant) — Your creative ideas could be quite brilliant now. Take them to the right people who can get things going. Keep ambitious plans for yourself in the future under your hat to prevent possible criticism now.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19 — Also Capricorn Ascendant) — Tap your own inner resources now by meditating, quieting yourself so ideas can come through. Successful and important people are available to you now. Career matters are favored — your position improves.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18 — Also Aquarius Ascendant) — Accent is on journeys and brothers and sisters. Resist tendency to be argumentative. Make a greater effort toward improved communications. Be cautious about overoptimism in business. Analyze carefully.

PISCES: (Feb. 19 to March 20 — Also Pisces Ascendant) — Happy times with children and social enjoyment is accented. A piece of work begun last month gets more inspiration and activity. Make every effort to be realistic — don't fool yourself. Be practical about money.

YOUR HANDWRITING TELLS

'g' and 'y' show determination

By DOROTHY ST. JOHN JACKSON
Certified Master
Graphoanalyst

Copley News Service

Dear Dorothy:

I am outgoing, but not pushy. I have just started working for my Ph.D., which has been my dream for a long time. Now, I sometimes wonder if I really want the degree. Seems to me that Ph.D.'s know too much and tend to shut other people out of their lives. The ones I know seem to be discourteous and critical, which is contrary to the way I was taught. My dream has been darkened. From my writing, what do you think I should do?

Dear L.T.:

It's not the Ph.D. that's wrong — it's the uneducated heart behind it. The tall v and inverted v formations in your m's and n's are monuments to your intelligence. You have a strong sense of direction, and you know what you want to do with your life, seen in your firm t crossings.

If it is your desire to obtain your Ph.D. degree, you should pursue it. Your sights are high, seen in the placement of the t crossings, and your determination to finish what you start is strong and enduring, seen in the strong long downstroke on g and y.

Besides that, your heart is ready to go. It will never shut others out of your life. The word endings along the line show your consideration and compassion for others, and you have enough interest in people, seen in your degree of slant and the lower loops on g and y, to last a lifetime.

Whatever you do, don't ever let anyone tarnish your dream. No degree can cast a spell over anyone. It's the wise heart that makes the difference, regardless of degrees.

D.J.

SMOKING, MATCHES AND FIRE

Smoking and matches are the primary causes of house fires which kill thousands of persons each year and result in millions of dollars of property losses. The first line of defense is to avoid these fire hazards in the home. Here are a few:

Use large, deep ashtrays, and never smoke in bed or in a chair when drowsy.

Make sure matches, cigarettes, cigars, and pipe ashes are completely cold before throwing them out.

Never use a match or smoke near flammable liquids or in places such as attics or closets or near stacks of paper.

Be careful that burning cigar or cigarette and pipe embers do not fall into crevices of upholstered furniture where they can smolder without being detected.

Use safety matches and strike a match away from you. Remove one match from the box or folder at a time, and close it before striking.

Officers and executive board of the Archbishop Williams Guild met recently at the home of the president, Mrs. John Giuggio of Braintree, to plan activities for the year.

First on the schedule will be the annual Freshman Tea for mothers of new students, to be held at the school gym Saturday at 2 p.m. Mrs. John Kearney of Holbrook, immediate past president, is chairman of this afternoon which is always a festive occasion. Members of the faculty will be on hand to meet the guests.

On Tuesday, Oct. 15, the Guild will sponsor a parent/teacher evening at the school, beginning at 6:30 p.m. On Tuesday, Oct. 22, the annual Communion Dinner is planned. Mrs. John Moreschi of Quincy is chairman, assisted with tickets by Mrs. John Cleary and Mrs. Howard McAllister, also of Quincy.

On Tuesday, Nov. 5, there will be a Guild meeting at the school followed by a mini-fashion show sponsored by Deerskin Trading Post.

The date of the January meeting has not been definitely scheduled.

The Spring fashion show will be at the school March 11, with styles by Remick's of Quincy. Mrs. Richard Monahan of Braintree and Mrs. Nicholas Albanese of Quincy are co-chairmen.

The final meeting of the school year will be held May 6 at which officers for the 1975-76 term will be elected.

Executive board meetings are planned for Oct. 8, Nov. 5, Jan. 14, Feb. 11 and April 15.

Along with the above, members of the Guild are actively working along with the other school organizations - men's association, students, alumni - to ensure the success of the school's Silver Jubilee to be held in November.

S.S. Simmons Club Hears Doris Oberg

The South Shore Simmons Club opened its new season with a covered dish supper Wednesday, at South Congregational Church, Braintree.

Highlight of the evening was a presentation of slides and examples of Dorchester Pottery by Mrs. Doris Oberg of Quincy. A short business meeting preceded the presentation at which proposed by-law changes were considered. Arrangements for the evening were made by Mrs. Richard Gordon of Milton, hospitality chairman for the year.

On Nov. 11, club members and invited guests will hear Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wrigley of Quincy tell about their trip to the Soviet Union.

On Feb. 5 there will be a speaker on graphology. The place of the meeting will be announced at a future date. On April 3 members will be invited to a tour and lecture at the Museum of the American China Trade in Milton. The annual meeting is scheduled to be held

Market Report

Now, A New Guessing Game At The Meat Counter

Shopping for meat, a difficult task at best for the past year or two, seems to have become infinitely tougher [no pun intended] now that all the cuts have different names.

Consumers study the tags to discover what a cut was "formerly called", make a tentative identification, then often find their choice has been cut differently.

But the new meat identity program will benefit everyone in the long run, says the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture [MDA], because everyone - customers, retailers and meat packers alike - will be talking about precisely the same thing.

Up to now, the same cut of meat could have a different name in different states, and even in different sections of the same state.

The new program, launched nationwide by the meat industry last fall, reduces more than 1,000 different names to 315 standard cuts and standardized descriptions for beef, pork, lamb and veal.

The meat identity standards are being adopted by individual states. Massachusetts put the program into effect last November, and the labels are now appearing statewide.

Both trade and public will benefit, and consumers will soon realize that considerable confusion as well as possible deception has been eliminated, says the MDA.

All names now are in three parts, describing (1) the type of meat; (2) the primal section from which the cut is derived; and (3) the retail name.

MDA offers a list of all cuts and their former names without charge upon request. Write to "Meat Names", Mass. Dept. of Agriculture, 100 Cambridge St., Boston, 02202, enclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope for your copy.

As long as we can still afford to shop at the meat counter, familiarity with the labeling will go a long way toward saving money and getting satisfaction.

Burke Seeds, Plants Bill Gets Initial Approval

Congressman James A. Burke reports the House Subcommittee on Domestic Marketing and Consumer Relations has overwhelmingly approved his bill, H.R. 9468, to distribute seeds and plants to the American public for use in home gardens.

Several of the subcommittee members paid high tribute to the bill and commended

Congressman Burke for his efforts to assist the American consumer in combating the skyrocketing costs of food.

The bill will now go to the full House Committee on Agriculture for consideration. Burke expressed hope that the full committee would take prompt and affirmative action so that seeds and plants might be distributed next spring.

He said that the American public is tired of being gouged in the market place, and emphasized that his bill would allow people to "return to the soil" in a manner which will heighten their appreciation of nature, while supplying them with high quality fresh food at no expense.

Family Planning Project Gets Good Poll Rating

The Quincy Family Planning Project recently conducted a consumer poll in order to evaluate its services, and to gather information, suggestions, and recommendations for the future operation of the program.

The Project, which conducts two weekly clinics, and offers counseling, and family planning and related medical services conducted the evaluation survey as part of its quarterly newsletter which was sent to consumers and interested groups and agencies on the south shore.

Of the one quarter consumers responding to the questionnaire to date, 90 percent gave the clinic an overall rating of very good to excellent [58 percent excellent, 32 percent very good], while 86 percent of the patients responding rated the medical services they received at the Clinic to be very good or excellent.

The questionnaire also revealed the high degree of help the Family Planning staff provided, and the high quality of the other components of the program such as counseling, follow-up care, and assistance provided for further referrals.

In the expanding area of community education, 68 percent of those responding favored the development of future film and discussion groups on women's health and related topics, and 53 percent favored seeing health films during Clinic hours.

Many favorable individual comments and suggestions were also expressed in the evaluation, and the Project staff will work to implement these ideas and to develop programs in which a special interest was shown.

Anyone wishing to obtain further information about the Project or to receive future newsletters may call or write to Quincy Family Planning Project, 9 Bicknell St., Quincy, 02169

Test Buildings' Strength

Quincy Men Really Go To Any Heights For Your Safety

By STEVE FERRARA

Joseph Fasci and Thomas Tehan of Quincy are concerned with your safety. And they'll go to any heights to prove it.

They are the owners of Ultrasonic Test Engineering, Inc. [U.T.E.], 1601 Hancock St., Quincy, a company that tests the strength of building girders and other steel erections for safety.

According to Fasci, who lives at 254 Winthrop St., Houghs Neck, and who is president of the company, they use a "transducer that sends out high frequency sound waves that are read on a cathode ray tube. This test inspects girder welds for internal flaws" - hollows in the steel that would cause weakness in a buildings superstructure.

The frequency of the sound waves used for testing is so high, like that of a "silent" dog whistle, that it is "beyond hearing" by a human ear - thus the name "ultra-sonic".

Fasci was a test examiner and Tehan, who lives at 30 Deldorf St., Quincy, who was a nuclear inspector, both worked in the Quality Control Department of General Dynamics ship yard in Quincy, when they decided to go out on their own in 1970. Over the years they attended many seminars and short courses in ultrasonics offered by the federal government and manufacturers.

During construction of Quincy's MBTA line in 1971, Fasci and Tehan developed a new technique - or testing the strength of welds between train rails. Later a German Ultrasonic company published the first formal paper on this technique developed by UTE.

Ultrasonic testing is used in the medical field in place of the x-ray in areas where there would be a radiation hazard or where immediate results are necessary. For example, ultrasonic tests are used on pregnant women because there is no danger to the unborn child.

In the 1920's ultrasonics was used only as a lab tool and involved intricate equipment. By the 1940's Dr. Floyd A. Firestone of the University of Michigan, developed practical applications of ultrasonics.

After World War II, the Russians and Germans made rapid advancements in ultrasonics in the drive to develop replacements for x-ray equipment which had been destroyed in the war. Not until the past 10 years has the U.S. caught up to these advancements.

Today ultrasonics is used commercially-jewelers use the technique to clean rings etc., and a new denture cleaning machine uses ultrasonic waves in water to create scrubbing bubbles.

State and federal regulations place strict requirements on welds at critical points in steel buildings. UTE inspects the welds and approves them if they meet requirements.

Recently Joe and Tom finished three weeks of testing newly-installed valves at the Pilgrim Station nuclear power plant in Plymouth.

The tests were a routine check to confirm that the thickness of valve walls would meet Atomic Energy Commission requirements.

"Everything was all right," says Joe. "There were no problems."

UTE has inspected other nuclear power plants in Maine, Vermont and Maryland.

As Tehan puts it, "We've inspected paper mills in Maine all the way to ships in Florida."

Susan Kurtz Appointed Jack Conway P.R. Director

The appointment of Susan Kurtz to the position of Public Relations Director for Jack Conway and Company Realtors is announced by Jack Conway, company president.

Mrs. Kurtz will be in charge of all publicity for the 14 Jack Conway offices throughout the South Shore and Cape Cod.

Previously she was employed as a copywriter for several Boston advertising agencies including Dowd, Allied and Parsons, Friedmann and Central. A freelance fashion copywriter, Mrs. Kurtz has worked on campaigns for a well-known sportswear house with nationwide distribution, as well as, for some of Greater Boston's department stores.

She lives in Duxbury, with her husband Jeffrey, president of Brentwood Personnel.

Mrs. Kurtz is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Rotman of Milton.

Stephenson Promoted At Ford & Ivestor

Appointment of Arthur H. Stephenson, a Quincy native, as Customer Service Manager of the Industrial Division of Ford & Ivestor Associates, Inc., is announced by Edward F. Ford, President.

Stephenson is a graduate of Milton High School and a veteran of the U.S. Army. He now lives in Stoneham with his wife Rose and their 19-year-old son, Arthur.

Brett Bill Calls For Rubbish Throwing Penalties

Rep. Joseph E. Brett [D-Quincy] is the author of a bill signed by Gov. Francis Sargent providing penalties for throwing or discarding rubbish within 20 feet of public highways or on coastal and inland waterways without permission of the owner. It calls for a fine of not more than $200 on conviction. The court may also require that a person found guilty remove at his own expense such trash, refuse, rubbish, debris, and materials.

If a motor vehicle is used in committing such a nuisance a conviction will be reported by the court to the Registrar of Motor Vehicles. The Registrar may suspend the license of the operator for not more than 30 days. The owner of the vehicle may also have his registration suspended for 30 days.

Commission To 'Shop' Food Prices

pattern of food pricing." He said that testimony aired at last Friday's second hearing made it evident that "Stop & Shop is dominating the market." He continued:

"Stop & Shop is obviously setting the prices in Massachusetts...when Stop & Shop goes down, other stores go down; when Stop & Shop goes up, other stores go up. There are laws on the books to stop this if the practice approaches a monopolistic trend."

Brownell also mentioned the existence of "zone-pricing systems" under which consumers in different areas throughout the state pay varying prices for the same product. The Commission wants to investigate the permissibility of this practice.

The Commission is also questioning a so-called "pre-ticketing practice" whereby a product is initially tagged with an apparently false price and then "marked down."

Hearing number three will be held this week in Cambridge. According to Brownell, three additional hearings will take place before the Commission ends its investigations in December.

Brownell indicated that the Commission is considering the filing of "proper legislation" to deal with problems in the food industry. However, he said that any legislation is still "in the formulation stage."

The Commission's findings and recommendations will be referred to the Federal Trade Commission, said Brownell. He added:

"The Commission wants to act responsibly in this area.

We want to give the industries a chance to testify and we want to conduct our own investigations before we make any recommendations. It is our responsibility to find out if anything can be done."

Brownell said he hopes the Commission's practice of persistent investigation will by itself elicit a positive response from the food industries. He said:

"The fact that we're looking into the area will provide an incentive to industries to look into the matter and to engage in efforts to reduce their prices or to at least hold the line on their prices. And perhaps our investigation will slow down the incentive to raise prices."

Co., Inc. of Wellesey. This company has furnished three eight-yard containers to hold the bottles: one for white, brown and green glass.

The contract began Sept. 15 and continues until June 30, 1976. The three containers have been donated by the company and in return, the city will receive no money for the glass.

Ricciuti said, "We are performing our part of a necessary service towards resource recycling in the city."

Take Fred, for example...he had tried to cope with his home situation for a number of years. The problem was that his wife, Connie, was continually having affairs with other men. Fred was a business man in the town, and he not infrequently was embarrassed by comments from other men about seeing his wife in some place with some man. She just couldn't be faithful. Fred tried to "understand" (not many men can). He tried to be patient...he put the children to bed because she was "out". He gave them breakfast in the mornings because Connie had had a short night and was still sleeping. Fred was going down under the burden that Connie had thrust upon him. Of course, he wasn't happy...wasn't

Living, Today

By Dr. William F. Knox
Personal Counselor

'That Contented Feeling'

"That contented feeling... what does it feel like... how does one get it? Dr. Liebman wrote so helpfully on Peace of Mind. Newman and Berkowitz tell us "How To Be Your Own Best Friend". But it remains for us, each person, to get these feelings. And we can, I know. I have... after being down so low that I could only look one way... up. Only one who has been down there in discouragement and depression and has climbed back up emotionally can fully appreciate "that contented feeling".

Circumstances of life do affect our happiness. Of course, one can't be happy without peace and contentment within himself. But let's not kid ourselves... the surrounding conditions of our lives do affect our peace and happiness. I suppose one can be happy, the victim of squalor... disease... discrimination. But that's not the kind of contentment I'm talking about. I mean that state of mind where one feels exuberant... vital... eager for joyful activity... both with oneself and other people... where one's mind isn't racked with worry over pressures and troubles.

He had tried to cope with his home situation for a number of years. The problem was that his wife, Connie, was continually having affairs with other men. Fred was a business man in the town, and he not infrequently was embarrassed by comments from other men about seeing his wife in some place with some man. She just couldn't be faithful. Fred tried to "understand" (not many men can). He tried to be patient...he put the children to bed because she was "out". He gave them breakfast in the mornings because Connie had had a short night and was still sleeping. Fred was going down under the burden that Connie had thrust upon him. Of course, he wasn't happy...wasn't contented... didn't have peace of mind. His office staff watched him going down... he just dragged through the days. At long last, Fred moved out... got a divorce... began to live again and regain his lost self image. It was slow in coming but he began gradually to find that peace and contentment which he had known before all the trouble started. How did he do it?

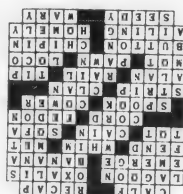

After the break-up Fred thrashed around for several weeks... did a lot of meaningless dating because he couldn't stand being alone.

He counselled with a competent counselor for a few sessions... he read some choice books which the counselor had suggested. This speeded up his recovery. Then he began to CHANGE HIS ATTITUDE. Fred had always been a person to hang in there to the bitter end. When he saw that this relationship with Connie was so destructive, he faced the fact. He had to come to accept the truth that he didn't really have a marriage... except in name. His attitude changed in the realization that there's more than one way to be happy and contented. They had lived on a small farm. The break-up necessitated the selling of the farm. Now he lives in an apartment. "I first thought it was second best," he said... "but now I'm seeing that it was my attitude toward what I had lost. I'm finding much contentment in my little pad now." Peace of mind and contentment usually means a change of attitude. If you can't have what you wanted, want something you can have. When you reach that point, like Fred, you'll have "that contented feeling".

McIntyre Has 'Mixed Emotions' About Returning To Arena

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Former Mayor-Senator James McIntyre still stirs speculation whether he goes.

Is he really thinking of returning to the municipal political arena? There's been considerable talk that [A] he was really thinking of running for mayor when they got his dander up during the cemetery probe hysteria and [B] since then he has been eyeing a council at-large seat.

Well, what does he say about it?

"I have mixed emotions about it really," he says with a smile. "It doesn't make much sense for me to come back after being mayor. But neither does playing golf-but a lot of people do it."

And somebody close to him chimes in: "But if he does, please-not for the city council."

McIntyre who rose to become one of the most powerful political figures in the city's history [still is] would be a hard man to top in any Quincy election.

He still attracts the handshakers wherever he goes.

In fact, at the recent reception at Ernest Montilio's home for Gov. Francis Sargent, McIntyre was the center of attraction until Sargent arrived. And when Sargent did arrive, he spotted McIntyre and gave him a big hello.

McIntyre has always toyed with the idea of running for the School Committee where he wouldn't become too politically involved. In fact, he always wanted to be a school teacher.

So maybe if he does come back, it will be for that. Meanwhile, the speculation will keep right on.

FORMER City Councillor Vincent Smyth is eyeing a comeback bid. Insiders say he is "very seriously" thinking of running for one of the two council at-large seats expected to open up next year. Smyth, of course, was Ward 6 councillor and also served two years as council president.

IT WAS A sentimental evening when Edward Keohane was installed Grand Knight of the North Quincy Knights of Columbus. Proudly looking on was his dad, Cornelius Keohane.

The elder Keohane was Grand Knight the year [1943] that young Keohane was born.

They are the council's second father-son Grand Knight team. The first such honor went to John J. Sullivan Sr. and John J. Sullivan Jr.

THAT ONCE no-man's land, the Quincy League of Women Voters, now has its second male member. Herbert Reppucci, running for state representative in the Fourth Norfolk District as an Independent, joined recently. The League's forum on the gun-control issue prompted him to apply for membership.

He thus joins Sam Greenwald of Merrymount, a teacher, and first male member. [Well, there's men's lib. too.]

TWO GOOD FRIENDS of ours [and just about everyone else's] are having a reunion this week. Tom Currier and Max Zides of Hum 'n Strum fame will appear for the first time together on radio in many years Friday at 4 p.m. on the Sherm Feller Show on station WRYT. The boys will spin a few of their old records and talk chat with the audience by phone.

The pair are retired from show business. Tom now lives in Reston, Va. Max is PR man at the Wollaston Boulevard Bowladrome. Tom and his wife, Helen, are up visiting Harry Carlson the Milton-Dorchester tire dealer. Tom and Max will get together with old acquaintances while here.

ADAMS SHORE'S Paul Harold was among 14 alternate delegates at-large elected by the Democratic State Committee to attend the mid-term national convention in Kansas City in December. Harold was elected from a field of 28 candidates at the state committee's meeting in Boston last Saturday. He was nominated by committee member Senator Allan McKinnon of Weymouth.

HONORS DEPT: Henry Nilsen, former city engineer, has been made a life member of the National Society of Professional Engineers-the only one in Quincy so honored. Nilsen served 40 years in the city engineering department-21 as top man. He'll be 75 in December but he's still quite active and spry.

THOSE HANDSOME MURALS at Peter's Landing [formerly Sherry's] are the work of Don Aikens, the one time Weymouth High School halfback during the latter heyday of Harry Arlanson.

OBSERVATION via Atty. Richard Barry: "If you speak while angry, you'll probably make the best speech you'll ever regret."

Busing: Solution Or Camouflage?

By WENDELL WOODMAN

BOSTON — A rose, said Willie Shakespeare, is going to smell like a rose no matter what we call it. But Willie was an incurable romantic and was never exposed to the literary offerings of the United States Supreme Court.

After promulgating the new Civil Rights Code, our regional Congress, in the person of Judge W. Arthur Garrity Jr., told a Westinghouse Network editorial board that news coverage of his encyclopedic decision had been inaccurate and misleading.

He had not decided to integrate the schools, he said. He had decided to desegregate the schools.

Which makes all the difference in the world.

What happened in South Boston was not a protest. It was a rally.

People weren't stoning the buses. They were participating in the President's Physical Fitness Program.

They weren't smashing public property. They were remodeling it.

The block parties were not angry demonstrations. They were assemblages of good neighbors socially interrelating.

With Louise Day Hicks playing the role of reluctant enforcer and the other politicians trying to undo the knots they spent 10 years braiding, some sanity began to creep through the pandemonium. That was something.

But it does not address the issues obscured by busing.

It is the easy course for any politician with a crackpot idea to accuse anyone who opposes it of being a racist bigot. In the case of busing, we simply line up the pros and cons in neat little packets and mark them "racist" or "Christian".

"Rose is a rose is a rose is a rose."

—Gertrude Stein

This is much more convenient than trying to expound or explain why the idea is valid in the first place.

I am reminded of the perverse mentality that concocted the so-called National Citizenship Test that CBS aired about 10 years ago so that viewers could rate themselves on a scale of 10 as liberals, moderates or conservatives.

The questions were sophomoric, but the real gem was the one about whether a black person should be allowed to sit on a jury. Naturally the liberals thought it was okay, and the conservatives knew it wasn't.

Ergo: Conservatives are racists; liberals are Christians.

Must it follow because someone has called it the rule that people who object to having their children carted all over creation are racists?

Does prejudice accompany dissent the way the smell accompanies the rose?

What can be said of the problems in government and law that might be raised if busing were not such a clear-cut question of bigotry?

Can we ask, for example, why the Commonwealth went to the trouble and expense of holding a plebiscite this year in the city of Boston on the single question of forced busing?

The voters were told that they could register their thoughts on an advisory referendum for the purpose of giving their government some guidance and direction. They voted about 32,000 to 2,200 against forced busing.

Having played the game of democracy for an instant, the voter was summarily overruled by one man. Imagine — 32,000 racists trying to plunder 2,200 Christians!

And what about education? Massachusetts law guarantees — guarantees! — uniform and equal standards of education. The law says that the standard of education in Boston is the same as in Braintree.

We know that isn't true. We know that the communities that can afford to qualify for greater state aid get greater state aid, at the expense of the communities that can't afford it. How do we solve this problem? We buy buses. We assign children to attend schools that are inferior because the state has failed to apply the uniform standards the law requires.

The very fact of busing is enough reason to abolish the State Board of Education. It is a prima facie case of incompetence.

At last we come to the government itself.

Can you imagine anything calculated to strike more fear into the heart of a parent than entrusting the care and safety of a child to the government?

This government couldn't organize a coffee clutch. It has a reverse Midas touch. Everything it dunks a finger in turns to vinegar.

His Honor is not integrating the schools; he is desegregating them. You will notice, however, that he is not improving them. Neither is anyone else.

Busing is not a solution. Busing is a camouflage. It is a "Christian" camouflage to hide a very unChristian situation.

But we thank you, Judge Garrity, for morally uplifting our failures.

Can New Resident

Vote In Nov. 5 Election?

"Can I register to vote in the Nov. 5 state election even though I have just moved to Massachusetts?" asked a new resident calling the Voter Information Phone of the League of Women Voters.

The caller was told to go to his city or town hall to register before Tuesday, Oct. 8 to be eligible to vote on Nov. 5. To register you must be a citizen of the United States, 18 years of age on or before Nov. 5, and a resident of the community in which you register at the time you register. There is no longer any set waiting period before registering from a new address, therefore people may register to vote in a new community immediately upon moving there.

You can register at city or town hall during normal business hours or during the additional evening and Saturday registration hours required by law prior to the Oct. 8 cutoff date. Call your city or town hall for details on extended hours.

This question is one of the many now being received by the League of Women Voters Voter Information Phone. Individuals with any questions on government may call the VtPhone Monday through Friday between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. The number in the Boston area is 357-5880.

Appreciates Fairness

Editor, Quincy Sun:

I note by your edition Thurs. Sept. 19 that you now are celebrating your seventh year in business.

Congratulations and best wishes for your continued success.

You have always been fair with the working people and the members of organized labor.

We appreciate your fairness and the good job you are doing.

Editor, Quincy Sun:

I am currently enlisted in the United States Coast Guard and I just thought I'd take the time to tell you how much I enjoy reading your paper.

I am stationed on a large ocean vessel and we're doing scientific studies of the coast of Senegal, Africa. We spend many weeks at sea and it is really great when we pull into port to get The Sun because it tells good news about back home [Quincy] and it has a really good sports section on the city.

Keep up the good work because the "Quincy Sun" is truly a unique paper that just tells good home city news!

Quincy Savings Bank Presents

Scholarship Gifts At Rotary Meeting

By JAMES COLLINS

Quincy Savings Bank president Charles Pearce presented gifts for the Scholarship Fund of the Quincy Rotary Club, Quincy Kiwanis Club, and the Archbishop Men's Club at the weekly luncheon-meeting Tuesday of the Quincy Rotary Club at the Neighborhood Club.

The gifts were given in appreciation of the cooperation the three clubs gave in promoting a local concert by The Bostonians sponsored by the Quincy Savings Bank. Pearce is president of the bank.

The checks were received by representatives of the three organizations. The speaker at the meeting was Richard Riley of North Quincy High School who described Quincy as a wonderland of Archeological treasures.

He told how young scholars armed with picks and shovels are unearthing wonders of the past. O. Donald Gohl, program chairman, presented Pearce who made the presentation to representatives of the three organizations.

It was announced that the speaker for next Tuesday will be former Quincy newsman John R. Herbert, Secretary of the Massachusetts Publishers' Association. He will discuss "The European Attitude Towards the United States". He is a former managing editor of the Patriot Ledger and more recently editor of the Boston Herald.

Conroy: 'What Can I Say?'

By TOM SULLIVAN

The addition of a 10th game worked out the wrong way for the Quincy football team and Coach Hank Conroy has been working hard on all departments of the game this week in preparation for Saturday's 1:30 game against Weymouth South at Weymouth's Legion Field.

Both Quincy and Weymouth will be trying to rebound from one-sided defeats. The Presidents were handed a 40-6 thrashing by an underrated Dedham team last week at soggy Veterans Memorial Stadium, while South was defeated by Hingham, 27-6. It rained heavily for the greater part of both games.

The 40-6 loss was the worst defeat for the Presidents since 1966 when Medford rolled to a 44-6 win.

Saturday's game at Weymouth will be Quincy's second non-league game. The Presidents don't open their first Suburban League season until Oct. 12 against Waltham.

Last week's opener against Dedham, a new opponent but one which Quincy has scrimmaged for the past several years, was a disaster from the start as 140 yards in penalties which stopped several drives and the passing of Pete Temple killed the Presidents. Dedham was one of several teams which raised the prestige of the Bay State League in opening games against non-league opponents.

"What can I say?" asked Conroy. "They outplayed us in every facet of the game and they certainly deserved the win. We were very poor in all departments and they just blew us out of the stadium. We are going to have to work hard all week in preparation for Weymouth South, which has always given us trouble, and I will have to make some changes."

"The only player I can single out is Preston Carroll, who ran well but penalties ruined several of his runs and plagued us all day. The defense was as poor as I've ever seen it. But, give Dedham credit, they were far more ready for the game than we were and they have a real good team."

Things went wrong for Quincy from the outset. Ted Wiedemann returned the game's opening kickoff all the way to his 49 but a penalty pushed Quincy back to its 13 and the Presidents never recovered.

Quincy was forced to punt, and the kick went to Dedham's 40 and was returned to the Quincy 46 from where Dedham marched to its first touchdown, a one-yard plunge by Tom Robertson, who scored three touchdowns. Chris Tighe kicked the first of four extra points.

Following another Quincy punt, Dedham drove 80 yards for its second score, which came on the first play of the second period.

A 14-yard pass from Temple to Tighe and a beautifully

THE ONLY BRIGHT spot in an otherwise dreary afternoon for the Quincy football team last week came when Preston Carroll returned a kickoff 92 yards for the only score for the Presidents. Here Carroll crosses the goal line, all alone.

executed 48-yarder between the same pair brought Dedham to Quincy's 13. Four plays later Temple passed to John Giacobbe for 15 yards and a TD, and Tighe again converted.

Carroll gave the Quincy fans their only chance to cheer when he returned the ensuing kickoff 92 yards for the lone President score.

A three-yard run by Robertson and Tighe's kick made it 21-6 soon after and Giacobbe intercepted a Jimmy Forrester pass, one of four Dedham interceptions, and ran it back 21 yards for the third touchdown of the second period. Tighe's fourth straight successful kick made it 28-6 at the half.

In the third period Robertson scored from the two and Tighe missed his only conversion attempt, and in the final quarter Pete Wons went over from the four.

So, it is back to the drawing board this week for Quincy. "A good team has the ability to bounce back. We'll see this week if we are a good team," Conroy concluded.

Dedham gained a net of 144 yards rushing to just 25 for Quincy, added 122 yards passing to 69 and ground out 11 first downs to seven. While Quincy was penalized 140 yards, Dedham was hit for only 20 yards.

Frazier: 'Hope It's A Dry Field'

Raiders Look For No.1 Against Malden

North Quincy's football team, now in the Suburban League, hosts old Greater Boston League rival Malden Saturday at 1:30 at Veterans Memorial Stadium and Coach Ralph Frazier is hoping for a dry field.

Last week the Raiders renewed an old rivalry with neighboring Milton after a lapse of more than 5 years and suffered an 8-6 upset on a Milton field which quickly turned into a quagmire in the heavy rain. Milton is one of several Bay State League teams to open with upset wins over Suburban Leaguers.

Frazier is wary about this week's opponent, which scored twice in the final six minutes to defeat Chelsea, 18-14, last week.

The North Quincy-Milton pairing was made possible when high schools were allowed to add a 10th game to their schedule this year. Not only did it match up former rivals of many years but also matched Frazier with a former assistant, Jack Bowes, who took over the Milton reins a year ago.

"We lost to a very good Milton team which maintained its cool and did a good job," Frazier said. "Jack [Bowes] has done a fine job with them. He had a rebuilding job and he appears to have done that job.

"I don't want to take anything away from them, but I honestly feel the wet field hurt us more than it did them. We have another small, fast team which needs a dry field to operate on and I just hope we play Malden on a dry field. Our backs just couldn't run and cut back as they should and, of course, it was next to impossible to pass."

Frazier had words of praise for his team and said, "We have a good team. Both teams made mistakes today but, while ours hurt us, theirs didn't seem to hurt them. They took advantage of our mistakes but we didn't do likewise. Defensively we played a good game but, as I said, our offense just couldn't get going."

Brian Doherty, who scored North's touchdown, was hailed for his ball carrying, and Mike Meehan, in his first start as varsity quarterback, also received the plaudits of his coaches for his ball handling in the mud.

Defensively, the coaches singled out Dennis McGuire and John Gallagher, but all agreed the entire defensive unit did an outstanding job.

The only scoring came in the second period.

Milton scored when it gambled with a pass from its 10-yard line to take it out of danger, then Kevin Blake broke loose for a 74-yard touchdown run. The winning points came on a pass from Dave O'Neill to John Taylor.

North came back when Doherty scored from the 10-yard line on an option play but Meehan missed by an inch of scoring the tying points.

North Hosts Newton, Meets Quincy Tuesday

The North Quincy soccer team, which suffered its first loss last week, will host Newton in a Suburban League game Saturday at 10 a.m. at Montclair Field.

The Raiders hoped to rebound yesterday [Wednesday] when they played at Waltham and next Tuesday will meet Quincy at Montclair.

Meanwhile, Quincy, also enjoying a fine start in its new league, will play at Brookline Saturday at 10. The Presidents yesterday hosted Weymouth North.

Both teams went into yesterday's games with 3-1-1 league records following last Friday's games.

North lost to Brookline, 1-0, on a penalty kick, despite outplaying the winners throughout the afternoon.

"We had so many chances, but their goalie was outstanding," Coach Lou Ioanilli said. "We outshot them, 25-12, but just couldn't put the ball past the goalie."

Ron Martin's Quincy booters tied a good Brookline team, expected to be one of the Suburban League powers, 2-2.

North Quincy continued to roll merrily last Friday when it rolled over Weymouth North, 5-0.

Walter Melton and Peter Donovan each scored twice to spark the Raider romp and John Penella scored the other. John Mackey, Steve Martinelli and Dave Adams had assists. North continually kept the pressure on Weymouth goalie Mark Rennie, who had an outstanding day with 25 saves. As usual, Ken O'Sullivan and Gary Nankin shared the North goaltending duties.

Quincy defeated Cambridge Latin, 3-1, as Joe McEacheran scored on a penalty shot to get the Presidents started. Glen Schlager and Bob Barrus had the other Quincy goals and Marco DiCenzo and Ken Donovan had assists. Sophomore goaltender Mike Kennedy had to make only eight saves.

●Cross Country

Quincy, North Bow

The Quincy and North Quincy cross country teams were unsuccessful last week in their Suburban League debuts and yesterday [Wednesday] hoped to rebound from opening day defeats.

Quincy ran at Cambridge Latin and North at Waltham.

Monday both teams ran over the new Merymount Park course, Quincy meeting Rindge Tech and North facing Weymouth North. Next Thursday it will be Brockton at Quincy and North at Weymouth South.

In its opener at Brookline Tom Hall's inexperienced Quincy team, which lost its top three runners, one to football, one to soccer and the other to after-school employment, bowed, 23-32.

Brookline's Steve Hunt was the meet winner. The Presidents had their five scorers among the top 10 with Bob Thorne third, Frank Yee fifth, Kevin O'Brien seventh, Charlie Park eighth and John Ross ninth. Also running were John Haapanen, Mike DeAngelo, Sam Gravina, Ed

Coletta and Ron Hartikka.

Lou Tozzi's North runners lost their debut to Rindge, 23-26, over the new Quincy course.

North Junior Bart Petracca, expected to be one of the best in the league, showed he had recovered from injuries suffered when struck by a car, when he won the meet in 12:34, beating out Roberto Cooper, the league's two-mile outdoor champion.

Art Barrett placed fourth and his brother Ken eighth for the Raiders. The other scorers were Mark Canavan and Ken O'Brien.

• Executive League Greens, Reds Win

The expanded Quincy Executive Hockey League opened the season Sunday.

The six unit league will play every Sunday night through the winter season.

The Green Team edged the Gold team 5-4. In the opening period Buckie Zanardelli scored for the Greens with Jim Daly and Bob Connell getting assists. The Green team came back strong with Marty Tolson scoring for the Gold team; Art Boyle and Paul Hussey got assists.

In the second period Smokey Adams scored for the Greens with Phil Clark assisting. In that same period Bibby Adams scored a pair of goals for the Golds with Boyle, Tolson and Frank McAuliffe assisting.

In the third period O'Connell, Zanardelli, and Jim Daly scored for the Greens. Daly and Bob O'Connell were credited with assists.

In the second game the Red team defeated the Blue team 9-2. In the first period Gary DeCoste had a pair of goals and John Murphy had a single goal.

Charlie Duffy and Charlie Hurley got assists. Dave Hickey scored for the Blues with Len Picot assisting.

In the second period John Murphy and Ken Halloran scored two goals apiece for the Reds with Jack Hurley and Charlie Duffy assisting. Dave Hickey scored for the Blues with Bob Hayes assisting.

In the third period Gary DeCoste and Dick Reinhardt scored for the Reds with John Murphy and Charlie Duffy getting assists.

In the third game the White team defeated the Maroon team 4-2.

In the first period Joe Gannon scored for the White team unassisted. In the second period Jay Evans tied the score for the Maroons with Ed Dwyer assisting.

In the third period the White team broke the game wide open. A trio of goals was scored by the trio, Bill Marston, Wayne Cooper and Harry Crispo. Frank Furey, Jack Powers and Joe Gannon scored assists. The Maroons got a single goal by Dave Egren with an assist by Ray Laberge.

Quincy, North Hockey Games Planned At Youth Arena

Quincy and North Quincy High hockey fans may be getting a break with the schools moving into the Suburban League this year.

Arrangements are expected to be completed this week to have the Presidents and Raiders play their home games at the Quincy Youth Arena, thus ending the trips to the Boston Arena, where the two schools had played their Greater Boston League games.

The only thing bothering local officials is the possible crowd problem when the local rivals meet. The Youth Arena seats only a little more than 400.

QYHA Meeting Monday

The Quincy Youth Hockey Associations annual meeting will be held Monday, Sept. 30 at North Quincy Knights of Columbus Hall, Hollis Ave., and Hancock St., at 8 p.m.

Recreation Part-Time Job Deadline Oct. 2

City Recreation Director William F. Ryan announces that those seeking part-time employment in the Recreation Departments Winter Program must submit applications before 4:30 p.m. Oct. 2.

Applications are available in the Recreation Department office, Room 30 of the John F. Kennedy Health Center. Those persons who have worked for the recreation department in the past must reactivate their old application by submitting a letter to the recreation director before the deadline.

Elks, Raiders Win Openers

The Quincy Elks and St. Gregory's Raiders were the season opener winners in the Quincy Youth Football League Sunday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The Elks defeated the North Quincy Apaches, 6-0 in the first game. The game in regulation time ended in a scoreless tie, but under the new rules adopted this year, an overtime period was played. Two key plays gave the Elks the victory. The Elks took to the air with a pass from Terry Hanratty to Mike Manni for the touchdown.

In the other game St. Gregory's defeated the Quincy Point Panthers by a score of 14-0. Touchdowns were scored by Jack Boyle on a 65-yard run in the first period. Leo Romano rushed the conversion point.

In the third period the Raiders scored again. Fullback Philip Gilpen went over from the 6-yard line capping a 70-yard touchdown drive.

Defensively Ed Romano and Neil Cronin put pressure on the Panther's backs. Line backers Jim DeLuca and Mike Drago stopped the Panther's offense with key tackles.

The Panthers, defending champions of the Quincy Youth Football League, hope to rebound next Sunday when they meet the aggressive Houghs Neck Manets.

Impressive ceremonies preceded the two games.

The ceremonies opened with the invocation offered by Rev. William McCarthy, spiritual director of St. Gregory's Raiders of Dorchester.

Officials present included Senate Counsel and former Mayor James R. McIntyre, Quincy City Council President Arthur Tobin who brought the greetings of the city from Mayor Walter J. Hannon; Rep. City Councillor Clifford Marshall; Rep. Joseph E. Brett; City Councillors Dennis Harrington and Leo Kelly; School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon; and Park-Recreation Board Executive Secretary Richard J. Koch.

The ceremonial kickoff was booted by Marshall to the team captains with Tobin holding the ball. Honors to the flag were rendered by a Marine Color Guard from the Marine Reserve Training Detachment from the South Weymouth Naval Air Station.

Provost, Burke Shine

Many former Quincy and North Quincy football players are playing college ball this fall but two in particular had outstanding games last Saturday.

John Provost, former Quincy High ace and one of the finest defensive backs in New England, had a phenomenal afternoon as he sparked Holy Cross to a surprisingly easy 45-10 win over Brown.

Provost scored two touchdowns on punt returns of 85 and 59 yards and equalled the Holy Cross career record with four pass interceptions, giving him 21 for his career. He is third highest on the NCAA list and, with 10 games remaining, has a good chance of catching the NCAA leader, Illinois' Al Brosky, who intercepted 29, from 1950 to 1952.

Sharing the local spotlight with Provost was Tom Burke of Northeastern, a former brilliant running back at North Quincy. Burke, who didn't play football at North until his senior year, scored three touchdowns in a thrilling 48-36 loss to Rhode Island, twice running as he picked up 82 yards in 12 carries, and one on a pass reception as he caught six for 124 yards.

Other former Quincy and North players excelling for Holy Cross were North's Bobby Morton, the starting quarterback although only a sophomore, who did some tremendous punting in the rain; Joe Morrissey of North, a fine tackle, and Paul Picarski, Provost's roommate and former Quincy teammate, who also had a pass interception and starred throughout the game on defense.

'Nudity Here To Stay'

Blaze Starr: A 38 DD Heart To Match

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Blaze Starr who gets paid for taking her clothes off in public, thinks girls are sexier with them on.

But the blazing red-haired burlesque star is convinced nudity is here to stay and she's going to keep on peeling—all the way.

"You have to change with the times," she says. "So now I take everything off."

She took it all off for her very first time last week in an engagement at the Pilgrim Theater in Boston—her first trip here as a performer in seven years.

"I felt scared," she confesses. "I was afraid I might get arrested. But it's all legal now as long as you don't get filthy with the audience."

How did the audience like it? "They went wild," she smiled. "Two businessmen actually stood up and applauded."

Blaze, who has been stripping for 26 years and frankly admits to age 42—but doesn't look it—thinks nudity is here to stay.

"You can see as much today walking down the street as you could on the stage when I first started," she says. "And you're going to see a lot more. They'll soon be wearing complete see-through dresses."

"It's never going back to the way it was with long hemlines and stuff like that because men won't tolerate it. They don't want women hidden."

People tell her she reminds them of Elizabeth Taylor but she shrugs it off: "Nobody looks like Liz Taylor. They throw away the mold after her."

Blaze has turned author and hit the jackpot.

"I'm making more money now than I ever did because of my book," she discloses. "The book is selling well. People who see me perform buy it. And people who buy it come to see me perform."

The book, "Blaze Starr, My Life As Told To Huey Perry" first appeared last June and has caused somewhat of an uproar.

In it, she claims she had an BLAZE STARR, with her book that has caused an uproar since its appearance in June. She even took a lie detector test because of it.

affair with Philadelphia Mayor Frank Rizzo when he was a vice-squad police captain in the 1950's. Rizzo denies it.

"I was madly in love with him," she says. "But all I was to him was a show girl."

She writes she was engaged to Gov. Earl Long of Louisiana.

"He was divorcing his wife to marry me," she says. "But he died before the divorce became final."

He also lost his bid for a fourth term. "I was the blame for that," says she.

She also recalls how a burglar waited for her in her Maryland apartment one night and tried to rob her of the jewelry Long had given her. She fought him off at a cost of 122 stitches.

Everything in the book is true, she insists.

"I even took a lie detector test and passed it."

And if you don't believe the one about the 122 stitches, she still has the scars to prove it and will gladly show you a few.

She estimated 80 percent of those who buy the book are women but don't ask her why because she doesn't know. Obviously their husbands or boy friends must borrow it.

She's been married, and once is enough for her. And she's getting pretty particular about who she goes out with.

"I've had all that passionate love stuff, the bumps and the gigolos. You can keep them."

Blaze's only real passion now is roses which have become a part of her act. It's the way she "holds" them.

Blaze's real name is Fannie Belle Fleming and she comes from Wilsontale, West Va., a town that a girl with a name like that should come from. It's actually a "mail stop" population: 40.

Well, how did a nice girl like that get to taking her clothes off in the big city? Simple:

"I was playing guitar with this group. And somebody told me I should be a stripper."

Blaze admits she has a 38-DD bust. What she doesn't tell you is that she also has a heart to match.

She is active in a number of worthwhile charities but her favorite is helping the veterans who are patients at Walter Reed Hospital.

She owns the Two O'Clock Club in Baltimore and when she can, she entertains the wounded vets either with a pool party at her home or at the club.

She just closes the club to the public on a Saturday night to put on a complete show there for the patients. She even has police posted to be sure the public doesn't get in.

"Saturday's a big business night, why pick a Saturday night," someone once asked. "You lose money that way."

"Because," replies Blaze, "they never said they couldn't fight for us over there when it was a Saturday night."

Priest, Nun Ministry Teams

'A Good And New Beginning' For All Ages At St. John's

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

September is a time of new beginnings.

The listless, languid days of summer are gone for another year. The color-changing leaves and the crisp, clear days of autumn spread a feeling of awakening and renewal over the land.

September is a time for new beginnings.

Sister Barbara Gianino, O.P., now living at the St. John's Convent, sees "a good and new beginning" for St. John Parish. The church is now initiating a "team ministry approach" which uses the talents and ingenuity of 12 nuns and priests.

Seven sisters and five priests will be working together on distinct yet interdependent teams within a team all formed to fulfill the needs of parish members of all ages.

Three major areas have been tagged for attention by the team members: Christian doctrine classes for students in grades 1-12, adult education and parish ministry.

Both Sister Denise Kelly, C.S.J. and Sister Patricia McGue, C.S.J. will be working on a team with Rev. Lawrence Pratt to coordinate religious education for the 700 parish youngsters in grades 3-6.

Parents for the most part, will teach groups of children in private homes throughout the year. Calling this year "a growing year" for the team ministry approach at St. John's, Sister Denise said:

"The idea of sharing in the responsibility of the parish is fantastic. I know it will be a strengthening of the parish."

The religious education team will meet monthly with teaching parents to plan lessons and talk over any problems. Sister Denise is hopeful that parents as well as children will benefit from the program. She said:

"We hope to build community among the teachers, giving them a sense of confidence in their ability to teach...instilling in them a knowledge of their own leadership qualities, making them aware of their role in the church."

Interaction is the hallmark of the team ministry approach. Sister Patricia said, "The team ministry approach is going to help so much. We've always had the backing of the priests, but now it's a new support. We're working together, discussing topics in a new way."

Forming a second religious education team are Sister Mary Elaine Twitchell, S.N.D., coordinator of grades seven, eight and nine, Sister Carol Ann Powers, C.S.J., coordinator of grades 10 and 11, and Rev. William Carroll, curate and coordinator of religious education programs in grades 7-12.

Sister Mary Elaine is offering junior high schoolers a range of options in religious education including a unique "Quest Program". Students enrolled in this program will be involved in independent yet guided study with a qualified person. The student will be encouraged to discuss with parents and advisors Biblical passages in order to unfold a deeper understanding of their faith.

The ninth grade religious education course prepares the student to receive the sacrament of Confirmation. In planning the year's program, Sister Mary Elaine stresses personalism as well as service to the

Regardless of the particular project chosen, each student can not only express himself, he can also give of himself.

Sister Mary Elaine also hopes to work closely with the students' parents by initiating morning coffee hours to discuss adolescent psychology and basic approaches to Christian living.

Sister Laetitia Ann Campbell, O.P., and Fr. Pratt compose the adult education team. In mapping out a course outline, Sister Laetitia and Fr. Pratt have included a faith renewal program as well as discussion of the Old Testament.

However, Sister Laetitia emphasized that the program must be geared towards the people. She said:

"We want the program to meet the needs of the people and not to impose programs."

Speaking of the entire team ministry approach in St. John's, Sister Laetitia said:

"I'm very, very hopeful about it, especially for the women of the church. Not just religious sisters alone, but for the women of the parish to see themselves in a different light by reason of the responsibility we share in the ministry of Christ."

The third major team-within-a-team, has three members: Sister Barbara Gianino, O.P., Sister Jean Mulloy, C.S.J. and Rev. John J. Tierney, pastor of St. John's.

Speaking of the goals of this program, Sister Barbara said:

"We want to be responsive to the people's needs and concerns...whether at times of crisis, times of joy, times of mourning, or times when someone needs counseling."

The team will also visit private homes as well as homes for the elderly and hospitals.

Sister Barbara, enthused about the team ministry approach, commented, "As we function as a team, we'll set a definite good beginning for the parish. The entire team approach says so much about the Gospel message."

Rev. Joseph Connolly and Rev. David Delaney are also participating in the team ministry approach. Father Connolly's list of activities include senior citizens projects, youth activities and pre-cana programs. Father Delaney visits parishioners in Quincy City Hospital and in rest homes throughout the city.

It is indeed a new beginning for St. John's parish.

Dr. Creedon: 'Outmoded And Antiquated'

New H.S. Needed Despite Enrollment Dip

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon says the "outmoded and antiquated" North Quincy High School must be replaced despite an evident downward trend in school enrollment.

Official figures have not yet been compiled, but Dr. Creedon estimates this year's overall enrollment is down "about 400 students". Last year's total enrollment was 16,203.

Thus, for the first time since 1965 - when enrollment was 15,738 - Quincy's student population has dipped below the 16,000 mark.

North Quincy High School, including grade nine, had an enrollment of 1,932 last year. Dr. Creedon estimated that this year's figure will decrease "by 75-100 students."

A glance at North Quincy's enrollment figures from 1969-1973, shows a decrease except during 1971 when enrollment reached 2,073 from the 1,999 student population the year before.

During that same five-year period at Quincy High School, [grades 10-12] enrollment consistently increased until 1973 when the student population fell from 1,663 [in 1972] to 1,556.

In addition, figures during the same time-span show that enrollment in all five junior high schools has also fallen. At Broadmeadows and Quincy Point enrollment increased in 1971 only to decrease the following years. From 1971-1972, enrollment increased by one at Sterling Junior High. Both Atlantic and Central showed increases in 1970 but enrollment progressively declined thereafter.

In reference to the same five-year period, from 1969-1973, enrollment in all but three of the city's 22 elementary schools dropped. Decreases ranged from as little as one to as many as 109 students. Increases at the three schools were four [Daniel Webster], 25 [Quincy] and 75 [Francis W. Parker].

Regardless of this overall decrease in enrollment throughout the Quincy Public School System, Dr. Creedon considers the building of a new North Quincy High School a necessity. He said:

"The need for a new North Quincy High School is not based primarily on enrollment. It is based on the fact that the building is outmoded and antiquated and cannot serve as a high school today."

The North Quincy school was opened in 1927 as a junior high school, not as a high school. Four years later, the east wing was added and in 1936, the west wing was added, thus transforming the school into a six-year, junior and senior high.

In the 1950's, Quincy built Atlantic Junior High School, leaving the original NQHS structure - built as a junior high - a high school. Creedon said:

"The city never addressed itself to building a new high school. North Quincy has become more inadequate and more inadequate and more inadequate to serve as a high school."

Creedon noted that the addition of science laboratories, guidance counseling offices, foreign language laboratories, the media center and special needs classrooms all slashed the amount of existing classroom space.

Creedon added that these changes "had nothing to do with

Completes Investigation

Thaxter To Seek Indictments In Cemetery Department Probe

Special Investigator J. Blake Thaxter will go before a Norfolk County grand jury Friday to seek indictments in the Quincy Cemetery Department probe.

Thaxter told The Quincy Sun he has completed his investigation of alleged irregularities and was ready to bring evidence before the grand jury.

Thaxter, a former assistant district attorney from Cohasset, was assigned as special investigator by Dist. Atty. George G. Burke in June. He was nominated by the Norfolk County Bar Association after Quincy-Braintree Atty. Edward H. Libertine declined the assignment.

The investigation was triggered by the resignation of Cemetery Supt. Anthony Famigletti early this year. In his investigation, Thaxter probed the alleged re-sale of graves and other irregularities.

Total $17 Million

Only Half Of Tax Bill Due Nov.2

A total of 23,000 real estate taxbills totaling $17 million has been mailed to Quincy taxpayers.

Elmer K. Fagerlund, chairman of the Board of Assessors, said, "Most taxpayers have their bill in their hands now."

Yet only half of the payment is due Nov. 1, Fagerlund noted. He said, "Quincy taxpayers aren't used to receiving a bill which is payable in two parts."

Taxpayers already received a bill in May - a bill covering the period from Jan. 1, 1974 to June 30, 1974 representing the last phase of the transitional cycle of 18 months.

The taxbill mailed out last week covers a fiscal year beginning July 1, 1974 and ending June 30, 1975. This bill, however, is payable in two parts. Fagerlund said the first payment is due Nov. 1, while the second is due May 1, 1975.

Fagerlund noted that those who filed for tax exemptions in May need not file another exemption application for this new fiscal year.

He noted, too, that those who neglected to file for exemptions have until Dec. 15 to do so. Only the owner of record qualifies for tax exemptions, Fagerlund said.

Swan Boats For Quincy?

Rep. Joseph E. Brett suggests the Quincy Park Department implement a swan boat program at the soon-to-be-completed water basin located at the rear of Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Citing the swan boat rides given in Boston's Public Garden, Brett said:

"Such a program could stimulate a great deal of interest among families with children and could be a substantial tourist attraction to encourage visitors to our city."

Brett also suggested that "a moderate charge" for the swan rides could make the program "self-supporting."

"I believe the idea has merit," Brett said, "and I hope that consideration will be given to instituting such a program as soon as the area has been properly prepared."

Early-Bird Entries As $1,500

Quincy Heritage Contests Open

The $1,500 Quincy Heritage poster and slogan contests officially open today [Thursday] but early-bird entries are already being received.

The two contests, co-sponsored by the Quincy Savings Bank and The Quincy Sun have as their theme: "Quincy's Pride: Patriots, Presidents, Possibilities".

Deadline for submitting entries to either or both contests is Nov. 30.

For each contest there is a $300 first prize, a $100 second prize, a $50 third prize, four $25 prizes and 20 $10 prizes.

Forty-eight prizes in all: two $300, two $100, two $50, eight $25 and 40 $10.

The contests are open to Quincy residents only—but to residents of all ages. There is no entry fee or anything to buy. All you need is a little talent and/or imagination.

You may submit as many poster or slogan entries as your talent for drawing or putting words together permits. It's up to you.

But each entry has to be accompanied by an entry blank now available at The Quincy Savings Bank main and branch offices, Quincy public schools, City Hall, The Quincy Sun and Quincy Heritage offices and some businesses.

The entry forms are also being printed in The Quincy Sun and they may be used for submitting entries.

The winning poster and slogan will become part of Quincy's celebration of its own 350th anniversary and the nation's Bicentennial.

Mayor Walter J. Hannon and Rev. John Graham, executive director of Quincy Heritage, have both hailed the Quincy Savings Bank-Quincy Sun co-sponsored projects.

"What I like most about it is that it allows people of all ages and backgrounds to directly participate in the city's unique heritage," said Mayor Hannon. "All too often, citizens can only read about city programs as they unfold; rarely do they become involved dramatically in bringing them about. The extent to which the community becomes involved in Quincy Heritage will, in large measure, determine its success."

Rev. Graham characterized the contests as "symbolic of our major effort to stimulate citizen participation in Quincy Heritage programs."

Furor Continues

Hannon Plans Meeting On Blocking Of Academy Windows

Mayor Walter J. Hannon plans to call a meeting of the Adams Temple and School Fund concerning the blocking of the north and south windows of the Adams Academy.

Meanwhile, several city officials criticized the Quincy Historical Society for blocking the windows with cinder blocks to make more wall space as it renovated the academy into a museum.

Ward 1 Councillor Leo J. Kelly has asked City Solicitor Richard McCormick to look into the possibility of altering the city's lease of the building to the Historical Society.

The criticism followed an earlier announcement that the Adams Academy had been placed in the National Register of Historic Places in the United States.

H. Hobart Holly, president of Quincy Historical Society, said: "We fully appreciate the concern shown by the City Councillors but they have not come to us to hear our explanation of our plans and our actions. We naturally have a good reason for what we're doing and that reason goes back 10 years to our planning stages."

Holly continued, "This is not a preservation project. It is an adaptive one implemented to save a building. We're giving Adams Academy a new-lease-on-life by restoring it to a useful condition. We don't think we are hurting the building."

Holly said, too, that he was "anxious to meet with the city council" in order to get the matter resolved.

Councillor Kelly declared: "Now, more than ever, it's incumbent upon the Quincy Historical Society to restore the windows of the Adams Academy to their original condition."

"With this national recognition of both the architectural and historic value of the Adams Academy, the Quincy Historical Society has the responsibility to care for the building properly."

Kelly referred to a recent report to the City Council, made by George L. Wrenn III, associate director of the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities. The report indicated that in keeping with the architecture of the Adams Academy, the windows should be restored.

Geoffrey A. Davidson, City Director of the Department of Planning and Community Development said:

"For a year and one-half, the Historic District Study Committee has been working to develop an effective plan and ordinance for historic preservation in Quincy.

"The Adams Academy is an integral part of the proposed Quincy Center Historic District. Certainly, the Quincy Historical Society should be setting the standard for preservation work for the community. The blocking of the windows adversely affects the character of the exterior of this significant structure and violates the architects' design."

"It's now more than obvious that the need for measures to protect our historic buildings are essential."

The Quincy City Council will act upon the proposal for Historic Districts on Oct. 6.

Ward 5 Councillor Warren Powers also expressed concern:

"According to the Quincy Historical Society, the building renovations were to be completed by September, yet the work has progressed so slowly, I can't imagine it being finished before the first of the year."

"The reluctance of the Quincy Historical Society to respond positively to public sentiment as well as to Councillor Kelly's resolve which was passed unanimously by the City Council asking that the windows be properly restored, leads me to conclude that the Society is not responsive to the community."

Enrollment Down But New NQHS Still Needed, Says Creedon

enrollment." Rather, the school was adapting to a changing world and to increased scholastic demands.

According to the School Department's position paper entitled "Issues: North Quincy High School", enrollment in North Quincy High is expected "to stay nearly constant at approximately 2,000 students for the next decade."

Yet, whether enrollment at North Quincy is 2,000 or 200, Dr. Creedon contends that North Quincy High is "totally inadequate to accommodate the needs of a high school." He continued:

"The argument about the decline in enrollment is a non-argument. The issue is: 'Is this building suited for a high school, today?'"

Noting that Quincy High School has enjoyed "one addition after the other, [Quincy Trade, Quincy Voc-Tech]" Creedon said, "North Quincy has never had that kind of consideration."

Over-crowded for the past decade, North Quincy High presently has a two-year probationary accreditation.

Creedon said that if a new Quincy High School were built, Central Junior High would be closed, razed and the land would be returned to the city of Quincy "for commercial or private development." Creedon added that the area "could generate $120-$150,000 per year in taxes."

Construction of the new North Quincy High School would cost an estimated $8.2 million, representing between $3.07 and $3.47 on the tax rate during the first year of a 20-year bond. The rate would then decrease over the remaining 19 years, Dr. Creedon noted.

The City Council will hold a public hearing Tuesday, Oct. 29 to discuss the building of a new school at the old Squantum Naval Air Station, a 43-acre site. The hearing will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Quincy Vocational Technical School auditorium.

'Outdoor Living Room'

Work Starts On Downtown Mini-Park

Construction is underway on the first downtown Mini-Park.

Development Coordinator John Cheney hopes "to accelerate construction" so that it will be completed the third week in October.

The sidewalk on Hancock St. extending from Woolworth's to Remick's is being extended and converted into what Cheney calls "a living room out doors."

Designed by architect John Donahue, the mini-park will consist of four seating modules, each containing two trees - either green ash or green spire linden - L-shaped benches, lights and a trash bucket. The pavement within the mini-park will be red brick.

The $91,000 project marks the next phase of improvement in the downtown area. Earlier, the cost of the project was estimated at $60,000.

Quincy Planning Director Geoffrey Davidson noted that the mini-park plan was designed "for maximum flexibility." He said:

"The park could stand on its own, other mini-parks could be added along Hancock St., or the area could be adapted into a street-length mall."

Although Hancock St. will lose several parking spaces with the construction of the mini-park, Davidson said that two-way traffic will flow unhampered. He added:

"Automobiles and people don't mix. That's a basic principle of any shopping center. The building of this mini-park is a small, but in my mind, a symbolic step."

LIFE BEGINS AT 90 -- "You're never too old to begin somethin' new" seems to be the motto of Arthur Romanelli of Abigail Ave., South Quincy, the oldest person to volunteer his services to Quincy Heritage, the city's organization for the celebration of Quincy's 350th anniversary in 1975 and the nation's Bicentennial in 1976. Here Romanelli, talks with Mrs. Arthur Morrissey as they cruise along the Neponset River to investigate the remains of Bunker Hill Wharf, the terminal point of the first commercial railway built in America. The Granite Railway, which carried the granite that built Bunker Hill Monument, began in West Quincy.

No Reflection On Past

Davis Proposes 3 Or More Architects For Schools

School Committee member Harold Davis has proposed an amendment to the School Committee by-laws which would invite at least three architect proposals for future school projects.

Davis said the usual practice is to simply select one architect who then draws up plans for a proposed building. But Davis said he wants to "take advantage of unique and creative thinking" by inviting three architect plans which would offer varying approaches to the same project. He also said that an architect's credentials could be investigated.

Davis emphasized that his amendment in no way reflects upon the calibre of architects selected in the past by the city. His proposal simply aims at gathering a diversity of creative ideas for attacking a given proposal.

Davis' amendment would apply to school projects executed after Oct. 1 and estimated to cost in excess of $100,000.

Davis also seeks to amend an architect's payment system under which he receives a percentage of the project's completed cost.

Davis noted that if the cost of building material, for example, increases after a contract has been signed, the architect receives a larger fee even though he performs no added work.

The final selection of an architect now rests with the Mayor. The School Committee has therefore referred the Davis amendment to the office of the city solicitor in order to investigate any possible conflicts in the selection process.

Adoption no aid in shaky marriage

By PAT and MARILYN DAVIS
Copley News Service

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

My marriage is not the best and I have thought of adopting a child in order to bring the two of us closer. Do you think a child would help a shaky marriage?

Mrs. A.B.

Dear Mrs. A.B.:

NO. If you think you have a shaky marriage now, adopting a baby will surely bring on a full-fledged earthquake!

Why add a third person to your problem? Contact your minister, priest, or rabbi for counseling.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

What can I do about my husband? He spends money like there is no end to it. We both work and make a better than average income. However, we are in debt up to our ears.

Our financial affairs are making me very nervous. I simply cannot live like this. I feel we must make out a reasonable budget and stick to it in order to get out of debt. My husband refuses to discuss our problems with me. All he ever says is, "Oh, we can stay afloat."

Ann

Dear Ann:

Tell Hubby that your financial ship will sink if he doesn't get some sound advice and fast.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

I have been dating Larry for four months. I am 18 and he is 21. We have a problem — sex. Why should we deny ourselves the pleasure?

C.N.

Dear C.N.:

You could get pregnant for a starter and this brings problems not pleasure. However, extramarital sex is generally a very unsatisfactory arrangement. Keep the following facts in mind — promiscuity is no guarantee of popularity. Sex does not necessarily hold a young man's interest. Venereal disease is on the increase and "nice" people do get VD. Most girls do have a feeling of guilt which is not always so easy to live with. So think it over and decide against it.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

What can I do about my son who is an immature 19? He hasn't turned his hand since he graduated from high school. He refuses to attend college or a trade school. He has spent his summer surfing, bowling, and chasing girls.

The latest bomb was dropped last night. Dick informed us that he intends to move into an apartment with a friend and live his own life. He says he doesn't want any interference from us.

I'm afraid I'll get into some kind of serious trouble due to his lack of judgment and the company he is keeping. This friend has a very bad track record.

Dad

Dear Dad:

Tell your son the facts of life. Make it clear that if he moves out he must pay all of his bills. This may force him to work which will be a step in the right direction. Make it very clear that you do not intend to finance his immaturity.

Confidential to Wanda:

Face life more realistically. Girls who marry and envision themselves living like queens will be bitterly disappointed. No relationship between two people is perfect.

Rub-a-dub-dub, 8 in a tub

By ANN RUDY
Copley News Service

I read the ad twice to be sure I'd seen right, but there it was in black and white: an outdoor spa made of California redwood 5 feet in diameter and 4 feet deep that holds — brace yourself — eight people.

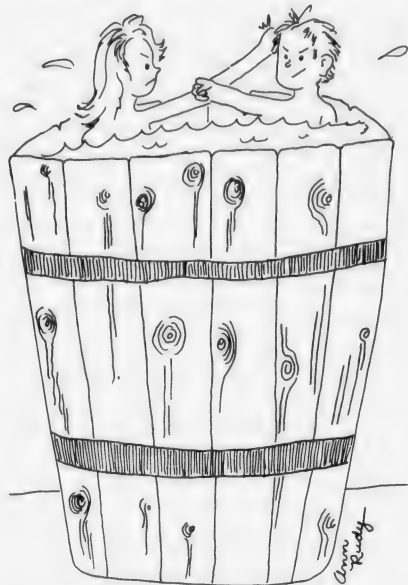

It's called the Original Santa Barbara Hotub and the ad claims it is like adding a room to your life. For around $2,150 the Hotub people will ship you this big wooden bucket and even come out to your house and assemble it.

But I don't know. I mean, I'd like to have the ultimate experience in home entertainment, as the ad promises, but how can that be in a bucket of hot vibrating water only 5 feet across? Our two kids can't even fit on our 6-foot couch.

Just last night our daughter jabbed a quick and aggressive elbow into our son's rib cage and hissed, "Move over! You're touching me." "Am not! Am not!" he screeched and there was a brief scuffle while they both fought for territorial supremacy.

Can you see the same two kids in a 5-foot Hotub with their father and me and four other unidentified bodies? I don't know what the Hotub people call entertainment, but I don't think they mean bringing the kids.

So let's say we invite three other couples over for the ultimate evening in the tub. All I can tell you is, the last time we had a party with three other couples one woman burst into tears from what I figure must have been housewife's fatigue buildup, and two husbands fell asleep.

Now you get that same group in a Hotub and you've got trouble. Right here in Hotub City.

But that doesn't mean I don't think there's a place for the Santa Barbara Hotub. No sir. Somewhere, there is a family of eight very thin, perfectly adjusted people.

The children volunteer for chores and the mother is a practicing psychiatrist. For these people, yes, getting into a little hot water might be a new — maybe even ultimate — experience.

STITCHING WITCHERY

tape wins bodysuit battle

By BETTY W. KINSEY
Copley News Service

Now that I have won, I can tell you about my running battle with bodysuits.

No matter what I chose to close the crotch with, the crotch chose not to cooperate.

First, I used the little snaps that come by the yard on fabric strips. They were easy to attach and looked fine, but the first time I bent over, my bodysuit came unsnapped, rolled up and slapped me in the face.

Next, I selected the sturdy, grip-tight snaps. They held great. Too great. Along about three in the afternoon I was threatening to cut my way out.

Third time's a charm. I found just the thing — bodysuit snap tape. Comes three snaps to a strip, two sets to a package. And they let me win every time.

ARIES: (March 21 to April 19 — Also Aries Ascendant) — Good time to visit with close kin and talk over old times. You can add much to the good of community organizations now. If you need a loan, go to a bank, not to a friend. Not a good time to loan your money either.

TAURUS: (April 20 to May 20 — Also Taurus Ascendant) — Take a seat on the sidelines of activity and learn by observing others in action. Good time to work on your budget and projections of future financial requirements. Catch up on correspondence — written materials.

GEMINI: (May 21 to June 20 — Also Gemini Ascendant) — A wish could be fulfilled now, but not exactly as you had planned. Get opinions from older and wiser heads regarding career. Indulging in light, superficial associations is good, but don't neglect the deeper affections.

CANCER: (June 21 to July 22 — Also Cancer Ascendant) — Enjoyment is promised in renewing a friendship from the past. It might possibly ripen into a marriage commitment later. Weigh all decisions carefully. Impulsive or hasty actions could work against you.

LEO: (July 23 to August 22 — Also Leo Ascendant) — Be especially cooperative now and share the spotlight with others. You are operating in "high gear" now and can accomplish much. Present projects for the approval of those in high positions while your cycle is "up."

VIRGO: (August 23 to Sept. 22 — Also Virgo Ascendant) — Resist feeling low about your love life and welcome new contacts now. Don't insist on perfection in others. You tend to be rather obstinate at this time with friends and relatives. Adopt a more tolerant attitude.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22 — Also Libra Ascendant) — Financially, this is a lucky period. Someone close to you who is ill should improve now. Good time to improve your personal appearance — shop for bargains. Guard against going on a "power trip" — curb temper.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21 — Also Scorpio Ascendant) — If you feel you are in a rut, instigate changes in routine and make your own excitement.

ment. Possibility of a change of residence. Don't get in too deep financially. Good time to research projects, ideas or plans.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21 — Also Sagittarius Ascendant) — Your spirits are high and there is a real joy of living felt. The financial pinch you may feel now is temporary. Your ability to learn your job very quickly will pay off in promotions and raises later on.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19 — Also Capricorn Ascendant) — You are in a low cycle now, so delay important decisions if possible. Let mate and associates take the lead and don't push issues in these relationships. Travel, advertising and communications are favored.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18 — Also Aquarius Ascendant) — You appear to be meeting much opposition now and the tendency is to lose your temper, composure and good judgment. Peaceful negotiation is the way out. Don't force issues or make important moves just now.

PISCES: (Feb. 19 to March 20 — Also Pisces Ascendant) — You should balance the books now regarding taxes, income, etc. Be sure all legal matters are up to date. Use your high intuition in writing projects. Submit old manuscripts now for probable acceptance.

By JOANNE B. ROMINE

There is no need for an introduction, the laugh says it all, and instinctively you sense impending hilarity. You are about to have an encounter with Phyllis Diller, and you are sure to enjoy every minute.

Behind the makeup and the "fright" wig, this delightful, witty comedienne is a very serious, sensitive woman. She is warm, friendly, and responsive, and thoroughly enjoys people. However, she isn't one to allow close relationships to develop with just anyone. She chooses her intimate friends carefully.

Her writing shows that she will listen to the ideas and opinions of others, and give serious thought and consideration to any idea with merit. She does not have a closed mind, nor is she inclined to be critical of others.

Mentally quick and sharp, she is very observant of what goes on around her. She accumulates knowledge, sifting, sorting and analyzing facts, retaining only that which is of value to her. She has the ability to handle details if she must, but she won't be happy long in this type of work.

She isn't content to view life through a microscope, seeing only parts of the overall scheme of things. Figuratively speaking, she wants to look at life from the top of a mountain, where the tiny flaws become insignificant and overpowered by all that is good and beautiful. This, in fact, is her basic philosophy of life.

When she zeroes in on someone you can be sure she is either hurt or angry — or both. In a situation like this, she isn't likely to beat around the bush or toy with diplomatic phrases. She'll tell it like it is, and use sharp, cutting words, to make sure the individual gets the point.

The Total Diller, is a nervous, high-gear, energetic, kind, sympathetic, generous woman. She discovered early in life how to pan the gold nugget of humor out of the soil of human experience. This takes courage, diligence and sensitivity — and Phyllis Diller has them all.

Diller fans can write to her in care of PhilDil Productions, 300 Park Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022.

Stay Alive!

FIRE IN THE THEATRE

It happened in the Iroquois Theatre in Chicago back in 1903. The theatre caught on fire and the patrons panicked and fought to get out through the main entrance. When the dust and smoke settled, firemen found dead bodies stacked up four feet high at the main entrance.

The ironic part of this tragedy was that several emergency exits in other parts of the theatre through which occupants could have escaped were not even opened!

A good rule to remember if caught in a fire in a public building such as a theatre is: don't try to automatically get out the same way you came in. In a panic, most people rush for the main entrance, crushing each other on the way. Always locate the nearest exit and plan to use it in an emergency. The real danger in such a situation is crowd panic — often more dangerous and deadly than the fire itself.

Birthrates lower in affluent nations

The more developed the country, the more likely it is to have low population growth, according to the World Population Conference.

Most of the world's highly industrialized nations, including Western European countries, Canada, Japan and the United States have low growth rates and are expected to maintain an overall downward trend. — CNS

Catholic Club To See Goodwill Fashion Show Oct. 16

The Goodwill Auxiliary to Morgan Memorial will continue their sixth season of performances of its popular fashion show, "Styles Through the Years" with a presentation to The Quincy Catholic Club at the Viking Club, 410 Quincy Ave., Braintree, Wednesday, Oct. 16 at 8:30 p.m.

The event is part of the regular monthly meeting of the group and begins at 8:30 p.m. after the business meeting. Refreshments will be served.

Mrs. Charles Jacobs, of Quincy, is president of the Quincy Catholic Club. Other club officers are Miss Virginia Ross, vice president; Mrs. Jack Buonopane, corresponding secretary; Miss Mabel Pratt, financial secretary; Mrs. William Boethel, recording secretary and Mrs. Erik Lindewall, treasurer.

Most of the styles in the fashion parade are antiques. Some date as far back as 1800. Most periods are represented up to the present day. The show has everything from highlaced shoes and ostrich-plumed hats to hot pants and mid-coats. A highlight is the display of undergarments from the year 1800.

Green Tomatoes Have Many Uses

Home gardeners with a surplus of green tomatoes need not lose the race with the frost, the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture [MDA] points out this week.

Green tomatoes can be used in many ways, the most common being as green tomato relish or old-fashioned piccalilli. But how much relish can one family consume?

That may depend upon the available supply of canning jars and tops, says the MDA. Some supplies are available, but finding them may be tough. The jar industry has admitted to falling far behind the current demand.

The fact is that green tomatoes, picked when nearly mature, will keep rather a long time when stored between 55 and 60 degrees...and will indeed ripen slowly. If you save only those free of blemishes, and hold them at a constant temperature - not below 55 - and inspect them weekly - you'll get a surprising number of ripe tomatoes as time goes on.

Keeping them at higher temperatures will ripen them faster.

Fried green tomatoes are an excellent dish. Slice tomatoes a little less than half-an-inch, dredge in flour or bread crumbs, and fry in a bit of fat until brown. Season to taste - an enjoy!

Pickled tomatoes have their devotees, too, and they need no canning. What they do need is a large crock with a cover, and someone about two generations back with a good old-fashioned recipe. Most modern cookbooks ignore this old world delicacy, so you'll have to find your own sources. Salt, strong vinegar, garlic and spices all get into the act, with the finished product much akin to the pickle barrel in the old general store.

Regardless of how you use them, says the MDA, tomatoes must be picked before the first frost. Frost damage shows up as water-soaked areas, with skin no longer firm and shiny.

Tomato farmers in central and western Massachusetts suffered some frost loss last week. Areas nearer the coast fared better, and many home gardeners are still ripening their tomatoes on the vine.

Woodward Fair Committee

Mrs. Eunice Gilford, principal of Woodward School for Girls announces the 1974 Woodward Fair Committee which, for the first time, is headed by parents.

Members are: Mrs. John Bagen, chairman; Mrs. Donald Deware, co-chairman and sweets shop; Mrs. Paul Brouillard, Christmas decorations; Miss Ruth Hurlbert, plantland; Mrs. John Morris, handknits; Miss Eileen Jacobs, pottery; Mrs. Edward Krause, country store.

Lawrence Yerdon, country storekeeper; Mrs. Henry Lapon, white elephants; Mrs. Clifford Millard, refreshments; Mrs. Fred Feely and Mrs. Richard Purnell, arrangements; Mrs. Robert Shine, handicrafts.

Mrs. Gilford said, "The faculty and I appreciate the fine cooperation, enthusiasm and expertise of those who have kindly assumed these responsibilities."

Interested parents, alumnae and friends are invited to attend Fair Crafts sessions held at the school on Monday evenings at 7:30 p.m. and on Wednesdays at 9 a.m. through Nov. 13.

Proceeds from the fair will benefit the Woodward Scholarship Fund and the Woodward Equipment Fund.

No Positive Solution Yet To Quincy Ave. Traffic Problem

Rep. Clifford Marshall recently met with three traffic engineers from the state's department of Public Works to discuss the pedestrian traffic problem on Quincy Ave. in the area of Scammell St., South St., Charlesmount Ave. and Southern Artery.

No positive solution to the problem was presented at the time. Marshall said, "This is a tough spot, there's no question about that."

He noted that surveys of traffic and pedestrian flow in this area were conducted as early as 1969.

After investigating the area, engineers concluded that the area's physical characteristics were not conducive to a good signal layout. In a letter to Marshall, Commissioner of Public Works Bruce Campbell said:

"Because of lack of proper access to Quincy Ave. from the area encompassed by Scammell St., South St. and Southern Artery, any signal installed to assist pedestrians would service relatively few residents."

Therefore, Campbell has requested his district highway engineer to investigate three possible actions which could ease the pedestrian problem: increase visibility for south-bound motorists by lowering the crest of the hill on Quincy Ave., install a curb on the easterly side of Quincy Ave., and determine the volume of pedestrian crossings by reviewing pedestrian activity during peak pedestrian-vehicular traffic flow.

Campbell noted that the proposed signal on Quincy Ave. at Faxon Park Rd would "unquestionably service pedestrians in that area" when installed. In the meantime, he said that pedestrian crosswalks will be painted across Quincy Ave. near the crest of the hill and in the vicinity of Charlesmount St.

'The Energy Problem' UN Council Topic Oct 10

The Energy Problem will be the first lecture-discussion for the United Nations Council of the South Shore's 30th season.

David Rose, Professor of Nuclear Engineering at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, will be the speaker on Thursday, Oct. 10 at 8 p.m. in the Parish Hall of the Church of the Presidents, Quincy Sq.

Since the energy problem affects everyone it has been the subject of much debate. Professor Rose thinks the debate has been unbalanced, even "dishevelled". Too much emphasis, he feels, has been put on the provision of energy rather than the conservation of it, and, when cost is considered, the social costs are often ignored or underestimated. He also believes that government has taken a short term view of the energy problem.

Rose has been a professor at M.I.T. since 1958, has been on an Advisory Committee for the White House and the National Academy of Science and Engineering. From 1969 to 1971 he was Director of Planning at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory in Tennessee.

Although his specialty is nuclear energy he will discuss the use of other forms such as coal and oil.

After the talk there will be a question period. Admission to the meeting is free, but there is a charge for the dinner preceding it at 7 p.m. Reservations for the meal should be made before Oct. 7 by calling either Miss Eleanor Brown, 59 Andrews Rd, or Miss Vera Call or Miss Edith Coulman, 1000 Southern Artery, all of Quincy. For students there are a few places reserved at a reduced price.

Parent Visiting Hours Increase At Hospital

A recent survey conducted by Children In Hospitals, Inc. (CIH) shows that Quincy City Hospital has increased its parent visiting hours.

CIH is a non-profit organization consisting of parents and health-care professionals who seek to liberalize hospital policies.

The CIH survey details the amount of family contact allowed by Boston area hospitals in the cases of a hospitalized child, maternity and a hospitalized parent.

At the fall public meeting of CIH, Dr. T. Berry Brazelton will speak on the topic, "Can A Hospitalization Be A Positive Experience For A Child?"

The meeting will take place Thursday, Oct. 10 at 8 p.m. in the auditorium at Boston Hospital for Women (Boston Lying-In), 300 Longwood Ave., Boston.

Other CIH activities include individual counseling as well as advice to hospitals wishing to liberalize their policies.

'Quality Education The Issue, Busing Not The Solution', Says Joyce Baker

At a recent reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Markakos, 315 Farrington St., Wollaston, Joyce I. Baker, candidate for state representative, in the Fourth Norfolk District, issued a statement on busing.

"I feel," she said, "that quality education is the issue and busing is not the solution.

Scholastic standards should be the same in all schools with special emphasis on minority and ghetto situations.

"If standards were the same, this should eliminate the need for busing. Direct neighborhood or community programs could be implemented to assist the schools. Schools should not be expected to perform the function of the home and community."

Mrs. Baker pledged, if elected, full-time representation with no other commitment other than to her constituents. She said that involvement by the electorate is more important than ever at this time in order "to preserve our way of government."

Vietnam-era Veterans Eligible For Low Cost Insurance

Ward 3 Councillor John J. Lydon Jr., chairman of the Veterans Services Committee, announces that an estimated 2.7 million Vietnam-era veterans can apply for low-cost Veterans Group Life Insurance (VGLI). Veterans separated from service between April 2, 1970 and July 31, 1974, have until Aug. 1, 1975 to apply for this insurance which is designed as interim protection during readjustment to civilian life.

Servicemen discharged since Aug. 1 will automatically receive application forms. Non-renewable, five-year term coverage is available.

Personnel may convert Servicemen's Group Life

Insurance to VGLI without medical examination if applications are received within 120 days of separation. Applications after that time must include evidence of good health. This requirement is waived for veterans with VA-related, service-connected disabilities.

Applications may be obtained from VA offices, veterans service organizations or from Councillor Lydon.

"We at the Quincy Savings Bank are pleased to join in partnership with Quincy Heritage and The Quincy Sun to co-sponsor these two contests that will set the tone for celebrating Quincy's 350th birthday.

"Even though there are many cash prizes to be awarded, I feel certain that a large number of citizens would still participate because of long standing ties and loyalties they have for Quincy."

Henry W. Bosworth, publisher of The Quincy Sun said:

"It is a privilege to be associated with The Quincy Savings Bank and Quincy Heritage in such a worthy civic project.

"We are proud of Quincy's rich historic past and we have the utmost faith in its present, future and possibilities. That is why we founded The Quincy Sun six years ago and why we carry with pride the name Quincy in our banner."

A panel of judges will be selected soon to select the contest winners.

The rules for entering the contests are simple:

National Guardsmen

To Hike 12 Miles For Youth

Members of the Quincy Army and Air National Guard will walk 12 miles throughout the area to benefit impoverished children through Horizons for Youth.

Quincy enlisted men and officers will leave their armory Sunday, Oct. 20, joining 70 other participating armories throughout the state. They will be accompanied by friends and other interested citizens.

Prior to the walk, members of the Guard and their friends will seek pledges from merchants, business and professional men, friends, relatives and neighbors as sponsors. All contributions received will go directly to Horizons For Youth.

Horizons For Youth is a unique youth-serving organization providing a variety of programs for needy and deserving youth. Through these programs, Horizons For Youth hopes to provide boys and girls with enriching experiences which help them to mature into citizens of character and responsibility.

Hannon Questions NQHS Industrial Park Feasibility

Mayor Walter J. Hannon says he "welcomes the idea" of exploring the possibility of an industrial park as part of the proposed North Quincy High School construction but he questions the feasibility of the move.

"Can we do it?" the Mayor said. "I understand there are problems in that area with the marshland."

City Planning Director Geoffrey Davidson said that city officials are engaged in "a continuing evaluation of all the proposed sites." He said:

"As new factors come up, we will continue to consider and to evaluate them."

Presently, several sites are under consideration. One is a 186-acre tract of Boston Edison land to the north of Jordan Marsh Warehouse. Hannon noted that the city has already spent $16,000 to survey this site and has received "a commitment" enabling the city to purchase the land for $1.8 million.

Nonetheless, other sites are under consideration. One is a proposal introduced by City Council President Arthur H. Tobin to build the new North Quincy High School at Squantum Gardens Naval housing project.

However, Hannon said that groundbreaking could be postponed as long as two years while waiting to attain this land.

Another proposed site is the area near the end of Victory Rd, Squantum. At one possible school location to the west of Victory Rd, there are six acres of marshland which would first have to be filled in.

Ward 6 councillor Dennis Harrington then proposed the building of the school on solid ground located on opposite sides of Victory Rd, but Hannon raised an objection. He noted that Harrington's plan would include a large tract of land which could clean money for development.

Yet Harrington contended that the construction of the facility on either side of Victory Rd would place the new North Quincy High School in the forefront of an industrial park structure. Few, Harrington said, would object to the school building.

A public hearing is scheduled to take place Tuesday, Oct. 29 to discuss the proposed construction of a new North Quincy High School facility.

Renegades Finish Undefeated

The Renegades Drum and Bugle Corps of Quincy went undefeated in the CYO music circuit this season.

They also won the CYO Music Festival for their class. They won the Greater New England Circuit championship Sept. 15.

In the third circuit, the Mayflower Circuit, they placed second, missing first place by one point, but did win a special trophy for General Effect Caption.

During the summer the corps traveled throughout New England and also competed in Montreal, Canada. This fall the corps will parade in Milton, Quincy, Watertown, Brockton, and Woburn.

The Renegades will hold a Banquet-Dance in October for the members and their parents at the Fore River Clubhouse. Next year the Corps will compete in the A-2 class and is looking for new members 12 years old and over, and is also accepting applications for 10 year olds and over for a Jr. Corps which is now under consideration. They will be practicing at the Quincy armory on Monday nights at 7 p.m. and at St. John's School Wednesday nights at 7 p.m.

Voter Registration Deadline

Tuesday, Oct. 8 is the deadline for voter registration before the Nov. 5 state election.

Unregistered Quincy voters may register to vote on that day in City Hall from 8:30 a.m. until 10 p.m.

Residents can also register at City Hall Saturday, Oct. 5 between the hours of 10 a.m. and 10 p.m.

A special registration for residents of Ward 5 was scheduled at the Wollaston School, Beale St., Wednesday, from 7-9 p.m. and for Ward 6 residents at the same time at Quincy School, Newbury Ave., North Quincy.

Voters can also register daily at City Hall's election department from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

A total of 47,062 Quincy residents had registered to vote in the September primary. Of that number, 25,915 were Democrats, 8,270 Republicans and 12,877 Independents. Women outnumbered men by a 5,120 margin - 26,091 women, to 20,971 men.

Hum 'n Strum Get Together For Rare Reunion

By HENRY BOSWORTH

As you listen to them harmonize at the piano and watch the happy faces of those looking on, you wonder how noise like rock 'n roll ever got started.

It was a rare reunion for one of the greatest harmony teams of them all -- Hum 'n Strum. And for two of the nicest guys of them all -- Max Zides and Tom Currier.

They sang together for more than 35 years--from vaudeville, radio, records, USO tours overseas during World War II to TV before hanging up the act in 1959. They don't get to see one another very often now.

Tom now lives in Reston, Va. Max is still a Brookline resident and PR director at the Wollaston Boulevard Bowladrome.

Tom was up for a visit. And Harry Carlson, the Dorchester-Milton civic leader who "is big in ties" got the boys together for a reunion with some close friends.

First there was a luncheon at Vin and Eddie's in Abington--about 30 guys at a private get together. Among them, Rt. Rev. Robert McNeill, CVO Archdiocesan director with headquarters at St. Ann's School, Wollaston; Fred Sheehan, Quincy businessman, Abington Police Chief Edward Murphy, radio's Sherm Feller and this writer.

Well, there's a piano there. And Max and Tom were soon at it, singing a few of their wonderful old hits: "Heart of my Heart", "Steve O'Donnell's Wake", "If I Knock The L Out of Kelly", and Sherm Feller's "Puppy Love". The guys even got them to sing a few of their old radio commercials: Peter Paul Mounds, Marshmallow Fluff, Sieberling Tires, etc. Compared to some of the junk you hear today, those old commercials were musical classics.

Then it was off to station WRYT for a two-hour talk session with Feller. The boys reminisced about the old days on radio and at the Fox & Hounds in Quincy and soon the station's switchboard was lit up like a Christmas tree.

"Do you remember when..." the callers asked. And Tom and Max remembered. Sherm played a few of their old numbers. And in came so many calls, they couldn't be handled.

One lady probably said it all when she noted that the music Max and Tom sang was "fun music". It made people want to listen or to sing along with them. "They never had to be dirty," she said.

It was the first time the boys had appeared together on radio in over 15 years.

Wouldn't it be nice if you could flip on a radio today and hear them again?

UNITY? There seemed to be a conspicuous absence of big Quincy political names at the recent unity rally for Mike Dukakis, Tom O'Neill and the entire Democratic slate at the Commonwealth Armory. Only Quincy standouts noticed were Reps. William Delahunt, Joseph Brett and Clifford Marshall.

Fast Talker?

You have to be careful what you say -- so you don't talk too fast, you might say something you haven't thought of yet.

Three Types?

There are three types of people: people who make things happen, people who watch things happen, and people who wonder what happened.

Woodman's Shavings

From Tip O'Neill With Love

By WENDELL WOODMAN

BOSTON -- The mood of depression that invariably trails an election in search of something fresh to be optimistic about is especially pronounced this season. Even the "ins" who survived the primary are being swept up in an epidemic of pessimism.

It is a bad year for incumbents, and that makes it a bad year for the insecure thousands who have hitched their wagons to the losers and those who are about to exit through the portals.

Politics thrives on confidence [real or imagined] and depression is an attitude that has to be snuffed out quickly. When everyone gets depressed all at once, therapy gives way to mass commiseration. If it lasts too long, it gets contagious.

In this void of self-confidence, any sign of hope, however small, is a call to rejoice. It is what prompted State Treasurer Robert Q. Crane, for example, to describe his minuscule plurality in the primary as "a smashing victory" by comparison. And it was. He survived.

Job security is at a premium right now, and with both Attorney General Robert Quinn and Secretary of State John F. X. Davoren sitting as lame ducks, the scramble for employment has become frantic.

The gubernatorial contest is acutely affected by this unfolding psychology of apprehension.

Gov. Francis W. Sargent pointedly declared himself the underdog after the primary and underscored that evaluation by challenging his opponent to a series of public debates. He made no pretense of wrapping his nomination or incumbency in an aura of confidence.

Democratic nominee Michael S. Dukakis, on the other hand, is generating his 100,000-vote plurality in the primary into a "Power abdicates only under stress of counter-power."

--Martin Buber

juggernaut of uncontained confidence. He seems to regard himself as the winner, the November election as a mere formality, and he is claiming already the fruits of a victory and the privileges of party leadership.

This psychological advantage cannot be minimized.

Politicians, even more than voters, hanker to be on the winning side.

Some of the stalwarts in Sargent's army readily confess their concern over the Governor's chances in November, and they are not secretive about their mini-campaigns to nail down tenure appointments in state service in a market where demand is already greater than supply.

By contrast, Dukakis is calling more shots within the party, demanding more fealty, than a gubernatorial nominee is usually permitted. His aggressiveness has ruffled some feathers, particularly among some old Quinn supporters, but his momentum -- psychologically, at least -- is dynamic.

Gov. Sargent is outwardly apprehensive. He is confronted, in the aftermath of the primary, with two problems he hadn't expected. First, he is having more trouble than he anticipated in luring back to the fold the disaffected conservatives in the GOP that he antagonized in the primary.

Second, his open appeal for the Independent vote in the primary went unanswered. It voted, instead, for Dukakis.

The Governor is faced with a severe organizational dilemma, whereas Dukakis has a built-in organizational advantage.

Dukakis has a powerful ticket.

No one likes to pretend that ethnic and geographic balance are the firmaments of political success, but the Democrats did have enough sense to nominate a candidate for every constitutional office, and they didn't pick the dropouts from Brahmin Boulevard to do it.

As if to herald the end of chronic self-defeat, former Senate President John E. Powers quipped on the day after the primary, "Did you see the ticket that we Democrats so carefully put together?"

He might have asked, conversely, did you see the ticket the Republicans didn't put together?

What the Dukakis campaign might lack in organization [as if the primary didn't scotch that complaint for all time!], will be amply supplied by U.S. House Majority Leader Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., whose son is the nominee for Lt. Governor.

It is a factor that permits Dukakis to ride roughshod, if that's the right word, over the rest of the Democratic Party. No time is being wasted on diplomacy.

Clearly the saddest news to reach the Governor's ear was word that a favorite son has returned from Washington to pay a visit. If the name of Leo E. Diehl escapes you, it's because you haven't done your homework on Massachusetts politics.

Leo Diehl is a former State Tax Commissioner. He is also Administrative Assistant to the Majority Leader, a Congressman named O'Neill. He is here on a fence-mending and fund-raising expedition for the Democratic ticket. And Leo Diehl probably is better equipped for this task than any man alive.

He is more fun to have than a psychological advantage.

Why Does One City Pay Higher County Tax?

An irate taxpayer called the League of Women Voters Voter Information Phone to ask why his city pays much more in county taxes than most of the richer neighboring towns.

The VIP phone volunteer explained that county costs are charged to cities and towns on the basis of property valuations that are 30 years out of date. Three-fourths of the county tax is based on 1945 property valuations and one-fourth on 1963 property valuations. Therefore, these communities which have had rapid post-war growth in valuation after 1945 are paying less than their share while many older cities and rural towns pay excess charges. Legislation to update the valuation formula for computing the county tax did not pass in the last Massachusetts legislative session. Bills to correct this formula have been refiled again.

This question is one of the many now being received by the League of Women Voters Voter Information Phone. Individuals with any questions on government may call the VIP Phone Monday through Friday between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. The number in the Boston area is 357-5880.

Garrett McSweeney Appointed Brockton Telephone Manager

F. Garrett McSweeney of 67
Hollis Ave., North Quincy, has been appointed manager of New England Telephone's Brockton business office.

McSweeney joined the company in 1967 as a sales representative in the company's marketing department. He later held other positions in the company's sales and commercial departments, and most recently was business office manager in Attleboro.

He is vice president of the Sacred Heart Parish Holy Name Society and was a director of the Attleboro Chamber of Commerce. McSweeney also was active in that community's

F. GARRETT MCSWEENEY

United Fund campaign.

He has served as an adult volunteer for a number of Quincy area youth organizations as well, including the Sacred Heart Parish Catholic Youth Organization, the Koch Club of Quincy, and the Quincy Youth Hockey Association.

McSweeney attended
Dorchester High School and

United Mattress Machinery Co. To Receive 'E' Award

The President's "E" Award for "excellence in exporting" will be presented to the United Mattress Machinery Company of Quincy, a division of the Mathewson Corporation.

The 70-year-old company was selected for the award by the United States Department of Commerce for extraordinary increases in the sale of mattress machinery outside of the U.S.
Between 1971 and 1973 the company's exports as compared with its total sales, grew from 42.7 percent to 62.5 percent.

The Quincy-based firm ships approximately 99 percent of its products in either containers or break-bulk form through Massport's Boston-Mystic Public Container Terminal in Charlestown, to Australia, the United Kingdom, Europe, Japan, South Africa, and many other locations throughout the world.

The award, which consists of an "E" flag and a plaque inscribed with a citation, will be presented to the company by Mayor Walter Hannon Oct. 16 at the company's executive offices,

2 Hancock St., North Quincy.

Richard Mathewson, president of the parent company, attributed the growth in export trade to "an awareness by the company of the many export markets available to U.S. companies, aggressive international marketing programs, and the ability to design and produce a quality product.

The company, which employs 200, has been a manufacturer and distributor of a complete line of quality, precision mattress machinery since 1904.

3 Quincy Men Elected By Machinists Council

Three Quincy men representing Granite Lodge 1451 have been elected officers of the Massachusetts State Council of Machinists.

They are James Warren, one of six vice-presidents, Richard Post, secretary-treasurer, and George Perrow, director and treasurer of Machinists Non-Partisan Political League.

During the election meeting held at the Holiday Inn in Waltham, Council members also endorsed 17 politicians candidates. Among them were Michael Dukakis, Democratic candidate for governor, Thomas O'Neill III, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, Francis X. Bellotti, Democratic candidate for attorney general, Paul Guzzi, Democratic candidate for secretary of state, Robert Crane, Democratic candidate for state treasurer, Thaddeus Buczko, Democratic candidate for state auditor and James Burke, Democratic Congressional candidate from district 11.

Cerasoli Asks Study Of Independence Ave. Traffic

Robert A. Cerasoli, candidate for state representative in the First Norfolk District, requests that the Traffic Commission examine the current traffic situation along Independence Avenue.

In a letter to Police Capt. Roy Cavicchi, Chairman of the Traffic Commission, Cerasoli said:

"Recently I have had the opportunity to meet and speak with the residents of the South Quincy area. Among those who live in the Penn's Hill area, especially near Independence Ave., the problem of traffic is continually mentioned.

"Both traffic volumes and speeding seem to be increasing, while on-street parking, such as at Friendly's Ice Cream Shop decreases travel capacity. In short, Independence Ave. is becoming a more dangerous street everyday and yet it continues to serve as the major access to and from one of Quincy's finest residential neighborhoods."

Cerasoli urged the Traffic

Commission to examine the traffic situation along Independence Ave. and develop a program of safety improvements to better control speeding and other violations and help reduce the chances of serious accident or injury.

CRASH COURSE IN FINANCE:

FOR FAMILIES WITH AS LITTLE AS $100 TO INVEST

This is an Ad for the Granite Co-Operative Bank, North Quincy and Quincy Center. This message is for you, the average person. We have the best savings plan in Massachusetts for people who have as little as $100 to invest and don't care to risk even a penny.

This plan isn't new but is certainly worth reminding you about. It's got a fancy name: Paid Up Shares, but you won't have to find a stock broker to buy them. You see us...and then you'll own a piece of our bank. We're a co-operative bank and that allows us to offer these shares.

Here's what many people have done for years, and what we hope you'll do. Walk into either of our banks. Ask the teller to give you paid-up shares (one for each $100). What you'll get is a bank book. Each $100 in the book means you own one share in our bank. Every month we send you a check as a dividend...computed at 5½% per year. Keep the money here and we keep sending you checks. And, if you want, we can deposit the dividend in a regular savings account (which earns more interest) and buy you another share when you've got $100 accumulated. The best part of this whole deal is you get your money back from us just by asking for it. You get it right then. Then there is no notice.

If you'd like more information on our simple world of finance just call us. We're always happy to have you make a good investment in our bank.

Thanks for reading this. Now you've graduated.

No Risk. Get your money back the minute you ask!

Over 300 Help Mark Milestone

QYC Celebrates Its 100th Anniversary

COMMODORE Bernard McCourt welcomes the more than 300 members and guests to the Quincy Yacht Club's 100th anniversary celebration. Shown with him from left, are Committee Chairman Robert Schuerch, former Mayor Thomas S. Burgin who was emcee and William Small, senior past commodore.

More than 300 members and guests celebrated the 100th anniversary of the Quincy Yacht Club at a dinner dance Saturday night at the George F. Bryan VFW Hall.

Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight, representing Gov. Francis Sargent, brought the greetings of Massachusetts and Senator-City Council President Arthur Tobin, representing Mayor Walter J. Hannon, the greetings of the city.

Guests included representatives from almost every yacht club in the Massachusetts Bay Yacht Clubs Association.

Tobin presented a special plaque from the city and a framed citation from the Senate congratulating the Quincy Yacht Club on its 100th milestone.

Another highlight was the presentation of the Quincy Challenge Cup to this year's 210 Class winner, William O'Connor of the Boston Yacht Club.

The famed and cherished cup, is the third oldest American racing trophy still in competition.

Another featured presentation was the Amos L. Merritt Trophy to the Grogan brothers, Edmund Jr. and Kevin for winning the Thunderbird Class in this year's Quincy Bay Race Week competition.

Former Mayor Thomas S. Burgin, a past commodore of the Quincy Yacht Club, was the emcee for the dinner dance.

Burgin noted that there have been 57 commodores in the club's 100 years—five of them former mayors.

In addition to himself the mayors were Charles Francis Adams, Joseph Whiton, Harrison Keith and Eugene R. Stone. Said Burgin:

"During the 100 year period we note that 57 gentlemen have had the honor of serving as commodore of the Quincy Yacht Club, with five former mayors of Quincy included in the list. Within this group, and without doubt Quincy's most famous yachtsmen, was Honorable Charles Francis Adams II, Commodore in 1885-1887, Mayor of Quincy 1896-1897, Secretary of the Navy under President Herbert Hoover, and internationally known yacht-racing skipper, having successfully defended the America's Cup in races off Newport, Rhode Island, on several occasions.

"Although not in the group of former mayors was a native son of Quincy, the late Henry M. Faxon who joined the Quincy Yacht Club in 1880 and served as commodore in 1893-1894. Mr. Faxon was an outstanding skipper and the competition between him and Charles Francis Adams was certainly worthy of mention.

"At the time of his death in 1949 he was the club's senior member in the 75th Anniversary Year. Through the courtesy of his son, Robert M. Faxon, a most interesting file of his father's pertaining to the early days of racing at the Quincy Yacht Club has been loaned to your toastmaster and undoubtedly with other records and trophies will eventually be presented to the Quincy Historical Society for inclusion within the Quincy Yacht Club's planned exhibit.

"While time will not permit a further resume of the club's history and those who have guided its destiny during the past century may I emphasize what a long period of time 100 years really is by concluding with the statement that in 1874 what is now the City of Quincy was then a small town, the war between the states had ended only nine years before when General Lee surrendered, and who but General Ulysses S. Grant was President of the United States."

Blank Malden, 14-0

Rebounding Raiders Host Weymouth N.

By TOM SULLIVAN

The North Quincy football team, 1-1 in non-league competition, opens its first Suburban League season Saturday when it hosts Weymouth North, an old rival, at Quincy Veterans Memorial Stadium at 1:30.

The Raiders bounced back from a disappointing 8-6 loss to Milton with a 14-0 win last Saturday over Malden, an old Greater Boston League foe, and Coach Ralph Frazier feels his team is now ready to roll.

Weymouth North dropped a 7-0 non-league decision to Braintree in its opener but last week topped Brookline by the same score in its first Suburban League game.

North started slowly last week but once Frazier made some adjustments in the offense, it began to click and outplayed Malden, a much bigger team, throughout the second half.

"They were stunting constantly and I should have changed our attack sooner and begun to go straight at them," Frazier admitted. "Once we began to go straight at them, we picked up good yardage and gained confidence. I think we had a better offensive team than they did but we didn't show it until the second half.

"The defense was outstanding and the boys did a great job of stopping their big running back, [Mark] Burns. On offense Frank Chiacchi, Paul Doherty and Rich Joyce did well in the line and opened up some good holes. The entire offensive line played a good game."

Junior Brian Doherty had another great game carrying the ball as he gained 127 yards and scored the second North touchdown. Quarterback Mike Meehan, who didn't do much passing, proved himself an excellent runner and picked up good yardage, especially in the late stages.

Matty Constantino did some fine blocking from his fullback post and Rich Marino, back from an injury, played well.

Singled out for their defensive performances were John Gallagher and Bill Pitts in the line, Paul O'Donnell at end, Ralph Crevier, a defensive end who played an outstanding game all afternoon and recovered a fumble deep in Malden territory; Pete Hemphill, who filled in for the injured Tom Callahan at end, and defensive backs Jack Hatfield and Bruce Shea, who turned in their usual strong performances.

Both teams hurt themselves in the first half with offside penalties, as each was hit with three, stopping drives. A promising Malden drive was stopped on the first play of the second period when it fumbled on North's 16 and the Raiders recovered.

The other touchdown came with about three minutes to play and the drive started from the North 39 after a Malden fourth down gamble failed. Doherty carried three times in a row for 26 yards and then carried on five of the next seven plays and scored from the two.

North gained a net of 164 yards rushing to 133 for Malden. The Raiders added 24 yards with two of seven passing while Malden had 31 yards on three for seven. North had 12 first downs to seven for Malden.

Another Malden fumble recovered by North on the Raider 19 set up North's first touchdown. The Raiders drove 81 yards to pay dirt, the touchdown coming with only 25 seconds left in the half.

Doherty did most of the ground gaining but Meehan and Marino also helped out and a pass from Meehan to Mark Reale was good for 16 yards. Meehan scored on a quarterback sneak from the two and also rushed for the points.

● Junior High Football A-N, Broadmeadows Tie, 8-8

The Junior High school football league got under way last week and promises a good deal of action again this season.

In the latest set of games Monday at Veterans Memorial stadium, Atlantic-North and Broadmeadows met. The ninth grade teams battled to an 8-8 tie with Frank Dragone scoring for BM on a 65-yard run and Ronnie Donovan rushing for the points. John Wilkinson scored all eight points for A-N.

Broadmeadows won the eighth grade game, 14-0. Rickie Drew scored on a pass from Mark Forrester and Mark Grindle added the points on a pass from Forrester. Forrester scored the second touchdown and was outstanding throughout the game.

BM seventh graders romped, 20-0, with Tom Brennan scoring all the points, one of his runs covering 25 yards.

Last Friday it was Broadmeadows and Point with BM's ninth graders, coached this year by Gene Macomber, Quincy High assistant coach for several years, winning, 14-0. Kevin Boudreau scored the first touchdown and also added the extra points. Tom Didian scored the second, the play starting with a 15-yard pass from Mark Giordani to Tony DelGreco, who lateraled to Didian, who ran 45 yards for the score.

The eighth grade game ended in a 6-6 tie with Peter Griffin taking a pass for the Point score and Grindle tying it up for BM. BM won the seventh grade contest, 6-0, on Frannie Donovan's touchdown.

Last Thursday's Central and Sterling's ninth graders fought to a 6-6 tie with Richard Coose scoring for Sterling on a 25-yard run on a reverse and Steve Germaine scoring for Central, breaking two tackles on the way.

Central's eighth graders won, 8-0, with Mike Oriola scoring on an end-around play and Ralph Pickering adding the points.

Sterling won the seventh grade game, 8-0, with Leon Frazer scoring on a 22-yard run and Eddie Tinney adding the points on an end-around.

In the opening games earlier last week Atlantic-North's ninth grade team topped Point, 14-0. Joe Deane and Wilkinson scored the touchdowns and Wilkinson also added the points after one TD.

Point won the eighth grade game, 12-0, on touchdowns by Vincent Harte and Griffin.

A-N won the seventh grade game, 8-0, with Tim Bell scoring all the points.

Shea Rink Opens Saturday

The 13 enclosed ice skating rinks of the MDC will open for the 1974-75 season Saturday.

These rinks include the William T. Shea Memorial Rink in Quincy.

Admission fees are 10 cents for those under 18 except evenings and Saturdays, when the fee is 25 cents. For those over 18 the fee is 50 cents at all times except for those 65 and older, who pay only 10 cents.

The minimum age for admission to the rinks for public skating after 7 p.m. Sunday and school days except Friday, is 14, unless the child is accompanied by a parent or guardian. This regulation will not be in effect during school vacations or when there is no school the following day.

All rinks will have three sessions each Friday, Saturday and Sunday. On remaining days the schedules will vary. Ice rental charges are $30 per hour. Arrangements can be made with rink managers. Applications for rental time for hockey and for speed and figure skating can be procured by contacting the MDC recreation office, 20 Somerset St., Boston.

On school days rinks are available at no charge from 9 a.m. to noon for public, private and parochial schools within the MDC Parks District.

Rinks will be closed Thanksgiving and Christmas. On Dec. 24 and Dec. 31 they will close at 5 p.m. and on New Year's Day will open at 2 p.m.

Perky Presidents Face Strong Revere

Any resemblance between the Quincy football team which played last Saturday and the one which played the previous week was purely coincidental and Coach Hank Conroy hopes for a repeat of last week's performance Saturday when the Presidents face strong Revere in a 1:30 game at the Revere stadium.

Quincy, bombed by Dedham, 40-6, the first week, bounced back to wallop Weymouth South, 32-8, last Saturday and the Presidents will probably have to play as well this week against Revere's defending Greater Boston League champs and Division I Super Bowl team.

The win marked Coach Hank Conroy's 50th victory as the Presidents' head coach. Hank took over the head coaching reins in 1964.

Revere, nipped by Haverhill, 18-16, in its opener, last week pounded Arlington, 28-0. The Patriots have most of their Super Bowl team back.

Conroy, naturally down after the Dedham loss, was all smiles when he returned from the game at Weymouth.

"Today we put everything together and did everything we didn't do last week," he said. "We still made a few mistakes but we did well in every department and I just hope this will make the difference for us."

"I said after the Dedham game the sign of a good team is its ability to bounce back and we did just that today. If we had lost today, it might have wrecked us for the season, but now I feel we will continue to improve and give a good account of ourselves."

There were several standouts for Quincy but the big hero was Preston Carroll, hard-running half back who had scored the only touchdown against Dedham on a 92-yard kickoff return.

Carroll officially gained 196 yards but had several long runs nullified by penalties and Conroy feels he would have gone well over 250 yards if those runs hadn't been voided. He scored four touchdowns, one in each period and, playing on defense for the first time, did well there.

"He was just outstanding but everyone did a good job," Conroy said. "Our blocking was good, the passing was much better than in the opening game and the defense was excellent, especially our pass defense which was weak against Dedham."

Jimmy Forrester was on target passing and his first five passes to End Mike MacKenzie were completed. A pass from Carroll, who had taken a pitchout, to MacKenzie accounted for the other Quincy TD.

Doug King was singled out for an outstanding game at defensive end. One time he deflected a Weymouth pass into the hands of teammate Mike Wysocki.

Also praised was Frankie Guest, backup quarterback, for his pass coverage as he, like Carroll, played on defense for the first time. He intercepted one pass and knocked down several.

"Fullback Paul Vespaziani and Ted Wiedemann, filling in for the injured Terry O'Day at halfback, also played well," Conroy concluded.

In the opening period Carroll scored on an 11-yard run.

In the second he dove over from the one and MacKenzie scored on a pass from Carroll for 11 yards.

Quincy made it 18-0 in the third period on Carroll's 50-yard run and Weymouth's Steve Ibsicki raced 66 yards for the lone score for the losers.

Carroll scored on an 18-yard run late in the game and Guest rushed for the only Quincy conversion.

Quincy netted 260 yards rushing to 147 for Weymouth, picked up 152 yards passing on eight for 21 [7 of 18 for Forrester and 1 of 3 for Carroll], while Weymouth hit on only three of 16, and the Presidents had 13 first downs to 10 for Weymouth. The losers did intercept three Quincy passes.

Chiminiello Still Holds Women's Merchants Lead

Chiminiello's continues to lead the Women's Merchants Bowling League with a 26-6 record.

South Shore Candy Is second with a 24-8 mark, followed by The Body Smith Shop, 22-10; Ho-Jo's W. Quincy, 14-18; Merry Mount Lanes, 6-26, and Pepe's Express, 4-28.

Taffy Serroni has high average of 105.6, followed by Ellie

Iacobucci, 103.9; Bev Putnam, 103.3; Doreen Barrett, 103.1; Noreen Mastroianni, 101.4; Edna Walker, 98.9; Hazel Thomas, 98.7; Donna Fedor, 97.9; Mal Adams, 97.6 and Sandy Barrie, 97.4.

The Body Smith Shop has both high team three of 1,505 and high single of 526. Bev Putnam has high individual three of 344 and Ellie Iacobucci high single of 134.

Junior High Soccer Underway

Last fall the Atlantic-North soccer team enjoyed its first unbeaten season and ended Sterling's four-year reign as Quincy Junior High champion.

This year veteran coach Leo Donovan had his largest turnout ever with 60 boys reporting and prospects are good for another successful year.

A-N opened its season last week with a 3-2 win over Broadmeadows as Mark Will scored the first goal and Mike Colton the next two. "The boys show a great deal of desire and I think we will do all right," Donovan said.

After completing an 8-0 league season last year, A-N defeated the league all-stars, 1-0. The team's Matt Schaefer was the league's top scorer and was voted the Most Valuable Player. Donovan's squad includes 9th graders Mike McCarthy, Brian Morrissey, Jim McGinley, John Andrew, Dave Mitchell, Richard Kelly, Stephen Helfrich, Schaefer, Neil Quinn, Martin Golden, Karl Sten, Peter Will and Wayne McDonald.

Eighth graders are Bill Ennis, Mike Colon, John Masters, Phil Golden, Adam Mugico, Joe Cahill, Dave Carr, Bruce Wilson, Robert Reed, Gary Anderson and Kurt O'Sullivan.

Seventh graders are John Howley, Kevin Doyle, Tom Roney, Bill Clapp, Phil Brown, Allan Dwyer, Richard Forrest, Chris Sullivan, Paul Johnson, Mark Will, Mark Stoke, Terrance O'Toole, Dave Donovan, Brian Duane, Steve Jacques, Anthony DePiero and Joseph Kovalchik.

Meanwhile, Sterling coach Eddie Miller hopes to get his team back on the championship trail after missing out last season.

"I have a large squad with 42 boys," he said. "I don't believe in cutting players in junior high school. It is going to be very difficult to play all of them, but we will do the best we can."

Miller, also the highly successful junior varsity basketball coach at North Quincy High, singled out Peter DiCenzo, as his best all around player. "He is my center halfback and rover on offense and takes all throw-ins and penalty kicks," Miller said.

The Sterling coach expects his scoring punch to come from an eighth grader, Lou Avitable, the team's leading scorer and all-star selection as a seventh grader. He also pointed to Jack DeCelle and Carmen Reppucci, starting forwards who, he said, have fine attitude and leadership and bullet-like shots.

All of those mentioned are returning starters as is Pompeo Cardarelli, a fullback and a mainstay on defense. Miller has five goalies battling it out, Bob Praetich, Brian Bertoni, Dan Walsh, Steve MacDonald and Peter Mullarkey. Last year's goalie, Mike Kennedy, who hadn't played before last season, is now starting goalie for Quincy High.

Sterling's ninth graders are Cardarelli, DeCelle, DiCenzo, Reppucci, Bertoni, Joe DiCesare, MacDonald, John McCarthy, Mullarkey, Gary Rudolph, Mike Aristide, Claudio Tempesta, Walsh, Joe Vallatini, Joe Zimmerman, Ron Tiberi and Praetich.

Eighth grade players are Avitable, Mike Brewster, Joe Casserly, Dario DiBona, Ron DiCesare, Chris Erickson, Kevin McCarthy, Jim Mullarkey, Bob Kiggan, Paul Smyth, Walter Steen and Joe Tucker.

Raiders Win Second, Panthers Claw Manets

St. Gregory's Raiders won their second straight Quincy Youth Football League game Sunday with an 18-8 win over North Quincy Apaches at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

It was the second loss in a row for the Apaches.

It was all defense in the first half with the only points coming when Brian Murphy and Ed Roman dropped the Apaches' quarterback in the end zone for a safety.

The Raiders came to life in the second half. Phil Gilpen scored two touchdowns and gained 126 yards and Roman had 61 yards for the afternoon. Jack Boyle turned in another good performance, completing two passes for 37 yards and rushing for a two-point conversion. Dan Knee got off two kickoffs which went into the end zone and one of his punts went out on the five-yard line.

The Quincy Point Panthers, defending champions, bounced back from an opening day loss to top the Houghs Neck Manets, 8-0, this being the first game for the Manets.

Billy Bonvic scored for the Panthers and Bob Roberts passed to Mike Trubiano for the points. Jack Donovan and Bob Roberts were outstanding defensively for the Panthers.

North Hosts Rindge Tech, Quincy At Newton

When the Suburban League soccer season opened it was not expected that last Tuesday's game between Quincy and North Quincy, new entries this year, would play such an important role in the league standings.

Going into the game North was tied with Newton for the league lead with a 5-1-1 record following a win over Newton Saturday, while Quincy was right behind with a 4-1-2 mark.

Friday North will host Rindge Tech at Montclair Field and Quincy will play at Newton. Monday it will be Waltham at Quincy and North at Weymouth South and next Wednesday Cambridge Latin at North and Quincy at Rindge.

North saved one of its better games for Newton last Saturday and pulled out a 2-1 win to move into the top tie with Newton.

Both Raider scores came in the first period with John Mackey converting Bill Donovan's pass and Tim Clifford setting up Dan Finn's goal. Newton scored its goal in the third period.

"The boys did a good job and Gary Nankin was excellent in goal," Coach Lou Ioanilli said. "The boys have really put out and play hard soccer. In the only game we lost we outshot Brookline, 25-12, but couldn't beat their goalie."

Ron Martin's Quincy booters, who had been tied for second place with North, dropped behind North and Newton when it was held to a 1-1 tie by Brookline.

Brookline scored in the opening period but in the final period Mark Raimondi converted Glen Schlager's pass to tie it up. Quincy had three goals nullified, two for offside.

"I am very pleased with our season and I think I underrated our team at the start," Martin said. "The boys have played some fine soccer."

Last week North squeezed by Waltham, 2-0, on Walter Melton's early goal and a second period goal by Mackey. Donovan assisted on Mackey's goal.

Quincy unleashed a furious attack to pulverize Weymouth North, 9-2.

Raimondi and Schlager had two goals apiece, Scott DeMarco, Scott Simpson, Sal Leone, Joe McEcheran and Peter Keenan one each. McEcheran and Marco DiCiezo had three assists each and Donovan 2.

Committees Named For N.E. Legion Baseball Tourney

At a meeting last week at the Morrisette Post headquarters, committees were named for next year's New England Regional American Legion baseball tournament. Morrisette will host the tourney at Adams Field.

George Rulon is the national director. The national representative will be picked later. Roy Hold is assistant national representative, Charles Ward of Milton is tournament chairman [he is the Zone 6 chairman], Charles F. Adams and Mayor Walter Hannon are honorary chairmen, and Ray Cattaneo, Comdr. Mario Ghilardi and Nick Malvesti co-chairmen. The following committee members were named:

Dan DeFederico, advance sales, Legion posts, ticket outlets, special promotions and official scorer; Larry Carnali, box office, ticket personnel, billboards, scoreboard and park decorations; Bob and Frank Osborne and Bob Carella, newspaper publicity, advertising, radio and TV, souvenirs and public transportation.

John Ricciuti, Mike Gaudiano and Gus Russo, banquet, guest speaker, ad book, ceremonies and national officials, Ray Cattaneo and Bill Sawyer, transportation, meals, housing, local transportation and team hosts; Nick Malvesti and Bruno Carloni, stadium personnel, ushers, security and program book sellers; Dick Walthers and Tom Malvesti, on site director, team field coordinator and ball boys; Andy Callahan, press box coordinator, security, runner, refreshments and communications.

The tournament director, who will have charge of medical personnel, ambulance service and trainer, will be announced.

No Definite Plans For Ken Coleman

When Channel 38 last week signed a five-year contract to televise the Red Sox games starting next season, it put Quincy native Ken Coleman out of a job, along with Johnny Pesky.

It was announced by Channel 38 officials that Coleman, who has done the Red Sox games since 1966 when he took over for Curt Gowdy, and Pesky, would not be doing the games but did not announce who will get the job. Prominently mentioned is Ned Martin, who does the Sox games on Radio Station WHDH.

WAR DECLARED

Spain declared war on Britain on Oct. 5, 1796.

Coleman admitted he had nothing definite lined up. He is doing no football this fall but is working on a syndicated golf program.

Coleman, a resident of Cohasset, did the Cleveland Indians baseball games and Cleveland Browns football games for 14 years before coming home to do the Sox games.

His easy-going style of broadcasting will be missed by fans of the area.

Petracca In 3rd Record-Breaker

Monday was North Quincy's biggest day in cross country and Coach Lou Tozzi hopes it is a good sign for the Raiders' future.

Not only did the Raider varsity capture its first Suburban League win but Bart Petracca was the individual winner with his third successive record-breaking run.

The North junior varsity won its second meet in a row and the first girls' cross country team in school history won in its debut.

Today [Thursday] North runs at Weymouth South and Petracca faces Bud Doyle, who has won 31 straight meets for Weymouth. Quincy hosts Brockton over the new Quincy course. Monday Quincy runs at Newton and North at Brockton. Brockton is the league power and has lost only one of its last 78 meets.

In North Quincy's 24-31 win over Weymouth North, Monday Petracca broke his own Quincy course record by 24 seconds, covering the course in 12:10. He had set a new mark in the Raiders' opener and last week broke the Waltham course mark by 14 seconds.

Artie Barrett was third, Mark

Canavan fifth, Ken Barrett and Ken O'Brien ninth to complete North's scoring, while Ian Sheridan and Ed Yee also finished.

In the North junior varsity's 26-29 win over Weymouth, Marty Levenson was the individual winner in 14:15. Joe O'Connor was fifth, Ed Carl seventh, Bob Levenson eighth and Mike Morin ninth to complete the scoring, while Andy Laskowski and Joe Gori also finished.

The honor of winning the first girls' race in school history went to Lauren Snook, who finished in 13:46 as the Raiderettes made their bow with a 19-36 win.

Chris Bonoli was third, Elaine Murray fourth, Roberta Mahn fifth and Maureen Tracey sixth. Also finishing were Jean Farren, Joanne Troy, Mary Ann Sylvester and Mary Lynch.

Tom Hall's Quincy harriers were outclassed by Rindge Tech, one of the Suburban powers, 19-44.

Bob Thorne was Quincy's first finisher in fourth place but improved on his best time by a minute. Kevin O'Brien was seventh, also improving on his best time, John Ross 10th, Sam Gravina 11th and Dave Vecchione 12th. Also finishing were John Haapanen and Mike DeAngelo.

Last week Quincy rolled to its first win, 19-44, over Cambridge Latin as the Presidents' Thorne was the winner in 13:45 over the 2.5-mile Cambridge course.

Quincy's O'Brien placed third, Charlie Park Fourth, Stan Park fifth, Ross sixth, Gravina seventh and Haapanen eighth.

Although North was defeated by Waltham, 23-36, Petracca not only won the meet but broke the Waltham course record with a 12:33 timing over the 2.5-mile course. Waltham's first two finishers, Otto Kerr and John Faulstich, who were two-three, also broke the course record with identical timings of 12:38. The old record had been 12:47.

North's Art Barrett was fourth, Canavan ninth and Ken Barrett 10th. O'Brien and Yee also ran.

Art Barrett, Yee and Mark Canavan were elected North tri-captains before the meet.

North's junior varsity won, 25-30, with Sheridan second, O'Connor third, Carl fourth, Morin seventh and Laskowski ninth.

Steve Bell Selected For Babe Ruth Honors

Stephen A. Bell of 119 Crabtree Rd, Squantum, has been selected to the Babe Ruth Baseball's "Athletes of the Year" program for 1974.

Announcement was made by Richard W. Case, president of Babe Ruth International, and David MacMillan, Quincy Babe Ruth manager.

Nominations were made earlier this summer by Babe Ruth League managers and presidents from across the country. They were invited to nominate candidates with the best records of local achievement on their teams or in their leagues.

Sponsored by Babe Ruth International, "Athletes of the Year" is an annual honor roll paying tribute to the team players from the world's largest regulation baseball activity for young men. The achievements will be presented in the 1974 edition of Babe Ruth Baseball's Athletes of the Year annual to be published in November. This chronicle of youth baseball will be on display in the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y.

The National Advisory Board of the "Athletes of the Year" program is made up of many prominent baseball personalities including Mrs. Babe Ruth.

'Dreyfus' A Drama With Laughs

By WILLIAM JEROME

Garson Kanin's adapted French play, starring his wife, Ruth Gordon, at the Shubert Theatre is a triple love story directed in broad comic lines.

Allan Arbus, as "Morris" the sensitive director, a humanitarian - full of brotherhood is laboring - [it's a play within a play] to tell, with amateur actors, the story of Captain Dreyfus.

How could France, he wonders, turn in 1891 so anti-Semitic? Morris you see is the visionary, the philosopher. He is in love with his people - their destiny. For the present he is looking back examining history.

Michael the young cobbler, dolt like, has trouble imagining the "character" of Dreyfus. "Why, would he [Dreyfus] a Jew, be in the Military, and an officer at that, with all that such a position implies?"

Myriam, played by Tovah Feldshuh is a sweet, attractive Jewish girl-in the production she is Captain Dreyfus' wife.

She and Michael-well they form the second love story.

The amorous trilogy is completed by those oldies but goodies - Sam Levene as Arnold, a blustery, ham actor and Zina - portrayed by Miss Gordon - a good hearted gal who's been around, who has her share of wise-cracks, hope and womanly wisdom. She is an excellent partner to Mr. Levene.

And the list of characters continues: Avery Schreiber as Mendi, the old care-taker, the visiting Zionist Lecturer and the two rough-necks.

The scene is Vilna, Poland. The time is 1931.

The audience, Jew and Gentile alike sit in wonderment at the two and a half hours of comedy, temperamental flare-ups, and simple fun.

Beneath the humor, the covering-up of the hard life, the Ghetto acceptance is the hope of a people whom God has called once to the Promised Land.

Misunderstood, mistrusted, abused, they have settled for what little peace they can find. They do some dreaming and this is where the audience "hurt" comes in.

We watch the Jewish actors, rehearsing nightly in the Brotherhood Hall, haranguing each other, straining their egos, exhibiting their inner puzzlements and prejudices - We sense they are a doomed lot. We wait, scene by scene for the hidden evil to come forward, the disaster to overwhelm them.

Our stage people are cartoon-like. Animated. Playwright Jean-Claude Grumberg has deliberately done this, or in the adaptation from the French, Mr. Kanin has seen fit to put this interpretation on the Comi-tragedy.

We taste the violence and hate when an ugly neighborhood incident turns two drunken Gentiles on the actors. They abuse the old custodian. From hiding come the rest: The Director, Morris, is fouled and abused by the roughs. It is the denouement, he will never be the same.

At this high-point Peter Kastner, a good actor, rises up in the Military figure of Captain Dreyfus and slays the "dragon".

The love story ends - Morris is now a factory worker in Warsaw and an avowed Communist. "In the Soviet," he declares in a letter to Zina, "there is no Anti-Semitism!" The audience groans.

Michael and Myriam have settled in Berlin. It is strange but to all appearances they will do well in this country of well-educated people, they write to Arnold. By and large, they are accepted as Jews. Only a few are hateful.

"Ah," sighs the lonely Father, Arnold, "they did well - a civilized country - what would Michael have done for himself by going to England - an Island, imagine, being on an Island with a sewing machine."

The cast is asked to be themselves. Poor struggling Jews of 1931 in Europe - the place happens to be Poland.

On the deeper level - the final story is known by everyone - the eventual slaughter of six million Jews in the gas-ovens. Their hopes for a land of their own. Its development and bloody struggle.

The last of the lovers - Ruth Gordon and Sam Levine sit stage-front, reconciling themselves - their loved ones are gone - better life and times ahead - they embrace - they have each other. Curtain.

In the style of Shoelam Aleichem - Designer Boris Aronson has given us a wonderful old hall with peeling and falling plaster. It contains nice touches of books carefully tied and placed from damp in the rafters. A wonderful wood stove, tiled [a collectors' item], wooden chairs, a fine "hot tea" scene complete with table cloth.

The curtain is a stunning pastiche of Ghetto scenes in the genre of "Fiddler on the Roof" - the cobbler, housewife, a man at prayer, the butcher, tailor and town [Ghetto].

One cannot help but wish this production well. It has an excellent cast. It requires a patient audience to fathom the good, simple, people who are sincerely examining history.

Boston is fortunate to have this two-week try-out before New York. Our thanks to Producer, Mr. David Merrick.

A great favorite, Quincy-born Ruth Gordon is a heart and scene stealer with her fun, wit and warmth. And she is not above some strong character lines.

Massachusetts Senior citizens, the Garson Kanins' have done a service - to Jewry and Christendom - men of good heart everywhere - inviting them to see, absorb and meditate on this Drama - at the Shubert Theatre - until Oct. 12.

Ruth Gordon Again 'Steals The Show'

By PAUL HAROLD
Quincy Sun Writer

Ruth Gordon, Quincy's award-winning lady of the theatre, is at the Shubert until Oct. 12, where she's "stealing the show" in "Dreyfus in Rehearsal".

The Wollaston-born actress adds a dash of comedy and drama to a play that is more thought provoking than entertaining. The play is about a play rehearsal that deals with the anti-Semitism that surrounded the Dreyfus affair in France at the turn of the century. It is set in Poland in 1931, just prior to the anti-Semitic campaign of the Nazis in that country.

The two and one-half hour production is extremely well done, but one has the feeling that it could have been condensed into 30 minutes.

The play does tend to drag on, and without the 77-year old Miss Gordon, it could be a terrible bore. She adds life to the production, just when it needs it most, and overplays the role of Zina to the delight of the audience.

Ruth Gordon sets the mood for the play. She gives the audience its first laugh in the opening scene and continues in her comic role till the last scene, when she and the play switch to a dramatic mood.

There's no question about it, she's still got "it" - the talent and drive that took her from her home in Wollaston in 1915 to New York and a 60-year career in stage and screen.

She struts and strides across the stage as if she were at home, and in a way she is. In this production her husband Garson Kanin adapted the play from French and is the director.

On balance, the pre-Broadway showing "Dreyfus in Rehearsal" is worthwhile to see - if not just to catch Ruth Gordon "steal the show". The play will run for two weeks before it opens in New York. It also stars Sam Levine and Avery Schreiber.

Quincy School Poet Coordinating Book Fair

Poems by Quincy children will be part of the decor at Frost Hall of the Hynes Memorial Auditorium Prudential Center Saturday and Sunday at the Boston Globe Book Festival.

Poet, Diana Der Hovanessian, of the Quincy schools is coordinating the poetry section of the book fair.

On Saturday Miss Der Hovanessian will introduce a group of Boston poets and translators who will read from Spanish, Hispanic Armenian, Greek and Portuguese poetry. There will be a flamenco guitar with some of the poetry and a singer of old troubadour verse.

On Sunday she will serve as moderator on a panel of poetry editors including Henrietta Buckmaster of the Christian Science Monitor, Daphne Ehrlich of Houghton Mifflin, Stratis Havairas of Orion's Dolphin who will discuss trends in writing and publishing poetry. This will be followed by a reading by Galway Kinnell and David Kherdian, both from New York.

Miss Der Hovanessian has worked in the Parker, Merrymount, Broadmeadows, Massachusetts Fields, and Central Junior High Schools leading poetry workshops for teachers and students. In October she will begin a 10-week course for the high school students.

Her own work has appeared in leading journals such as Harper's, Paris Review, New York Times, Nation as well as popular publications like Look, Ladies Home Journal, McCall's and Good Housekeeping.

Quincy Heritage Directors To Speak At Scituate

Officials from Quincy Heritage will share their Bicentennial plans with members of the Scituate Historical Society Saturday at 2 p.m. at St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Route 3A and First Parish Rd.

Rev. John R. Graham, director, and Bruce W. McLain, assistant director, will present a 12-minute slide and tape show entitled "Quincy's Pride, Patriots, Presidents and Possibilities". The slide show depicts the overall effort Quincy Heritage is making to commemorate the 350th anniversary of Quincy in 1975 and the nation's 200th birthday in 1976.

Rev. Graham, former minister of the First Parish Church, Quincy, which houses the crypts of U.S. Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams, will also discuss how local businesses can become involved in Bicentennial activities.

McLain, former Information Officer for the Quincy Public Schools, will concentrate on how schools can become focal points for neighborhood celebrations of the Bicentennial.

Kathleen Laidlaw, president of the Scituate Historical Society, said she is hopeful that the Quincy Heritage presentation will inspire local civic organizations to greater activity in their Bicentennial plans.

'Kings Of Comedy' Opens Library Film Series

Thomas Crane Public Library will begin an eight-week evening film series Tuesday, Oct. 8 at 7 p.m. at the main library.

Each week's films will be centered around a different theme, and the series as a whole promises something for everyone.

"Kings of Comedy", the opening theme will feature "The Clown Prince", a showing of the styles and personalities of comedians such as Charlie Chaplin and Harold Lloyd.

It is followed by "The Music Box", featuring Laurel and Hardy as they deliver a new piano to the house on top of the hill. The final king of comedy is none other than W. C. Fields, in his famous role as "The Dentist". Here Fields has an assortment of wierd patients, from a woman who screams when he tries to "look" at her teeth to a man who has such a thick beard that his mouth is impossible for Fields to even find!

The programs will each be repeated at 7 p.m. Wednesday nights at the North Quincy Branch Library beginning Oct. 9.

The remaining schedule:

Oct. 15-16 - Heroes and Villains in Silent Films: Dr. Jeckyll & Mr. Hyde, Don Juan, Dracula.

Oct. 22-23 - Sea Sorcery: Sea Sorcery, Undersea World of Jacques Costeau: Whales, Water Birds.

Oct. 29-30 - Be A Sport: Solo wrestling, Stanley Cup, Moos of Surfing.

Nov. 5-6 - American Time Capsule: American Time Capsule, 1776, Time Out Of War.

Nov. 12-13 - Why Man Creates: Why Man Creates, Glass, Calder Circus, Portrait of a Horse, Magic Machines.

Nov. 19-20 - All That Jazz: Tender Game, Roberta Flack, Legend of Jimmie Blue Eyes, Interview.

Nov. 26-27 - Voyage Across Europe: Sky Over Holland, Yankee Sails Across Europe.

'WHAT BASIS FOR A RELATIONSHIP'

What is the basis for your friendships ... for your personal relationships? What would I have to do ... what would I have to be in order to be your friend?

Myrtle put it this way ... "If a man is going to be my friend he must adhere to my principles. My mother taught me 'always be a lady ... remember what your mother taught you ... don't compromise on your principles for any man.' Needless to say Myrtle is now 63 ... an old maid ... neurotic ... hates men ... fears any close relationship.

Parents do this to children. "As long as you live in my house you'll abide by my rules" ... said Edward. Edward is a staunch Republican ... regular Church goer ... pays cash for everything (lucky guy) ... says credit cards have ruined the country ... will not allow his wife to go out to work ... says "a woman's place is in the home". The basis for any relationship with Edward is "Do and live according to my principles ... or I want no part of you." You can understand why his two older children left home on their 18th birthday and why Jennifer, 17, can hardly wait to leave. Edward's wife is one of those passive ... never speak up women ... rather sickly much of the time. No wonder. Edward is judgmental of everyone ... he literally plays God ... and no one can tolerate that as a basis for a relationship.

Frank says he looks for qualities in another person ... "I like people ... regardless of their color ... creed ... politics ... ideas of life. I find that the smaller I draw the circle the fewer people want to be my friends. I try to accept people as they are ... never try to twist someone to be like I am." It's little wonder that Frank has a great number of close friends.

Let me make the following

Barry Endorses Marshall

Paul Barry, recent candidate for sheriff of Norfolk County, has "totally endorsed" Clifford H. Marshall who won the Democratic nomination in the state primary.

Barry met with the Quincy

Paul Christian Assigned To CG Cutter

Coast Guard Fireman Apprentice Paul D. Christian, son of Mrs. Lawrence Christian of 52 Narragansett Rd., Merrimont, has been reassigned to the Coast Guard Cutter Planetree homeported at Juneau, Alaska.

The Planetree, a 180-foot buoy tender, maintains marine aids to navigation in Southeast Alaska. In addition, Christian along with the crew of the Planetree will provide assistance to numerous ships in distress during search and rescue missions.

A 1973 graduate of Quincy High School, he joined the Coast Guard in January, 1974.

suggestions for a successful relationship. First ... BE SUFFICIENTLY STRONG WITHIN YOURSELF ... so that you don't NEED people to supply what you don't have. Otherwise, you'll be using people. Use things ... never another person. Develop your own qualities rather than leaning heavy on someone else. This applies to husbands and wives, also. Partnerships ... friendships should have a dimension of equal benefit, though different. Carry your end of the relationship.

Secondly ... DON'T BE MISGUIDED by thinking that I can change this other person to be what I want him/her to be. You can't. Any such idea is doomed from the start. Your friend ... or lover ... or husband/wife ... will resist your manipulation to change him/her ... will become defensive ... and the relationship will be strained or destroyed. Certainly there must be adjustments in friendship ... or in a marriage. But pommeling ... twisting ... criticizing the other person will not bring a closer relationship. A petition has been presented to said Court for probate of a certain instrument purporting to be the last will of said deceased by EVELYN L. MURPHY of Quincy in the County of Norfolk praying that she be appointed executrix thereof without giving a surety on his bond.

Usually ... if the qualities you like and want in another person who is to be your friend ... or marriage partner ... aren't there, you can't put them there. Don't try to project your images to what another person "ought" to be on to him/her. It's either there ... or it isn't there.

Let your relationships be comfortable and free. No one wants to be your emotional servant. Certainly you don't want to be servant to anyone's demands. The deepest relationships are based on freedom ... the jewel in any relationship.

Ricca Director

Quincy Based CETA Program To Train Over 500 For Jobs

The Comprehensive Employment and Training Act [CETA] program was officially launched this week.

Paul Ricca, director of the Quincy's office of Manpower Services, explained that the $1,890,021 program will "encompass all manpower services formerly existing in categorical programs under one umbrella."

Funds have been provided to train over 500 persons in Quincy and 10 other local communities.

Quincy was named by the state office of Manpower Affairs as one of 19 sub-grantee areas throughout the state. The area covers 10 other towns besides Quincy: Milton, Weymouth, Braintree, Scituate, Cohasset, Hull, Randolph, Hingham, Holbrook and Norwell.

According to the guidelines of the program, the highest-ranking official in the city—in this case Mayor Walter J. Hannon—is the designator of the program. Ricca noted that an advisory Manpower Planning Board counselled Hannon on the specific uses of the allotted funds.

CETA is divided into two parts, Title I and Title II.

Title I incorporates programs in on-the-job training, youth work-experience, adult work-experience and classroom training.

The $951,785 allocated for Title I programs will help to fund over 400 jobs. Ricca estimated the availability of 120-130 on-the-job training openings, 250 youth work-experience jobs and 28 adult work-experience jobs.

He could not, at the time, estimate the number of openings in the classroom training division.

Ricca noted that in the on-the-job training openings, CETA provides "a training allowance" to the employer, an allowance which amounts to half of the employee's salary. Later, if the employer decides to retain the employee fulltime, the employer himself would pay the individual a full salary.

Title II programs deal with public service employment. The $691,097 allocation will help to fund approximately 100 jobs. Ricca said that under Title II, CETA places individuals in city, town or non-profit organizations within the sub-grantee area. Salaries are then paid for by the program.

Although Ricca said there are "relatively few Title II jobs available now," he expects "a windfall of funds" in the future.

Title II allocations also include $147,139 in discretionary funds. The Secretary of Labor decides when and how these funds will be

Clark Opposes School

Dr. Creedon Labels NQHS Referendum 'Delaying Tactic'

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

A proposed referendum on construction of a new North Quincy High School has been labelled a "delaying tactic" by School Supt. Dr. Lawrence P. Creedon.

Responding to Rep. William Delahunt's request that the issue be placed on a referendum by the City Council, Dr. Creedon told The Quincy Sun:

"I consider the move to be a delaying tactic. This matter has been before the citizens of Quincy, before the city government, under active consideration for a long time—even when Mr. Delahunt was a member of the City Council.

"If this kind of move were to have been made, it should have been considered a year ago, two years ago, three years ago, four years ago, and not now when it is time to make a critical decision."

Meanwhile, a citizens group headed by former School Committee Vice-Chairman A. Wendell Clark has launched a campaign opposing construction of a new North Quincy High School.

Clark and co-leader Fritz Streifer propose instead an addition to Atlantic Junior High School and renovations to the present high school.

They would move approximately 400 ninth graders from the present high school to Atlantic Junior to alleviate present space problems.

The pair this week placed newspaper advertisements asking the public opposed to construction of a new school to fill out a coupon declaring their opposition.

"We want to stir up the apathetic public," said Streifer.

Dr. Creedon said that the question of a new North Quincy High School has been around for a number of years and "now is the time for the elected officials to do what they should do."

He said there is much more than the size of school enrollment involved.

The overall plan he said is to:

'Wording Confusing'

Cerasoli May Block Ballots Over MBTA Referendum

State representative candidate Robert Cerasoli may attempt to halt printing of the First Norfolk District election ballots over "confusing" wording of the South Quincy MBTA station referendum question.

Cerasoli claims the public policy question as re-written by Atty. Gen. Robert Quinn's office is "confusing and unclear."

He says he plans to seek a temporary restraining order in court to stop the printing of the Nov. 5 election ballots which would be used by voters in the First Norfolk District.

The district includes all of Ward 2, Precincts 1, 2, 5 of Ward 3 and two precincts in North Weymouth.

Cerasoli says the government has "usurped the people's right to vote" on the proposed construction of the MBTA station and parking area in South Quincy.

Cerasoli said he obtained over 1,000 negative responses when he petitioned for the question:

"Should the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority x [MBTA] construct a rapid transit station in South Quincy?"

But, he said, the attorney general's office which composes the actual question for the ballot, changed the original wording to read:

"Shall the Representative from this district be instructed to vote in favor of the passage of a bill requiring the Mass. Bay Transportation Authority [MBTA] to construct a rapid transit station in South Quincy?"

Cerasoli objects to the phrase "the passage of a bill requiring," which he feels confuses the issue. He said, "People are going to read the question and say, 'The passage of a bill requiring?' What does that mean?"

Cerasoli said that he had canvassed the first Norfolk District on the building of a South Quincy station and encountered "a tremendous groundswell of opposition to the station." By putting the question on the November ballot, he said he believed he could obtain "a valid indication of how people felt."

Cerasoli then said he intended to attend the February federal public hearing on the proposed South Quincy station and at that time "present the hearing with a mandate from the people and represent their view."

He said, the original wording of the question had been "clear, objective and unprejudiced." However, Howard Mayo of the attorney general's office who did the actual writing - or re-writing - of the question, said law dictated that the question be phrased in a manner of "instruction" to the representative. He said, too, that the phraseology he used has been implemented since the 1930's.

Cerasoli noted, though, that no law mandated the use of that phraseology. He said he did not object to the instruction format but "to the way in which the

....And, QCA Seeks Referendum On 10-Story Height Limit

The Quincy Citizens Association has voted to launch a referendum petition to place the 10-story building height limit issue on next year's city election ballot.

The limitation, if approved, would affect all future construction in Quincy.

Association President Pat DiStefano said the City Council will first be asked to consider placing the question on the ballot. If the council does not, the petitions will be put into circulation.

The vote for a referendum was taken at a recent meeting of the QCA.

At the same meeting, the association voted to continue its opposition to the proposed South Quincy MBTA station. The QCA, it was decided, will not take any formal part in the current MBTA-DPW Environmental Impact Workshop.

Members, however, will attend the workshops and continue to voice "valid opposition" but will not join the study team, DiStefano said.

Representatives from Warner

Cable Television Corp will be invited to attend the Nov. 6 meeting at the Montclair Men's Club, North Quincy, to explain plans to install cable television in Quincy. A representative from Mayor Walter Hannon's office will also be invited.

The meeting is open to the public.

Wollaston Beach Dredging Touches Off Council Debate

By JAMES QUINN

A proposal to appropriate $2,000 for dredging a section of the sea channel off Wollaston Beach met with vigorous discussion, and some confusion, at a regular meeting of the Quincy City Council Monday night.

After lengthy debate, centering on whether funds remaining from a 1970 council appropriation calling for seawall repair in the area could rightfully be used instead for dredging work, the matter was tabled for further study.

City Engineer Edward Leone told the council members that $42,000 still remains from a $200,000 appropriation the city passed in 1970 for seawall repair. The area presently in need of dredging—the basin running between the Wollaston and Squantum Yacht Clubs—carries an estimated price tag of $175,000, he said.

Under the state's system of requiring cities to supply 25 percent matching funds for such work, Quincy's share of the project cost would thus total about $44,000, said Leone. The necessary $2,000 would come from the city's Excess and Deficiency Fund.

However, several councillors had reservations about the proposal. Councillor Leo J. Kelly asked Leone if the original monies were appropriated for seawall repair only.

"I'm trying to protect the people for whom the money was originally approved," he said. "If there were no need and no list of seawall priorities, fine. But the need for seawall repair still exists there and thus the priority does too."

Leone replied that, according to a recent report from City Auditor, Alexander Smith, original plans for the money have since changed and the priorities have thus become obsolete.

"We're just guessing," argued Councillor Clifford H. Marshall. "No study has been done and we haven't even got a true price estimate yet."

The state's Division of Waterways, of the Department of Public Works, conducts the environmental study and makes the final decision whether such projects will be undertaken, Leone informed the members.

Councillor Dennis E. Harrington, arguing for the appropriation, said the channel leading to both yacht clubs is badly in need of dredging.

"Many people enjoy that area. I think it's a small amount of money to pay for such a much-needed project," he said. He suggested the council investigate whether it is allowable under state law to use funds appropriated for seawall repair for other purposes.

After Council President Arthur H. Tobin told members he would contact the city's budget director and the state Commissioner of Public Works to see if there were sufficient funds available for both dredging and seawall repair, it was voted to table the matter for further study.

Also postponed by the council Monday night were decisions on proposals for increasing capital outlay for the city's refuse collection, and amending the city salary ordinance.

The first proposal, which would raise $10,500 to cover an "escalation clause" in the contract for refuse collection which expires Dec. 31, was referred to the finance committee following a motion by Councillor James A. Sheets. The second, which would amend salaries of the various city departments, was sent to the Ordinance Committee for further study.

Members referred to the Finance Committee a transfer order of $4,000 to be used to purchase a 1966 Mack Truck for snowplowing.

Highway Supt. Daniel Raymond told council members that "by necessity we're getting more into city-owned vehicles." He said private owners withdrew five trucks last year and already three this year. He added that his department can't afford new trucks and that the used vehicles bought by the city in the past have proved very durable.

Leone told the council "it is getting difficult during snowstorms to get private contractors out with their trucks."

City Council Briefs

Public Agenda Approved

The City Council Monday night:

- Approved a transfer of $250 from the Historical Places Capital Outlay Account, for a forced air heater.

- Approved an annual pension of $7,180 to Mrs. Irene E. Maloney, widow of Thomas F. Maloney, a member of the Fire Department for 34 years and Deputy Chief upon his retirement in 1965. Members also referred to the mayor's office a motion to establish a "suitable memorial" to Deputy Maloney.

- Adopted a resolution introduced by Ward 4 Councillor

James A. Sheets making council agendas and calendars available to the public attending council meetings.

- Voted to raise the fine for unleashed dogs from $20 to the maximum $25.

- Referred to the Traffic Commission for a feasibility study a motion by Ward 5 Councillor Warren Powers to change the parking limit time from two hours to one on Chapman Street, between Woodline and Beale Streets, in the area of the Wollaston MBTA station.

- Referred to the Ordinance Committee the mayor's proposed Flood Plain Zoning Ordinance.

- Honored Mr. and Mrs. Luigi DeAntonio, and Mrs. Leo DelGreco of South Quincy, 40-year charter members of the South Quincy Bocce Club.

Freedom Park Zoning Hearing

The Quincy City Council has set Wednesday, Nov. 6, as the date for two public hearings on proposed zoning changes.

At 7 p.m. the public is invited to air its views on the proposed Freedom Park site on Upland Rd.

The area, bounded by Dimmock St., Adams St., and the MBTA right-of-way, has been proposed by Mayor Walter Hannon as a public park. An earlier proposal to change the parcel's zoning from Planned Unit Development to Apartment Housing met with staunch opposition from area residents.

At 8:15 the same evening, a separate public hearing will consider a proposed zoning change from Residence "B" to Residence "A" on a piece of land bordered by Wollaston Ave., Waterston Ave., and Greene and Fenno Sts. An earlier ruling by the planning board denied the zoning change.

Both hearings will be held in the City Council Chamber.

'Totally Unacceptable'

Firefighters Reject $1,040 Pay Hike

James Donovan, president of the Quincy Firefighters Local 792, has refused the city's offer of a $1,040 raise for firefighters and ranking officers calling it "totally unacceptable."

Donovan said the amount covering the fiscal year July 1974-July 1975, would be effective January 1975, making the actual raise only $520.

"That's only a 4 1/2 per cent raise," Donovan said. "We're looking for a 10-to-14 percent increase. With the spiraling inflationary struggle, the $1,040 raise is a totally unacceptable offer."

At last Thursday's second fact-finding session, the firefighters presented their side of the story before Prof. John Hogan of the University of New Hampshire. After hearing the city's presentation at the next session on Friday, Oct. 25, Hogan will reach a wage decision.

However, the fact-finder's decision is not binding.

Donovan denied a report which quoted Quincy's Labor Negotiator Atty. Joseph McParland as saying, "There is no indication that they [the firefighters Association] are in any kind of conciliatory mood." Donovan told The Quincy Sun: "That's not true. We are willing to accept the fact finder's decision if Mr. McParland will."

Donovan reiterated, however, that the $1,040 raise offered by the city was not acceptable.

Quincy patrolmen recently received a $1,400 pay hike, boosting their yearly salary to $12,975 effective Jan. 1, 1975.

Maximum salary for Quincy firefighters is now $11,575. They have not received a pay increase since Jan. 1973.

Donovan also refuted the report that the Association wants "to disband" the Quincy's auxiliary firemen.

"We don't want to disband them," Donovan said. "They can continue to have their own drills, their own meetings...but we don't want untrained amateurs on the fire apparatus. We have enough worries at fires with our concern for our safety and the citizens' safety."

Donovan said the association is working for "a minimum manpower clause" which would require at least 10 officers and 44 firefighters to be in each city station during both day and evening shifts.

Donovan criticized Mayor

Walter J. Hannon's decision not to man the new Germantown fire station with its own separate squad of men. Donovan said:

"The transfer of men from other stations to the Germantown location has diluted the manpower in the city and has caused a safety problem. I feel that this minimum manpower clause would prevent the loss of life to citizens and to firefighters."

Donovan heads the firefighter's negotiating team. Other members of the team are the union's other officers: Peter Quinn, vice president; Thomas Gorman Jr., secretary; and George Lamb, treasurer.

Donovan said he expected the fact finder to reach a judgement "within three weeks" after the Oct. 25 session.

Please daughter with wedding

By RIV TOBIN

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

My daughter wants a small, family-type wedding, the kind her father can afford. Her fiancé's family has a lot of money and they want a real bash. We hate to have a family feud before we are even related by marriage. What do you suggest? — Poor but Proud

Dear Poor but Proud:

Give your daughter the kind of a wedding she wants and her father can afford. When the newlyweds return from their honeymoon let her in-laws give them a bash of a reception.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

I invited a young lady to attend the horse races with me. Should I have paid for her bets? I didn't, and I have a feeling she thought I should. — Perry B.

Dear Perry:

You weren't responsible for her bets. Many people enjoy a day at the race track without ever going near the betting windows. The young lady knew where you were taking her and if she wanted to gamble she should have provided her own money. Of course, if you are an extremely wealthy man you could have treated her to a bet on each race.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

Three of us gals were shopping. I did the driving and when I dropped the first passenger off she turned to the other and said, "See you tonight." Apparently they had a foursome going for that night. I felt hurt and rebuffed. Should I drop this clique? — H and R

Dear H and R:

I don't think you are in a clique. Your friends were simply thoughtless in mentioning their plans in front of you without an explanation. For all you know it could have been a bridge date and it only takes four to play that game. It may have been a theater date and the tickets purchased weeks ago.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

I am allergic to tobacco smoke. It makes my nose run and my eyes water. Would it be all right to ask seatmates, other elevator passengers, etc., to refrain? — No Smoky Jo

Dear No:

It would be all right. In fact, in many public buildings smoking is prohibited in the elevators, lobbies and corridors.

FIRE IN THE NIGHT

If you awoke at night and found your home ablaze, would your escape be quick and orderly, or would you become a victim of bewilderment and panic? Lack of proper planning and knowing what to do have been found to be the greatest causes of death and injury from fires which break out at night.

Hundreds of persons, predominantly women and children, lose their lives in fires each year because of lack of proper planning. Many could have been saved had provisions been made for a second means of escape.

Always plan your living quarters so that there is more than one readily useable exit from each occupied room. For upper story dwellings, a rope ladder should be stored in a handy location near the window. Always plan to close bedroom doors upon retiring. It will block flames long enough to allow room occupants to escape.

Divorce hurt — Sonny

By NANCY ANDERSON
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — "I'm still getting used to being 'Sonny.'" Sonny Bono said against the cacophony of sound, the singing, the dancing and the cries of the director, Art Fisher, who was trying to put a television variety show together.

"The Sonny Comedy Review," Bono's new ABC-TV series done without Cher, was preparing to go on the air.

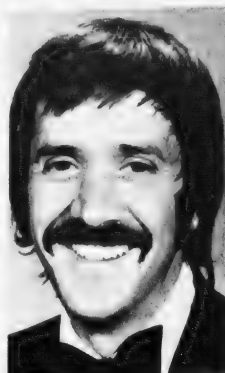

"This divorce (his split from Cher) hurt me a lot worse than my first one," Sonny confided. "This one hurt worse by far. I knew that my first marriage was a very young one, so I always knew it might fail. But this one — I just never thought in any other terms except 'Sonny and Cher.' 'Sonny and Cher.' 'I never separated the two of us in my head, so I couldn't conceive of a divorce. It was a surprise and very hard to imagine. I'm still not able to totally comprehend that I'm just Sonny, not half of Sonny and Cher.'"

The music in the background rose and fell as Fisher urged the dancers into livelier steps. His fiancée, Sally Struthers, a guest on the show, wandered about almost unrecognizable with her face half-hidden by huge glasses and her hair piled high.

"The mail that comes to me now is different in that I'm getting love letters," Sonny said. "I guess you'd call them love letters. At least I never got any like these before. Some are proposals of marriage but more just say, 'I like you. I'd like to meet you. Would you send a picture?' 'I guess I should consider this kind of mail normal. I guess anybody in show business should expect to get it, but I've never gotten flirtatious letters before.'"

"You know, years ago about the first thing I wanted was to be recognized. I wanted to be in the fan magazines. And I sure made that, didn't I?" Sonny chuckled, though wryly.

"At first, I wanted to be a song writer. I felt a lot of hope and excitement, but those emotions are hard to keep.

SONNY BONO

"... a marvelous 11 years."

"Show business is like Disneyland. You look at it from the outside, and it's all bubbles and lights, and when you first get inside you're full of enthusiasm and excitement.

"You wish you could keep that good feeling, but of course you really can't. You wish you could keep the bagatelle — I think that's the word — but show business becomes work just like anything else.

"The feeling you had before you were really entrenched in the industry was like falling in love. Exactly. Exactly.

"Then you go through a honeymoon period you wish would last forever you know. But it ends."

Of his honeymoon period with Cher which, so far as Sonny was concerned, lasted throughout their marriage, Bono said:

"Cher and I never fought. It was a marvelous 11 years. Maybe it's good for some marriages for the couple to scream and yell. Maybe so. I don't know.

"Personally, I don't enjoy screaming and yelling, but maybe that ventilates the situation.

"But we performed, you see, and that took so much energy that ... it never dawned on me that ...

"Actually the reason for our trouble was very simple. When we met, Cher was a very young girl, only 16, so she never really got to experience a certain important portion of a girl's life. And, probably at a certain time, a girl wonders about that part of her life."

Voices of singers in the background rose to such a pitch that it was hard to hear Sonny as he continued.

"There's no hostility between us on the personal level," he said. "Despite the friction in court, we're friends. There's a difference between what goes on on the business level and what you feel on the personal level. I saw Cher the other day, and we talked.

"It's almost a paradox, the business part of our relationship versus the personal part of it."

If he's in love now, Sonny concluded, it's only with his work.

"I'm in love with the show," he said. "That takes my full time."

But where does that leave Connie Foreman?

Juliet Prowse celebrated the second anniversary of her marriage to John McCook with a special 3 a.m. "Performers' Show" at the Desert Inn in Las Vegas, a treat for other performers working the strip to thank them for having voted her "Female Performer of the Year" two out of the past three years. Among the stars in her audience were: Tom Jones, Jim Nabors, Charo, Wayne Newton, Robert Goulet, Jim Bailey, Corbett Monica, Foster Brooks, Dave Barry, David Steinberg and Jan Murray.

Julie Andrews and Blake Edwards add their new daughter, a five-month Vietnamese orphan they adopted, Amy Leigh.

A gifted, young actor must be cradled up. Not only is his language becoming increasingly obscene, but, the other day, while shouting vulgarities, he took off his pants on the set. What a pity, too, because until recently he was one of the most sensible young men in the business and one of the most respected.

Avoid living with in-laws

By PAT and MARILYN DAVIS
Copley News Service

What can I do?

Questioning

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

I am getting married in two months. We will have very little money and Joe has suggested that we live with my mother. She does have enough room for us but I just can't see starting out living with my mother-in-law. Why can't my future husband understand?

Helen

Dear Helen:

No house containing a mother-in-law is large enough for newlyweds. And don't assume I'm against in-laws, I'm not.

You will be happier in a small apartment. Every young couple requires privacy to settle problems which are bound to arise. If you do not have enough money to support yourselves, postpone your marriage. Don't marry with the idea of changing your fiancé. It won't happen.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

My wife was a beautiful girl when we were married five years ago, but you should see her now. She goes around with her hair in rollers, cream on her face, and wears a sloppy robe all day. In fact, she even cooks my dinner in this condition — if you can call it cooking. She opens cans!

You might wonder what she does all day. Well, I'll tell you. She listens to soap operas or talk shows on the radio. Her head is crammed with bits and pieces of off information. She has gained 20 pounds on her newfound life-style. In the words of a popular radio personality, "She is a porker."

Dear Question:

Personal habits are important. Tell your wife that you love her, but tell her of your complaints.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

I have a relative who has been drinking heavily. I tried to talk to him about this and he told me that it was none of my business. I'm really worried. How can I convince him to stop drinking?

E.D.

Dear E.D.:

You can't. Your relative must make his own decision. You can suggest Alcoholics Anonymous. AA has done a great deal in rehabilitating alcoholics. This organization is listed in your telephone book. Good luck.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

My problem is my mother and sister. If the three of us have a disagreement, the two of them are always against me. My sister is older than I am and my mother always listens to her. My Mom won't allow me out after 10 p.m. but my sister stays out until 2 a.m. and tells Mom she got in at 11:30. Shall I tell on my sister? Can you help?

Needs It

Dear Needs It:

Jealousy between brothers and sisters has always existed. This rivalry can be handled wisely or it can be an endless round of fighting, tattling, and accusations. Tell your mother just what you have told me. I feel quite certain that she will understand your side.

Mr., Mrs. David J. Crowley Honored On 40th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. David J. Crowley Sr. of 95 Rockland St., Hough Neck, were honored recently at a surprise party held in celebration of the couple's 40th anniversary.

Over 200 friends, relatives and Quincy officials attended the dinner party planned by the Crowley children: David Jr. of Quincy, Mrs. Mary Gregoire of Quincy and Mrs. Jean Keenan of Virginia.

The celebration was held at Humarock Lodge in Humarock. Among those attending were Mayor Walter J. Hannon, former mayor James McIntyre, Senator-City Council President Arthur Tobin, Rep. Thomas Brownell, Ward 1 Councillor Leo J. Kelly and City Clerk John M. Gillis.

Mrs. Crowley is assistant treasurer-tax collector for the city of Quincy. She has held that position 10 years and has worked for the city 18 years.

Mr. Crowley, now retired, worked as an engineer at General Dynamics. He is a former city councillor. The Crowleys were married Sept. 13, 1934.

MARRIED -- Mrs. Michael A. Walorz is the former Elizabeth A. Tikkanen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Tikkanen of 73 West St., West Quincy. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Walorz of 17 Sampson Place, Braintree. They were married recently in St. Mary's Church, Quincy. The bride is a graduate of Archbishop Williams High School and Bridgewater State College. She is employed as an assistant personnel manager at Filene's in the South Shore Plaza. The groom is a graduate of Braintree High School and is employed at Walorz Trucking Co. After a wedding trip to Florida, the couple will live in Quincy.

Fountain Photo Club Foliage Trip Oct.15

The Fountain Photo Club at 1000 Southern Artery has planned a foliage trip for Tuesday, Oct. 15.

A bus will leave the Center at 11 a.m., stopping at Finerty's in Cohituate for a luncheon. The bus will travel through Acton, Nashoba Valley and Groton, stopping at an apple and pumpkin stand.

A whist party has been scheduled for Friday, Oct. 18 at 1:30 in the Activity Room. Prizes will be awarded and refreshments will be served.

The Center will show the full-length feature film "To Catch A Thief" Monday, Oct. 21 at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium.

Rev. Joseph Downey of St. Joseph's Church, Quincy Point will be the guest speaker

Tuesday, Oct. 22 at 2 p.m. in the auditorium. Fr. Downey is participating in the Center's monthly series, "The Role of Religion in Our Lives." Coordinating this series is Rev. Pierson Harris. Harold Phalen played the organ before each program and is accompanied by one of the Center's soloists, Peg Cavanagh, Isabelle MacFarlane and Hazel Hendry.

The Center has arranged a shopping trip to Chestnut Hill Mall in Newton, Friday, Oct. 25. A bus will leave Southern Artery at 10 a.m.

The Fountain Photo Club will have the 12th Audubon International Exhibition of Nature Photography produced by Mass. Cam-Cats brought to the Center's auditorium. Their slides are prize-winning ones and the presentation will begin Thursday, Oct. 31 at 7:30 p.m. The program will take the place of the regular Nov. 7 meeting.

The Quincy School Committee has agreed to eliminate class registration fees for senior citizens enrolled in the Center's adult education courses offered by the Quincy School Department.

Classes affected by this decision are crewel embroidery, rug hooking, decoupage, two knitting classes, advanced dressmaking, beginners dressmaking and quilting. Center citizens who have already paid the registration fee can receive a refund at the Senior Center office.

Non-resident center members are reminded to renew their memberships this month. New mailing lists will be prepared in November.

Storing Squash For Winter Vitamins

This appears to be the Year of the Squash, if the mountains of native squashes prominent at roadside farm stands and produce counters are any indication, reports the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture [MDA].

Bay State growers and home gardeners have produced vast quantities of the winter squashes, and they are available at surprisingly low sale prices right now.

Since most of us can consume only so much squash during the season, one wonders what happens to the rest.

The hard-shell varieties - Hubbard, buttercup, acorn and turban - that make up the "winter" squashes can be easily stored, says the MDA, and they will keep well from three to six months. If you have the right place to keep them, buying now can save money and store vitamins for the winter months.

They keep best at temperatures between 50 and 60 degrees F., with moderate relative humidity - 70-75 percent. Most readily available is probably in the basement or attached garage. Storage in heated areas is not recommended; when the temperature rises above 60 degrees, transpiration increases, and the fruit will dry out and shrink.

Choose mature whole squashes without cuts or bruises; decay starts there. Remove the stems. Wash the whole fruit with a mild detergent to remove surface bacteria, and dry them thoroughly. Piling them on top of each other will produce spoilage. The best storage is on shelves, in single layers, with a small space between each one.

Storing squash is worth the effort; they're good eating, loaded with vitamins - predominantly vitamin A - and priced right now as though there were no inflation.

Native apples are in heavy supply now, with Macs, Red Delicious, Cortland and Gravenstein prominent. Cortlands are on sale in many stores. The Cranberry harvest is at its peak. Gourd and Indian corn are at most farm stands. Pumpkins are in heavy supply. The Massachusetts harvest is good. The leaves are brightening. It's really autumn.

Storing Squash For Winter Vitamins

This appears to be the Year of the Squash, if the mountains of native squashes prominent at roadside farm stands and produce counters are any indication, reports the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture [MDA].

Bay State growers and home gardeners have produced vast quantities of the winter squashes, and they are available at startlingly low sale prices right now.

Since most of us can consume only so much squash during the season, one wonders what happens to the rest.

The hard-shell varieties - Hubbard, butternut, buttercup, acorn and turban - that make up the "winter" squashes can be easily stored, says the MDA, and they will keep well from three to six months. If you have the right place to keep them, buying now can save money and store vitamins for the winter months.

They keep best at temperatures between 50 and 60 degrees F., with moderate relative humidity - 70-75 percent. Most readily available is probably in the basement or attached garage. Storage in heated areas is not recommended; when the temperature rises above 60 degrees, transpiration increases, and the fruit will dry out and shrink.

Choose mature whole squashes without cuts or bruises; decay starts there. Remove the stems. Wash the whole fruit with a mild detergent to remove surface bacteria, and dry them thoroughly. Piling them on top of each other will produce spoilage. The best storage is on shelves, in single layers, with a small space between each one.

Storing squash is worth the effort; they're good eating, loaded with vitamins - predominantly vitamin A - and priced right now as though there were no inflation.

Native apples are in heavy supply now, with Macs, Red Delicious, Cortland and Gravenstein prominent. Cortlands are on sale in many stores. The Cranberry harvest is at its peak. Gourds and Indian corn are at most farm stands. Pumpkins are in heavy supply. The Massachusetts harvest is good. The leaves are brightening. It's really autumn.

Merrymount PTO Honors Gerald Gowen

Gerald Gowen, past principal of Merrymount School, was guest of honor at an informal buffet held recently by the Merrymount PTO.

Principal of Merrymount

Schools for the past five years, Gowen is now principal of Snug Harbor School.

Other guests included School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon, Elementary School Coordinator Fred Nolan and Miss Katherine Norris, principal of Merrymount School.

Mrs. Rosalie Barry and Mrs. Betty Swanton, past presidents of Merrymount PTO, presented Gowen with a gift from the organization.

Law Office 'Efficiency' Legal Secretaries Topic

Walpole Atty. Mark S. Hoffman will address the Norfolk County Legal Secretaries Association at its meeting to be held at Artie's Fireside Restaurant, 427 Sprague St., Dedham, Tuesday, Oct. 15.

A cocktail hour will start at 6 p.m., dinner at 7 p.m. and the meeting at 8 p.m. Hoffman will discuss "Efficiency in the Law Office, Billing and the Delegation of Authority".

Anyone interested in attending the meeting may contact Andrea Taylor, 543-6331. Any attorney, legal secretary, law clerk or employer or employee in any law-related field interested in hearing only Attorney Hoffman's comments is welcome to attend at 8:30 p.m.

The development of a Women's Center at Quincy Junior College has been the task of a group of area women over the past several months.

Scheduled to open in November, the center will function as an autonomous group from the Junior College, but will maintain liaison communications with the school through Joan Sullivan, the college advisor to women.

The Center, which is located in the old courthouse building on Coddington St. will be open and staffed from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Wednesdays, and from 7-9 p.m. on Thursdays. Its goal is to provide a full range of services which will be available to all women in the community.

A resource center has been set up and will provide information on such subjects as personal counseling, health services, legal advice and vocational and educational counseling. Referrals will be made. A library will be located within the center and will offer books and material of special interest to women. Another goal of the center is to introduce more women-oriented courses into the Junior College curriculum.

The official opening of the Center will be held Nov. 10 as part of a Woman's Day scheduled to be held at the College from noon to 4 p.m. Speakers will be presented and workshops will be held.

The planning staff of the Center includes Kathy Roberts, Pam Spring, Kathy O'Donnell, Chris Kaufman, Rachel Tedesco, Vicki Smith, Marilyn Jackson, Ann Keating, Mandi Cohen, Donna Murray, Kathy Fornaro and Rose Devere.

Anyone wishing more information on the Center is asked to contact Mrs. Spring at 107 Waterston Ave., or Mrs. Roberts at 34 Estabrook Rd, Wollaston.

Kenneth Hills Installed Kiwanis Club President

Kenneth M. Hills was installed new president of Quincy's Kiwanis Club Monday, succeeding John Kent.

The following officers were also installed during the ceremony at Quincy YMCA:

directors.

Michael Fagerlund, a past president, served as program chairman. Conducting the installation ceremony was charter member Thomas Burgin, fourth president of the club, serving his term in 1927.

Tickets are now available for an Oct. 19 dinner honoring International President of Kiwanis, Roy Davis, at the Statler-Hilton.

Senior members are reminded to make a formal request to continue in the same classification.

Mayor Proclaims Lions Day

Mayor Walter J. Hannon proclaimed Tuesday, Oct. 8 as "World Lions Service Day" in honor of Quincy Lions Club members.

Praising Lion Clubs worldwide for their "service to the needy of the world," Hannon urged Quincy citizens to mark the date "as a special observance in recognition of the numerous services provided by the Quincy Lions Club to the needy and lonely."

On Tuesday, the 27,000 clubs of the International Association of Lions Clubs met in their home communities to symbolize the unity of purpose best defined by the motto of the worldwide Lions organization: "We Serve."

Creedon Calls NQHS Referendum 'Delaying Tactic'

[Cont'd from Page 1]

● Build a new four-year high school.

● Move Atlantic Junior High School students to the present North Quincy High School, which was originally built as a junior high school.

● Turn Atlantic Junior into an elementary school consolidating pupils from the Parker and the Massachusetts Fields School. [The latter was built in the 1890's].

● Send most of Central Junior students to North Quincy High School, close Central and develop the land which could bring in an estimated $150,000 in tax revenue. Central is over 80 years old.

Dr. Creedon said that school officials agree that enrollment at North Quincy High School, grades nine through 12, during the next decade will not go appreciably below what it is now.

Enrollment is now 1,900 there—down 30 from last year, he said.

Enrollment at a full four-year North Quincy High School would be approximately 2,000 students, he said.

Delahunt said he is seeking a referendum because "a majority of people I have talked with in the north end of the city oppose the Squantum site for a new high school."

Delahunt said the City Council could act on his request at the Oct. 21 meeting. He said the Council would have the option of putting the question on a special election ballot until the city municipal elections next year.

Delahunt said he agreed with School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon that the present North Quincy High School "is inadequate according to modern educational standards."

However, Delahunt favors the building of an addition to Atlantic Junior High School and the renovating of North Quincy School instead of the building of an entirely new structure. Delahunt said:

"I have serious doubts as to whether or not there is sufficient justification for the building of a brand new high school at any location."

Joseph Bishop of the school building assistance bureau has evaluated North Quincy High School as a building of "structural soundness" which could be renovated," he said.

Delahunt is confident that the Quincy legislative delegation could pursue "aggressive lobbying" to obtain state aid for the estimated $9,825,000 to build an addition to Atlantic Junior High and to renovate North Quincy High.

State aid would bring the cost of the project down to $3,438,750, he said.

About a dozen people have so far backed the newly-started Clark-Streifer opposition force according to Streifer who says they want to "stir up the apathetic public."

Clark, vice-chairman of the School committee for 16 of his 21 years of service, said:

"The basic trouble at North is that it contains four grades, 9-12. It is my contention that the junior high grade 9 is a substantial cause for overcrowding at North Quincy High School."

In order to alleviate the overcrowded condition at North, Clark and Streifer advocate the implementation of one of two long-range alternatives as well as the implementation of one short-range step.

The first proposal calls for the building of an addition to Atlantic Junior High School, an addition which would, according to Clark, "accommodate the 9th grade [at Atlantic] and reduce the population at North by roughly 400 pupils, leaving ample room for 1,500 pupils in North."

Concomitant with this proposal is a second project calling for "renovations" at North Quincy High School.

Figures compiled by the Quincy School Dept. estimate the cost of the entire project as $9,825,000. The renovations alone would cost $4,300,000. However, this estimation does not include the 65 per cent state aid reduction for which the city could apply.

Chapter 754 of the Mass. General Laws dictates that state aid is available "only if the construction project so modernizes the school that it is then the equivalent of a new school." According to Streifer and Clark, these proposed renovations would qualify the city of Quincy to receive the appropriate state aid. If the city did receive such state aid on the project, the cost would dip to $3,438,750.

Nonetheless, the School

Department figures also list a second cost for these projects - an "effect on future building needs" cost. According to the School Department, both Central Junior and Mass. Fields elementary school would have to be replaced. The cost of this project, including state aid, runs close to $9 million: $8,735,000.

Yet both Clark and Streifer deny the need of this second cost. Streifer said:

"Central Junior High is a very fine school. And a paint brush and a can of paint could do a lot for Mass. Fields."

Clark and Streifer's suggested short-range method of easing the overcrowded condition at North involves a northerly boundary change which would send more students to Quincy High School. By shifting the boundary from Furnace Brook Parkway to Beale and Beach Sts., some 200 students could attend Quincy High School instead of North Quincy High.

Clark said he favored this boundary change as "an immediate step...which could solve the overcrowding problem to some extent." He added:

"It would take a long time to build an addition to Atlantic, for example; and the boundary change would be a good interim solution."

Unlike Dr. Creedon, both Clark and Streifer see the decline in enrollment as a factor which lessens the need for a new North Quincy High School.

The second alternative favored by Clark and Streifer involves the building of an addition to North Quincy High School at Hunt St. This alternative, thumbed down by the City Council in the early 1970's, would entail the taking of 25 homes along Hunt St. But Clark said:

"Taking of homes for the building of a high school is nothing new in Quincy."

The estimated cost of this project, again using School Department figures issued in August 1973, is $5,077,500 including an $8,222,500 reduction from state aid. The figure also includes renovations to North Quincy High School.

Delahunt, however, opposes this plan, since it involves the taking of the 25 homes by eminent domain.

Once again, school department figures show the same second cost of $8,735,000 for this project. Delahunt, like Clark and Streifer, disagrees with the necessity of this added cost. Delahunt said:

"We have to look ahead, yes, but not so far ahead as to price ourselves out of the market."

According to projections compiled for the city of Quincy by the state's Department of Education, enrollment in Quincy Public Schools will reach a low of 14,989 by 1977.

Last year's official enrollment was 16,203 and this year's figure dropped 234 to 15,969, with North Quincy's student population dipping from 1,932 to an even 1,900.

"It is my feeling that North Quincy High School can serve a useful purpose for many years to come. Until there is a definite indication of what enrollment will do in future years, we should proceed slowly," Clark said.

Streifer contends too, that the birth rate has caused "a substantial drop in enrollment." He quoted birth records for the first three months of 1974 as showing births at Quincy City Hospital down by 40, at St. Margaret's down by 70 and at South Shore Hospital, up by 11.

Clark totally opposes the building of a new North Quincy High School at the proposed Squantum site. Calling the industrial park proposal a "gimmick to make the site more saleable," Clark labelled the Squantum site as "a very undesirable one."

"The site is as far out of the area that the school would serve as it possibly could be," he said. "With the necessary filling in of a number of acres to make the land usable plus the expense of bringing in the utilities, I dare say it would cost $2-3 million before the site is usable for school purposes."

"If the city is going to spend that much money for building a new high school, they should go out to Hunt St."

Cerasoli May Try To Block Ballots

instruction was worded."

"I was not contacted or asked about the intent of the public policy on the South Quincy station. Now, it is easy for officials at the hearing to say, 'Did the people vote against the building of a South Quincy station or did they vote against the passage of a bill requiring the MBTA to construct a rapid transit station in South Quincy?' I know it's splitting hairs, but it might decide whether the question is a valid referendum."

Cerasoli quoted Chapter 53, Section 19 of the Mass. General Laws which dictates that the wording of such a question of public policy be drafted by the attorney general "in such simple unequivocal and adequate form as shall be deemed best suited for presentation upon the ballot."

He said, "Why couldn't the question have been worded more simply...so as not to confuse the question? This is another way, in my mind, that the state government has usurped the peoples' right to vote on a specific issue."

Cerasoli said that if the First Norfolk District ballots have already been printed, he would seek a restraining order to delete the six words - "the passage of a bill requiring" - from the question.

If that plan fails, Cerasoli has a third alternative. He said, "I'll advertise and organize to let the people know that the question is distorted and to vote 'No' on it."

He added, "Regardless of the merits or demerits of the station, there is nothing wrong with letting the people vote on an issue which will affect their tax rate and their city."

Quincy Mini-Expo '74 Planned

The Quincy Mini-Expo '74 is planned for Friday, Nov. 15 at the Quincy Armory.

The 6 p.m. to 11 p.m. event will benefit the Southern Massachusetts Muscular Dystrophy Chapter which includes Quincy.

An estimated 50 to 55 firms and organizations will have products, and arts and crafts exhibits on display. Sports personalities will make appearances during the show.

Mrs. Leon Belanger of 73 Waterston Ave., Wollaston, is heading up the event assisted by Miss Linda Harris, program coordinator for the Southern Massachusetts Muscular Dystrophy Chapter.

Deadline for obtaining exhibit space is Nov. 5. Space reservations may be made by calling 479-7606 or 843-7977. There is a $5 fee for the space.

Coming Attraction: Burke And McIntyre For Congress?

By HENRY BOSWORTH

A few years ago the city's then two biggest political powers—James McIntyre and George Burke—almost collided on the way to the mayor's office.

Amelio Della Chiesa who had been mayor longer than FDR had been president, was giving up his City Hall throne. And McIntyre and Burke wanted to try it out for size. The year was 1965.

Each was getting ready to run but neither relished the idea of having the other for an opponent. And mutual friends of both hated the thought of having to choose sides.

Well, that big battle never came off. Word was that the pair talked it out—a sort of summit meeting if you will—and decided not to duel. The fact that many mutual friends and supporters would be put in the middle played a major roll in that decision.

Burke decided to run for district attorney instead—even if then still strong and popular Republican incumbent Myron Lane sought re-election. But the latter wanted to call it a career and Burke plowed to victory and has been untouchable since.

McIntyre, who as a youngster had hooked up with Della Chiesa in a hot race for mayor in 1959, rolled to an easy win over Joseph LaRia for the mayor's chair when Della Chiesa bowed out.

Well, so?

Well, just this. There is still a possibility that the big battle between Burke and McIntyre may come off sometime in the future. Or, another summit meeting.

Both are still political powers. And both would like to someday go to Washington.

Burke toyed with the idea of running against Senator Edward Brooke a couple of years ago.

Both he and McIntyre wouldn't mind going down to Washington as a Congressman. Right now you'd need dynamite to get Democratic incumbent James Burke out of the 11th Congressional District seat. Neither [George] Burke nor McIntyre would run against him—they respect him too much.

But when Jim Burke decides he has had his fill of Washington, you may just see McIntyre and George Burke squaring off.

Burke probably has the edge right now. The name certainly wouldn't hurt. He's in the limelight. And in the September primary he racked up the biggest vote in the county. McIntyre who once lived a fishbowl life, no longer is active as an "out front" candidate, but is very much a power in the background.

Well, it could happen. Certainly would be interesting.

MAYOR Walter Hannon, Development Director John Cheney and Planning Director Geoffrey Davidson have been in Montreal this week talking to developers and looking around. What they're looking for reportedly are ideas on how to develop the downtown Hancock parking area. They are due back today.

YOU KNOW, local candidates should be happy [and grateful] that Richard Koch, the city's new and first-commissioner of natural resources, has never decided to run for political office. And the one's he has backed should be, ditto.

Koch, founder of the social-recreation club that bears his name and former executive secretary of the Park-Recreation Board, drew a full-house for his swearing in as commissioner last week.

From the size of the crowd in the City Council chamber you'd think a mayor was being sworn in. Republican incumbent Walter Hannon, looking at the throng mused: "I'd like to welcome the Democratic City Committee to City Hall."

OOPS! In last week's column we reported that Board of Registrars Chairman and Mrs. Guy Faiella will celebrate their 41st wedding anniversary at a reception Oct. 19 at 6 p.m. at the Bryan VFW Hall. But the date should have been Oct. 24. Sorry about that, Guy.

SIGN on tax payers' window at City Hall: "Smile. It Won't Hurt. But It Can't Hurt."

SMILE DEPT: From the Quincy Kiwanis Club newsletter: "How's business these days?" asked Joe. "It couldn't be worse! Even my customers who never pay their bills have stopped buying."

Woodman's Shavings

The World's Classiest Spittoon

By WENDELL WOODMAN

BOSTON — In his bid to scuttie the Magnuson-Studds bill establishing a 200-mile territorial claim for U.S. fisheries, President Ford has capitulated to the bureaucratic mentality of the State Department and its program for appeasing us into the world's classiest spittoon.

It is the President's view, rightful and proper, that the bill represents Congressional intrusion into the conduct of American foreign policy as enunciated by the Department of State. That is precisely what it is, thank God, and the sooner the better.

If there were any likelihood that American fishermen will have representation at the Law of the Sea conference that resumes in Vienna next March, then President Ford might have a selling point. But with the State Department sitting as the U.S. designee, that will not happen. The last thing the State Department ever acknowledges is an affiliation with the United States or any of its interests.

The only way this country is going to protect itself against the kind of international poaching that has turned the fishing industry into an historical landmark is to slip an Act of Congress into the diplomatic pouch with instructions telling "Bureaucracy is a giant mechanism operated by pygmies".

—Honore de Balzac

our delegate where to sign his name.

Dr. Henry Kissinger is afraid that the Magnuson-Studds bill won't allow the State Department enough flexibility in negotiating international agreements. Dr. Kissinger is right. The bill will prevent the State Department from giving away our fishing industry.

The paradox is that the State Department, which hates to make any kind of decision, is asking for that privilege. Congress would be foolhardy to entrust this important matter to that bureaucracy.

The agreements that come out of the Law of the Sea conference are of vital interest not only to the fishing industry, but also to the nation's economy and the national defense. The State Department is not conversant with these subjects.

Dr. Kissinger argues that "any effort to enforce a 200-mile fisheries zone unilaterally established against nonconsenting nations would be likely to lead to confrontations."

Would it make any difference if they consented? Under the present arrangement, we consented to Ecuador having a 200-mile limit, and now our State Department has to pay Ecuador about a million dollars a year in ransom for the return of any American fishing boats that don't swamp when Ecuador opens fire on them with the navy we gave them. That's in addition to the foreign aid we bestow on Ecuador.

And isn't it time we asked the Russian fleet to stop putting in at New Bedford?

The Defense Department is scared to death of the Magnuson-Studds bill because, it says, other nations might retaliate by imposing restrictions that would impede our military mobility.

The blind spot in that position is that other nations have 200-mile limits already, those that don't are going to claim them in Vienna if they can get away with it, and the issue is preservation of our fisheries, not whether some admiral will have to change the color of his pins on his polar projection dart board.

If we assert a 200-mile claim, says the Defense Department, then we must be prepared to enforce it. That is a very good idea.

Why don't we tack a rider onto the Magnuson-Studds bill reminding the Defense Department that is one of the reasons we have a Defense Department?

EPA Not Winning Friends

reduced by 25 per cent.

The private educational community fears the decision will lead to a drop in enrollment.

Governmental units have until Jan. 1, 1975 to file with the EPA their plans for reducing parking spaces by 25 per cent. All municipalities within the effected area must file plans, and the state must present a plan through the Executive Office for Administration and Finance.

Plans filed by the federal government will be processed through the General Services Administration.

But the EPA has not been guilty of inconsistency. EPA spokesman Paul Keough reports that the agency is now involved in a bitter internal struggle.

What's it all about? The EPA Laboratories in Needham has been ordered to reduce parking facilities by 25 per cent. "They're really angry about it," says Keough.

How Can I Vote Absentee?

"How can I vote absentee if I will be out of town on election day?" asked a student calling the League of Women Voters Voter Information Phone.

Any registered voter may apply for an absentee ballot in writing up to noon of the day before the election.

You do not have to use a specific form. Apply in person or by mail giving your name as registered, registration address, and address to which a ballot may be sent. Be sure to sign the application as you are registered. If you know you will be out of town for any reason on election day and have no definite address to which an absentee ballot may be sent in advance, you may apply for an absentee ballot and vote at your city or town hall in person anytime prior to election day.

If you receive your absentee ballot by mail read the instructions carefully before voting and be sure to vote in the presence of a valid notary and have your secret ballot verified by a notary and mailed from a community other than your own. Only disabled people are entitled to receive an absentee ballot at their home address and have it notarized and mailed from their own locality.

Disabled people must certify to that fact when they write to apply for an absentee ballot. Ballots must be received by the close of polls (8 p.m.) on election day so be sure to apply for a ballot immediately and return it as soon as possible.

This question is one of the many now being received by the League of Women Voters Voter Information Phone. Individuals with any questions on government may call the VIFone Monday through Friday between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. The number in the Boston area is 357-5880.

• Work will soon begin on a Downtown Mini-Park. It isn't so Mini when it costs $91,000.

• Quincy High's Preston Carroll has been gaining tremendous yardage on the football field. He may soon be called "Carroll The Mover".

• Last week there was a national boycott protesting school busing. Parents were asked to keep their children home. Things would probably be much better if kids could order their parents to stay at home.

• Won't it be nice when Quincy puts Swan Boats in Black's Creek? Then we'll be able to ride on the pollution instead of just seeing it.

Woodard School Qualifies For Free, Reduced Price Lunches

The Quincy Sun has received inquiries concerning Woodard School for Girls' participation in the free or reduced price lunch policy sponsored by the State Department of Education.

Mrs. Eunice Gifford, principal of Woodard School, said, "The program applies to private as well as to public schools. The majority of our girls received some scholarship help. We do have some who can't really afford it." [lunches].

She explained that the qualification guidelines for the program are the same as those guidelines for Quincy Public Schools. Those specifications were published in the Sept. 19 issue of the Quincy Sun.

Mrs. Gifford added, "We receive the funds directly from the state. We make out monthly forms on the entire program. The state keeps very close tabs on us."

Grass Instrument In AID Program

Grass Instrument Co., 101 Old Colony Ave., Wollaston, has supplied $1,415 worth of goods to under developed countries under Agency for International Development (AID) foreign aid programs.

This amount, coupled with contributions by five other 11th district businesses, brings the total value of AID-financed products purchased in Massachusetts over the past six years to $51,727,533.

The commodities, produced by U.S. workers in private enterprises, support economic development in poor countries.

John Costa Featured In High School 'Who's Who'

John J. Costa, a senior at North Quincy High School is to be featured in the eighth annual edition of Who's Who Among American High School Students, 1973-74, the largest student award publication in the nation.

Students from over 20,000 public, private and parochial high schools throughout the country are recognized for their leadership in academics, athletics, activities or community service in the books. Less than 3% of the junior and senior class students nation-wide are awarded this recognition.

Costa is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Costa of 166

Belmont St., Wollaston. His activities include Debate and Speech Events, the Science Club, the Math Team, School Newspaper, Drama Club and Student Union. He is also an Eagle Scout, member of the National Honor Society, and assistant director of St. Ann's Parish Folk Mass group.

In addition to having his biography published in the book, Costa will also compete for one of 10 scholarship awards of $500 to $1,000 funded by the publishers and will be invited to participate in the firm's annual "Survey of High Achievers".

S.S. Office Hopes To Offer Downtown Service Soon

The North Quincy Social Security Administration office will offer detached service at the RSVP office in downtown Quincy as soon as the federal government lifts its hiring freeze on the social security administration.

Senior citizens have had difficulty finding transportation to and locating the new social security office which relocated in the State Street South complex.

Frank Culkin, district manager of the North Quincy office, considers the idea of detached service a good one and would be willing to implement it when he once again has a full complement of personnel. At this time, the North Quincy office has four vacancies which it cannot fill.

Both Ward 4 Councillor James A. Sheets and Putnam Borden, executive director, Quincy Council on Aging are working closely with the social security administration on the problem.

Musical Program For Squantum Seniors Club

The Squantum Senior Citizen Club will meet Tuesday, Oct. 15 at 7:30 P.M. in Maryhall, Star of the Sea Church, Squantum.

Following the business meeting a program of songs of yesterday and today will be given by Miss Claire Barrette accompanied by Mrs. Yvette Barrette. Miss Barrette, a ward secretary at Quincy Hospital, also sings professionally and for nursing home patients. At present she is studying voice with Professor Marvin Dirks of Eastern Nazarene College.

All money for the fall foliage bus trip must be turned in to Mrs. Marjorie Holmberg by Oct. 12. Area residents 60 years of age or older are invited to join the club.

Survival Raises $2,000 In March

Survival, Inc., raised approximately $2,000 in the recent 20 mile March Against Drug Abuse in Boston.

The money was raised by 25 marchers who obtained sponsors to pay them for every mile they walked. The marchers, who volunteered from all areas of the South Shore including Randolph, Braintree, Weymouth, Quincy, and Hull, all finished the 20 miles with a few blisters, but successfully.

The money will go to aid Survival in its rehabilitative and preventive treatment against drug abuse and in work with the youth of the South Shore.

Friday Evening Service At N.Q. Library

Friday evening service has been resumed at the North Quincy Branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library, announces Library Director Warren E. Watson.

Regular hours now will be 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

That is the same schedule which was in effect before the energy crisis last Fall.

The Board of Library Trustees voted to restore the hours at a recent meeting.

At the same meeting the Library Trustees discussed the question of whether to replace the Squantum Branch with bookmobile service. The branch is located in the cellar of the Squantum Fire Station. Use of that branch has declined steadily, the board learned, to the lowest level of business in its history.

Reasons for the decline, according to Watson, are the tiny size of the branch, its location and its necessarily limited collection.

These limitations force most users to go to larger branches such as North Quincy to obtain needed services and materials, he said. The spacious Squantum School media center is next door so that elementary class visits are no longer regular events, and the branch has neither space nor material for older students.

The trustees considered whether bookmobile service would stimulate greater impulse-use of library materials, as is usually the case.

After lengthy discussion the Library Board tabled action on the issue pending further study.

Steven Costello At CG Training Center

Steven F. Costello, son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Costello of 89 North Bayfield Rd., North Quincy, is undergoing basic training at the Coast Guard Training Center, Cape May, N.J.

During the 10-week course, he will receive instruction in Coast Guard history and tradition, seamanship, first aid, fire fighting and marksmanship. Costello will also take part in a physical fitness program at the center.

He is a 1974 graduate of Archbishop Williams High School, Braintree.

Sin, Disease, Death Topic

"Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" is the question to be answered in Sunday's Lesson-Sermon at First Church of Christ, Scientist, 20 Greenleaf St., Quincy.

Scriptural passages from the Old Testament book of Job include verse 23 from chapter 37: "Touching the Almighty, we cannot find Him out: He is excellent in power, and in judgment, and in plenty of justice: He will not afflict."

Church service and Sunday School are at 10:45 a.m.

World Wide Communion Sunday At Adams Shore Church

The Adams Shore Community Church will participate in World Wide Communion Sunday with the service to be conducted by the pastor, Rev. Kenneth L. Miner.

An offering will be taken up for those in need throughout the world.

The new Sunday school has become organized. Grades 1, 2, 3, and 4 in the Elementary Groups composed of all boys is being taught by Rev. Miner. Grades 5 and 6 are being taught by Laura Black and Adele Hamilton. Seventh and eighth grades are being taught by Susan Higgins, a freshman at Eastern Nazarene College. The High School discussion class is being led by Roy Higgins.

Miss Alice Skoog is the new

Sunday School secretary. Her mother, Mrs. Harriet Skoog, is Sunday School Superintendent.

The Junior High Fellowships have been divided into two groups because of the different interests. Both meet on Sunday with Miss Laura Wainwright and Miss Susan Higgins, directors. Group I meets at 3 p.m. and Group II at 6:30 p.m. Both groups are in the middle of fund raising projects which appear to be going well.

The United Methodist Church Women led by President Irene Yoerger will have a special program at the church Monday at 8 p.m. Devotions will be led by the Morning Glories while the Tuesday evening Group will be the Hostess.

Future events include an Adult Fellowship Hallowe'en Party to be held in the church Saturday, Oct. 26, at 8 p.m. Laura Black will be in charge of games; Marjorie McAllister, prizes; and the hosts will be the Skoogs, the Munns, and the Wainwrights.

Officers for the year include Marjorie McAllister, president; Adele Hamilton, vice president; Vivian Miller, secretary; and John Munn, treasurer. Mrs. Alice Munn is in charge of the hosts and hostesses.

A Ham and Bean supper followed by entertainment will be held Saturday, Nov. 2 at 6 p.m. Tickets will be available Sunday from Adele Hamilton. Irene Yoerger and Harriet Skoog are co-chairmen of the supper. The Junior Youth Fellowship will serve.

Council Votes $10,000 For Hospital 'Bed Utilization'

The Quincy City Council Monday unanimously approved the expenditure of $10,000 to help establish a Utilization Committee at Quincy City Hospital.

Councillor John J. Lydon Jr., who previously introduced the resolution calling for the funding, said the committee, which will be composed of two individuals and include one of the hospital's staff physicians, will use the money to study what he called "bed utilization".

"They'll be determining how soon a patient can be gotten out of the hospital," explained Lydon.

Lydon told the council he had conferred with officials at the hospital and been informed the money will be reimbursed via the hospital's Blue Cross-Blue Shield and other such sources.

Brett Refiles Bill To Prevent S.Q. MBTA Station

Rep. Joseph E. Brett [D-Quincy] has re-filed for the 1975 session of the legislature a bill to prohibit construction of an MBTA station and garage in South Quincy.

The bill would locate the next station after Quincy Center at the so-called dump site abutting Rte. 3 and Union St. in Braintree.

Co-sponsors of the legislation with Brett are Senator Arthur H. Tobin, Rep. Thomas F. Brownell, William D. Delahunt, and Robert A. Cerasoli, candidate for state representative in the First Norfolk District.

The petition will be scheduled for a public hearing by the Joint Legislative Committee on Transportation at the State House, early in 1975.

Public announcement of the time and place of the public hearing will be made in order that interested citizens in the area may participate, Brett said.

Houghs Neck Post Citation

The Houghs Neck Legion Post has received a national citation for "outstanding children and youth programs" and a State award for its community service program.

The citations were presented at a recent meeting in Dedham of the Norfolk County American Legion to Past Commander Willard J. Timcoe. The programs were presented during his term as commander for the period May 1, 1973 to April 31, 1974.

John W. Timcoe Jr. was chairman of children and youth program which included sponsorship of two junior baseball teams, the "Tot Finder" fire safety program, junior high school and R.O.T.C. awards, an oratorical and flag essay contests, a seminar on child abuse and drugs, and sponsorship of the annual Christmas party for all Houghs Neck youngsters.

The Claudius Pendill Trophy received for community service is on display at the Post Home, 1116 Sea St.

Past Commander Timcoe is now Norfolk County sergeant-at-arms and is also post adjutant.

CUB SCOUTS from Den 4, Pack 17 of St. Joseph's Church surround MTST Operator Muriel Lyon as she types the newstory telling of their visit to The Quincy Sun into the IBM computer system. [Quincy Sun Photo]

Den 4 Cub Scouts Tour Quincy Sun

Nine Quincy Cub scouts from Den 4, Pack 17 of St. Joseph's Church recently toured The Quincy Sun office to view firsthand the workings of a newspaper.

The scouts were: John Comer, Kevin Jeanette, Paul Anderson, Kevin Kelly, Doug D'Olimpio, Shaun Kelly, Philip Berio, David

Kerr and Steven Kelly.

Accompanied by their den mother Mrs. Joanne Kelly, the scouts visited The Quincy Sun's production department, watching MTST Operator Muriel Lyon type newstories into the IBM computer system including an account of their visit.

The boys also observed the actual setting of a newstory headline on the headliner machine. They then watched what happens to copy when it leaves the newsroom. They were able to see and to read a finished newstory of their visit written while they toured the office.

Before leaving, each scout received a complimentary copy of this week's Quincy Sun.

Defeat Weymouth N, 9-0

Rolling Raiders Seek 3rd Win At Everett

MARK REALE, who scored the game's only touchdown, picks up a first down for North Quincy after taking a pass from Mike Meehan before he is stopped by Weymouth North's Jeff Lelievre in last week's 9-0 North Quincy win.

By TOM SULLIVAN

"Defense is the name of the game."

So said relieved North Quincy football coach Ralph Frazier last Saturday following a successful debut into the Suburban League.

His Raiders had just defeated Weymouth North, 9-0, in a tough defensive battle at Veterans Memorial Stadium, hex continuing North Quincy's run over the Weymouth team. The Raiders have never lost to Weymouth North since that town went into a two-high school format four years ago.

"This was a true defensive game and both teams were outstanding on defense," Frazier said. "Our defense has been just tremendous with only one touchdown scored against it in three games, that on a 65-yard run. I can't say enough for our defensive coaches, Dick Meyer and Ken McPhee, who have done a remarkable job. Defense has been our key in all three games. North has a 2-1 record as our offense hasn't clicked consistently."

Saturday, North goes outside the Suburban League for the first time when it faces old Greater Boston League rival Everett in a 1:30 game at Everett Stadium.

Everett takes a 1-2 record into the game. It dropped a 2-0 squeaker to B.C. High in a non-league opener, then defeated Haverhill, 14-12, and

Both teams displayed great defense last week with turnovers hurting North Quincy tremendously. Three times Weymouth's Joe Bean intercepted North passes and the Raiders also lost the ball three times on fumbles. North intercepted one Weymouth pass and recovered a Weymouth fumble.

Offensively, Brian Doherty was again the works for North Quincy as he gained 122 yards in 22 carries, the second time he had gained more than 120 yards.

Meyer and McPhee singled out most of their defensive players for top performances. "Our perimeter was particularly strong with Bill Pitts, John Gallagher, Paul O'Donnell, Tom Callahan, Steve Wentzel and Dennis McGuire standouts," Meyer said.

"Give a lot of credit to our secondary," McPhee added. "Jack Hatfield, who had his third pass interception in three games, Bruce Shea, Steve Lothrop and Joe Wilkinson were immense. And our cornermen, Ralph Crevier and Chris Morton, also stood out."

In addition to Doherty, Offensive Backfield Coach Tom Fitzgerald hailed Rich Marino, who ran well. In the offensive line, Frazier singled out Bill Driscoll, playing a strong game with a bad arm, and ends Mark Reale and Cooper Jordan.

"We are green in the offensive line and once the boys get together and open up holes, our attack will be rolling," Frazier said. The backs have well but the line just has to get rolling."

North's first fumble early in the game gave Weymouth the ball on the Raider 27 but they held fast and Hatfield intercepted a pass on his 20.

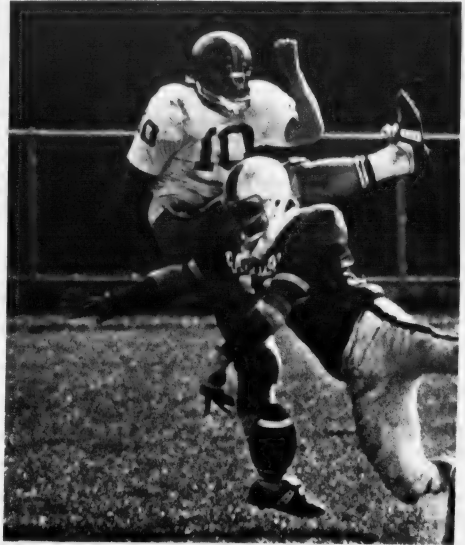

A 32-yard run by Doherty, a 22-yard pass from Mike Meehan to Jordan and another from Meehan to Reale for 17 yards, moved North to the Weymouth 20 but another fumble was recovered by Weymouth.

Late in the half North sacked Weymouth's quarterback and took over at midfield.

Doherty broke loose for 23 yards and, after Meehan was dropped for a nine-yard loss, he threw a perfect pass to Reale, who took the ball as he went over the goal line to put North ahead, 6-0, with just 23 seconds left in the half. [The previous week North had taken the lead against Malden with a TD in the final 26 seconds of the half], Paul Doherty kicked the extra point.

Early in the third period North pushed Weymouth back to its 14 and Matty Constantino blocked a punt. He just missed grabbing it in the end zone for a touchdown, but the ball rolled out for a safety.

QUINCY SUN Sports Section

GRID BALLET - Matty Constantino of North Quincy turned in one of the big plays of last week's 9-0 win over Weymouth North by blocking Brian Keefe's punt. The ball rolled out of the end zone for a safety.

15-7 Revere Loss

Presidents Have Plenty To Worry About

Quincy's football team makes its Suburban League bow Saturday against a league power and Coach Hank Conroy is worried about more than the undefeated Waltham team, which brings a 3-0 record into Veterans Memorial Stadium.

There is a possibility that the Presidents could face the Hawks without ace running back Preston Carroll, who has six touchdowns in Quincy's three games.

Carroll, who scored the only Quincy touchdown in last week's 15-7 loss at Revere, suffered a knee injury midway in the second period when clipped and sat out the rest of the game.

Although it was expected he might be able to start this week in the 1:30 p.m. game at the stadium, the extent of the injury was not known at press time.

Waltham opened its season with a 15-8 non-league win over Norwood, followed up with a 20-0 non-league romp over Somerville and last week rolled over Brookline, 33-8, in its league opener.

"The first half was all ours at Revere but they dominated the second half," Conroy said. "Poor punting kept us in poor field position and it was a short punt and a bad bad pass from center on another punting situation which set up their two touchdowns.

"We gained a lot of yardage and pushed them around pretty well in the first half but they stopped our inside game in the second half and, with Carroll on the bench, our outside running attack was also bottled up."

The Quincy defense played another good game with Ted Wiedemann, Frankie Guest, Doug King, Bob Varrasso, Mike Wysocki and John Riggs singled out for their defensive play.

"Jimmy Forrester ran the team well at quarterback and passed well, and Paul Vespaziani did some good running," Conroy said. "Mike MacKenzie had another good day at offensive end and made some more good catches and King played a good game at center on offense."

Quincy scored in the opening period when Carroll dove over from the three to complete a good drive. Mike Murray, with whom Conroy, who was a fine placekicker in high school and college, has been working, came in to kick the extra point.

Quincy continued to move the ball well in the first half but when Carroll was sidelined, the attack sputtered.

Quincy received to start the second half but couldn't gain and a short punt gave Revere good field position. Fred Mucci, the Patriots' great running back, raced 33 yards for the touchdown and a pass to John Festa put Revere ahead, 8-7.

Quincy again failed to gain after the next kickoff and a bad pass from center on a punt situation gave Revere the ball deep in the Presidents' territory. Mucci scored again from the three. He has scored seven of his team's eight touchdowns this season. He gained 158 yards against Quincy.

Quincy appeared well on its way to a touchdown in the final period but a 15-yard penalty set it back after reaching the Revere 22 and that was that.

Quincy had a net of only 54 yards rushing to 171 for Revere. Five pass completions in 21 attempts added 46 yards for Quincy while Revere threw just one pass and it was incomplete. Quincy had 11 first downs to nine for Revere.

Sterling Upsets Broadmeadows

Sterling's ninth grade football team upset Broadmeadows, 16-0, last week, to move into a top tie in the Quincy Junior High League.

Rick Gilbody scored the first touchdown on a 20-yard end run and Bob Wojciechowski added the extra points. Jimmy Maze raced 80 yards for the second touchdown and Gilbody added the points.

Broadmeadows eighth graders won, 8-0, when Bob Shermerhern scored on a pass from Mark Forester. Mark took a pass from Jack Campbell for the extra points.

Sterling won the seventh grade game, 6-0, on Leon Frazer's touchdown.

Earlier in the week Central's ninth grade team walloped Point, 18-8, to tie Sterling and Atlantic-North for first place.

Kevin O'Connell scored the first Central touchdown in the first half and Brian Watts and Dave Eastwick added second half touchdowns. All tries for extra points failed. Peter Niosi scored for Point after a long pass had set up the play. Michael Cortese added the extra points.

Central's eighth graders won, 8-0, on Mike Oriola's touchdown on an end run. Ralph Pickering scored the points.

Central also won the seventh grade game, 12-0, Bobby Hayes raced 60 yards for the first touchdown and John Kavanaugh intercepted a pass and ran it back for the second. Tom Rand played an outstanding game for Central.

Boys YMCA Basketball Meeting

The annual orientation and rules interpretation meeting of the South Shore Church School Basketball League [Boys Division] will be held tonight [Thursday] at 8 p.m. at the Quincy YMCA.

The Girls Division meeting is scheduled for Thursday Oct. 17, same place and time.

All churches planning to enter teams in the League this coming season should be represented by at least one delegate at each meeting. A question and answer period will follow the discussion of the rules and regulation.

The Advisory Board for the 1974-75 season will be elected and appointed during the latter part of the meeting each night.

BANTAM A'S BOW, 3-2

The Bantam A team suffered its first loss in the Bay Colony Association as Braintree squeezed by, 3-2.

Mike Storer scored both Quincy goals and John Norton and Jim Fitzpatrick had assists.

North Paces League, Blanks Q.

The North Quincy soccer team, enjoying its finest season ever, continues at the top of the Suburban League and yesterday [Wednesday] sought to hike its record to 9-1-1 when it hosted Cambridge Latin.

North will play at Brockton Saturday morning at 10 o'clock and next Tuesday will host Weymouth North at Montclair Field.

Meanwhile, Quincy yesterday played at Rindge Tech, will be host to Weymouth South Saturday at 10 at the Veterans Stadium soccer field and next Tuesday will be at Cambridge Latin.

Lou Ioanilli's North booters made their record 8-1-1 in their new league Monday with a 1-0 win over Weymouth South.

This was North's third successive shutout and its fifth of the year. The Raiders, with Ken O'Sullivan and Gary Nankin in goal, haven't given up more than one goal in a game and in their 10 games have yielded just four goals.

John Mackey scored the winning goal Monday with John Penella having an assist.

Earlier in the week North blanked Quincy, 3-0, on goals by Walter Melton, Tim Clifford and Peter Donovan. Mackey had an assist.

"Our goalies and the entire defense have been tremendous," Ioanilli said. "The win over

Weymouth opened the second half of our schedule and I'm delighted with the team's overall performance. It certainly is nice to be on the top of the league, but we still have some tough games ahead of us."

Squirt B Majors Bomb Scituate, 10-0

The Squirt B Major League team opened its season with an easy 10-0 win over the Scituate Braves, with goalies Mike Devonshire and Kevin Whalen combining for the Bay Colony Association shutout.

Kevin Duff had a big day with five goals and Dave Hickey, Bill Gray, Mike Chiochio, Richie Milano and Kevin McSweeney having one apiece. Chiochio had three assists, Keith Blaney two, Bob Cosby, Gray, Joe Livingstone and Hickey one each.

The team followed up with a 9-1 breeze over Hingham.

McSweeney had four goals, Blaney, Steve Hall, Duff, Livingstone and Gray one apiece. Mike McNiece had three assists, Kevin Tenney two, Timmy Ryan, Duff, Cosby, Chiochio, Hickey and Paul Egan one apiece.

Squirt B Minors Rack Up Pair

The Squirt B Minor Leaguers started off fast in the Bay Colony Association with wins in the first two games.

They opened with a 6-0 win over Rockland as Richie Durham scored twice, Ricky Reardon, Dave DiCarlo, Dave Allen and Tom O'Connor once each. Kevin Greene, Allen, Larry Costello and Durham had assists.

They followed up with a 5-1 win over Abington. Dickie Tapper, Reardon, Allen, Chris Harrington and John O'Connell had the goals. Durham and Dave DiCarlo had two assists each,

$18,000 Post

Hannon Appoints Downtown Project Director

Mayor Walter J. Hannon has appointed a Central Business District project director to carry out his commitment to upgrade the downtown area.

Named to the $18,000 post is Harvey L. Towvim of Cambridge, a former broker for World Realty of Wollaston, with 10 years experience as a private development consultant in downtown renewal projects.

Towvim will take over the central business district responsibilities which up until now had been handled by John Cheney.

Cheney becomes coordinator of Community Development.

"In his newly expanded position, Mr. Cheney will also deal with municipal management development and inter-departmental coordination," said Hannon.

Planning Director Geoffrey A. Davidson, commenting on the new position, said:

"We are committed to upgrading downtown Quincy and are using the Hilgenhurst program as a basic framework for decisions. With the appointment of Mr. Towvim, we are providing the kind of staff resources necessary to get the job done."

Towvim, will work out of the Department of Planning and Community Development.

A graduate of Amherst College, holding a law degree from Boston University Law School, Towvim was awarded a Ford Foundation fellowship in local government. He served as Development Administrator of the First Realty Company of Boston from 1962 to 1964. Prior to that he was legal and administrative assistant to the Executive Director of the City Planning Department of Newark, N.J.

Towvim will be responsible for encouraging, directing and overseeing all improvements made to the Central Business District. Because a development program must be sensitive to the needs of the business community, Towvim said he will meet with the downtown businessmen.

"We are planning to offer a broad range of services," he said. "Expert assistance on financing, growth opportunities, marketing, funding, rehabilitation and sign design is necessary if we are to continually strengthen our downtown."

To assist Towvim an architectural consultant will be employed to work with the businessmen and property owners in developing rehabilitation specifications. In addition, Towvim's staff will include a rehabilitation specialist who will seek financial assistance for and continually work with businessmen interested in improving their property.

"We want to encourage merchants and property owners to work together to develop a visual quality for the downtown," he said. "In order to maintain the downtown's competitiveness and viability, the downtown must be attractive to shoppers and investors. Many improvements have been made already. We want to develop a process whereby changes which affect the appearance of downtown will be given careful review and assistance."

A number of public improvements already made were cited.

Davidson, pointed to McIntyre Mall, the Ross parking garage, the paving, landscaping and lighting of the Hancock parking area, and presently the construction of the Hancock Street Mini-Mall. He noted that Towvim will be working with the city on such future projects and seeking additional sources of funding.

"The ultimate success of the Development Plan for Quincy Center depends upon a high degree of cooperation, mutual trust and joint action by both the private and public sectors of the community," said Hannon. "Neither can implement the recommendations alone. But together they can build a thriving business and civic center."

Funds for Towvim's $18,000 salary as well as for other staff positions come from a special Technical Assistance Grant under the Economic Development Act funded through Quincy's Department of Planning and Community Development.

Oct. 14,28 State Holidays

Columbus Day, Monday, Oct. 14 and Veterans' Day, Monday, Oct. 28 are state holidays.

Columbus Day will be a full, Sunday-law holiday while Veterans' Day will be a half-holiday with store owners and businesses having the option to open after 1 p.m.

In 1975, notes State Secretary John F. X. Davoren, Veterans' Day will be observed on the traditional date of Nov. 11 in Mass., regardless of Congress' decision to move or not to move the date nationally.

Davoren said, too, that Mass. will begin to celebrate another state holiday in 1975. Wednesday, Jan. 15 will mark Martin Luther King Day in Mass. It will be a legal holiday with no Sunday laws applying.

$347,705 In New Wiring

City Wire Inspector William H. Pitts, reports 103 permits were issued during September for wiring costing an estimated $347,705.

Fees collected for the permits totaled $2,660.25.

The department made 180 inspections, finding 18 defects. There were 12 re-inspections and one fire call.

Major wiring projects for the month were:

A new building for Quincy Savings Bank, 461 Washington St., Quincy Point.

A 168-unit apartment building at 155-165-175-185 Quincy Shore Drive.

Cerasoli Wins Round 1

Court Battle Over MBTA Ballot Friday

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

A Norfolk County superior court judge will decide Friday if the First Norfolk District election ballots should be reprinted because of claimed confusion over the South Quincy MBTA station referendum.

Robert A. Cerasoli, Democratic candidate for state representative in that district, won the court hearing on a short order notice granted by Judge Henry M. Lean Tuesday in the same court.

Approximately 10,000 ballots in the First Norfolk District are involved. They are already printed. The district includes all of Ward 2, Precincts 1, 2, 5 of Ward 3 and two precincts in North Weymouth.

Cerasoli filed a formal complaint last Friday in Norfolk County Superior Court, charging that the attorney general's office had rewritten the original referendum question, making it "confusing and unclear".

School Committeeman Daniel G. Raymondi, Cerasoli's attorney, said that at that time, no judge was available to hear a request for a short order of notice. But Judge Lean granted the request for a short order of notice Tuesday.

"The judge deemed the case had enough merit that it should be heard right away," said Cerasoli.

A summons, as well as a copy of the filed complaint, will be served on Atty. Gen. Robert H. Quinn, Secretary of State John F. X. Davoren, Quincy City Clerk John Gillis and Weymouth Town Clerk Margaret A. Heaver to appear in court Friday.

According to Mass. General Laws both the attorney general and the secretary of state must draft the public policy question in "simple unequivocal and adequate form" for presentation on the ballot, Cerasoli said.

Cerasoli said his lawyer's brief of the case will include a first-priority recommendation to cover the reworded ballot question with a "sticker" or piece of paper, if no law dictates against such a move. A redrafted wording could then be printed on the piece of paper.

In his complaint Cerasoli requested that the court require the attorney general and the secretary of state to redraft the public policy question to read as follows:

"Shall the Representative from this District be instructed to support the construction of a Rapid Transit Station in South Quincy by the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority [MBTA]?"

The attorney general and secretary of state had rewritten Cerasoli's original public policy question which asked, "Should the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority [MBTA] construct a rapid transit station in South Quincy?" The altered version from the attorney general's office read:

"Shall the Representative from this district be instructed to vote in favor of the passage of a bill requiring the Mass. Bay Transportation Authority [MBTA] to construct a rapid transit station in South Quincy?"

Cow Milking Contests, Too

Harvest Of Values, Auto Show Downtown Attractions

A Harvest of Values stores promotion, a half-million dollar Auto Show and cows being milked on Hancock St. are special downtown shopper attractions this week.

The three-day event sponsored by The Quincy Center Business and Professional Association opens today (Thursday) with the start of the Harvest of Values promotion, with 21 QCBPA member stores and businesses participating.

Hancock St. will become a mall from Granite St. to School

St. Friday and Saturday as more than 60 new model cars from 10 Quincy automobile agencies go on display.

An agricultural show with money saving food shopping tips, exhibits and cow-milking contests, and Quincy Fire Department rescue demonstrations are other highlights.

The QCBPA members participating in the Harvest of Values promotion are:

Barker's, Baskin-Robbins, Bottoms Up, Colman's,

Cummings, Granite City Hardware, Jason's Luggage and Music Shop, Kincaide Furniture, Lerner Shops, Miller Shoe, Hanlon's Shoe, Milton's Quincy Savings Bank, Remick's, Roger's Jewelry, Sawyer's Campus Shop, South Shore National Bank, South Shore Television and Appliance, Spinning Wheel, Stone Jewelry and Tag's Sleep and Lounge Shop.

During the auto show, over 60 cars valued at $500,000 will be on display on Hancock St. Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m.

and on Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. The following 11 Quincy agencies will display automobiles on Hancock St.:

Duggan Brothers Chevrolet, Foley Chrysler-Plymouth, Fore River Motors, Hassan Brothers American Motors, Morrissey Volkswagen, Nick's Foreign Cars, President Chevrolet, Quincy Ford Motor Co., South Shore Buick, Tom O'Brien Pontiac, and Star Oldsmobile.

QCBPA Promotion Committee Chairman is Philip Chase, manager of Cummings.

Daniel Hurd, Jr. of Dan-Bar Farms in West Newbury will present the agricultural show and exhibits Friday and Saturday.

The show will begin at 1 p.m. Friday with a cow-milking contest. A ring will be set up in the vicinity of Hancock Bank and shoppers will be able to compete for prizes.

Mr. Hurd will also conduct a 2:30 p.m. show on money saving shopping tips including an evaluation and analysis of food

Arraignment Next Week

Only One Indicted In Cemetery Probe

Only one person—previously mentioned in the case—has been indicted in the Quincy cemetery department investigation, The Quincy Sun has learned.

The investigation into department irregularities was touched off by the resignation of Cemetery Supt. Anthony Famigletti early this year.

The person indicted is in the process of being subpoenaed for arraignment in Norfolk County Superior Court early next week.

Neither Dist. Atty. George Burke nor Special Investigator J. Blake Thaxter would comment on the indictments which were returned secretly last week.

Thaxter would only acknowledge that 10 indictments on two separate matters were returned "one of which might have been in connection with the cemetery probe."

District Attorney Burke said flatly: "No comment".

But The Sun learned that eight of the reported 10 indictments involved one person in the cemetery department investigation and the other two indictments were in connection with a Weymouth breaking and entering case.

Thaxter, a former assistant district attorney from Cohasset was assigned as special investigator by Burke in June. He was nominated by the Norfolk County Bar Association after Quincy-Braintree Atty. Edward H. Libertine declined the assignment.

The case some months ago caused a furor in Quincy as accusations and speculation spread wildly throughout the city.

$111,277 Grant To Continue Point Improvement Project

The Department of Housing and Urban Development has announced the awarding of an $111,277 Amendatory Code Enforcement Grant to the Quincy Point Improvement Project.

Funds amounting to $1,348,284 have been previously awarded for this project, bringing the total grant to $1,459,561.

Project Director George Fleming noted that the project has been on-going for three years. During that time, 125 people have received low interest (three per cent) loans and 191 individuals have taken advantage of outright grants to improve their homes. In order to qualify for these grants, a family must earn less than $3,000 per year.

Fleming said that the $111,277 will be used for five on-going services: administrative, rehabilitative, financial assistance, residential housing and relocation services.

Fleming also noted that many types of violations of the state code improvements standard have been corrected - violations such as leaking pipes, inoperative furnaces, deteriorating bathrooms, defective safety rails and inoperative electrical systems.

Mayor Appoints MBTA Committee Representatives

Mayor Walter J. Hannon has appointed representatives from government, business and conservation to a Transportation Study Committee to work with the MBTA on an environmental impact analysis of the proposed station in the South Quincy area.

Named to the committee are Geoffrey Davidson, Director of the Department of Planning and Community Development, Milton Katz of Milton's Inc., and Paul DiBona of the Conservation Commission.

The MBTA had requested that Hannon appoint representatives from these three areas to provide a liaison between the community and the environmental analysis team consisting of the MBTA, the State Department of Public Works, and MBTA consultants, Parsons, Brinckerhoff, Quade and Douglas.

The Transportation Committee in addition will review the progress of the environmental impact study presently underway, advise the MBTA and consultants on community acceptance of the study, and suggest additional impacts to be considered and new alternatives to be studied.

cost and quality. A stage will be erected in front of the Hancock Bank for the demonstration.

"The Meat We Eat" will be the subject of Hurd's 4 p.m. demonstration. Using a plastic side of beef, he will show the various cuts of meat and explain new classifications. He will discuss the comparative quality of same-priced meats using texture, color, marbling and other techniques. He will also demonstrate a fat-lean test for hamburger.

In the evening there will be another cow-milking contest with city officials pitted against one another. Starting time is 7:30 p.m.

A similar schedule is planned for Saturday. Two cow-milking contests will be conducted, one at 10 a.m., the other at 2:30 p.m. A final cow-milking championship contest will take place at 5 p.m.

Hurd will again conduct two stage demonstrations of "The Meat We Eat". At 1 p.m., the other at 4 p.m.

Quincy's Fire Department will add to the roster of events by staging rescue demonstrations from a wrecked car on Friday (2 p.m. and 7 p.m.) and one on Saturday (2 p.m.).

$38,856 In Plumbing During September

Plumbing and Gas Inspector James A. Erwin Jr., reports 60 plumbing applications for an estimated $38,856 in plumbing were filed during the month of September.

A total of $135 was received for permits. Ninety-three plumbing inspections were made.

Erwin also reported the filing of 47 applications for gas installations costing an estimated $17,505.

Thirty-nine inspections were made and $98 was received for permits.

$1,500 Heritage Contests Entries Begin Streaming In Entries are beginning to stream in for the $1,500 Quincy Heritage poster and slogan contests co-sponsored by the Quincy Savings Bank and The Quincy Sun.

Theme of the contest is: "Quincy's Pride: Patriots, Presidents, Possibilities."

Deadline for submitting entries for either or both contests is Nov. 30.

If you are thinking of entering, now's the time to start putting the words together for your slogan or trying out your skill with pen and ink.

The winning poster and slogan will become part of Quincy's celebration of its own 350th anniversary and the nation's Bicentennial.

So, if you're the top winner of the poster or slogan contest you'll not only win $300 but you'll go down in Quincy's history, too.

For each contest there is a $300 first prize, a $100 second prize, a $50 third prize, four $25 prizes and 20 $10 prizes.

Forty-eight prizes in all: two $300, two $100, two $50, eight $25 and 40 $10.

The contests are open to Quincy residents only—but to residents of all ages. There is no entry fee or anything to buy. All you need is a little talent and/or imagination.

You may submit as many poster or slogan entries as your talent for drawing or putting words together permits. It's up to you.

But each entry has to be accompanied by an entry blank now available at The Quincy Savings Bank main and branch offices, Quincy public schools, City Hall, The Quincy Sun and Quincy Heritage offices and some businesses.

The entry forms are also being printed in The Quincy Sun and they may be used for submitting entries.

A panel of judges will be selected soon to select the contest winners.

Entries may be submitted in person at The Quincy Savings Bank main or branch offices and at The Quincy Sun office or by mailing to:

The Quincy Savings Bank, Box 349, Quincy, Mass. 02169.
The Quincy Sun, 1601 Hancock St., Quincy, Mass. 02169.

Employees of The Quincy Savings Bank, The Quincy Sun and Quincy Heritage and members of their immediate families are not eligible to enter either contest.

Flu Shots Still Available 'Moderate Intensity' Winter Flu Outbreak

State Public Health Commissioner William J. Bicknell warns that Massachusetts is expected to experience an influenza outbreak "of moderate intensity" this winter.

"We may well have more influenza this year because of the many people who have not yet experienced the new strains of Influenza A and B," says Bicknell.

But, Quincy Health Commissioner Dr. Alfred Mahoney doesn't seem alarmed.

"I've been here four years and we get the same report every year," notes Dr. Mahoney. "How they can predict a severe outbreak, I don't know."

Dr. Mahoney added, "I've advocated all along that anyone with heart disease or chronic lung disease should have a vaccine injection."

Over 7,000 Quincy residents have received flu vaccine injections since the city's department of health began immunization clinics soon after Labor Day.

Although Tuesday marked the end of the formal clinics, Dr. Mahoney said that a Quincy resident could still receive a shot until as late as Nov. 1. He said that an outbreak of the flu usually occurs in mid-November or early December and that the building of a resistance to the flu takes about five weeks. He therefore recommended that a person receive a shot no later than Nov. 1 in order to make it effective.

Bicknell noted that an influenza vaccine is approximately 60 to 70 per cent effective in preventing an attack of the disease. If a person contracts the flu despite the vaccine, Bicknell said the disease would likely be milder.

Bicknell recommended immunization to the following groups:

- Those 60 years of age and older.

- Patients in nursing or convalescent homes, rest homes and other facilities where elderly people may be residing.

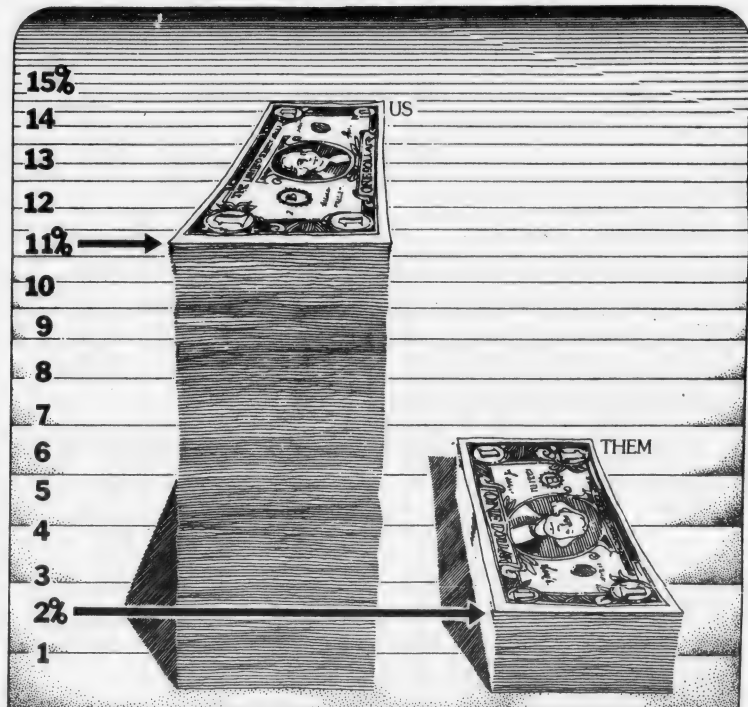

- Those of any age having chronic heart, lung or kidney disorders.

- Anyone providing essential community services such as police, firefighters, Mass. transit, public utilities, medical personnel, especially hospital personnel.

WORLD'S LARGEST CRANE, a 1,200-ton goliath, is being assembled at General Dynamics' Quincy shipyard. It will tower more than 30 stories and be used in the construction of eight 125,000-cubic meter liquefied natural gas tankers. The crane will have a 390-foot span covering two shipbuilding basins. At 328-feet above the ground it will be a new addition to the South Shore-Greater Boston skyline.

Exhibit "A"

Percentage increase in savings deposits, South Shore National Bank (US) vs. the savings banks (savings banks in Norfolk County), 6 months ended June, 1974*

What you see here is sort of a progress report on "South Shore National Bank versus the Savings Banks."

As you can see, people are catching on: They're putting more and more of their savings dollars into the same bank where they have their checking accounts. South Shore National Bank.

It's true that the savings banks can pay 1/4% more interest. But for most people, who average somewhere under $1000 in savings, that comes to only around $3 a year.

Which is not a very compelling reason to go out of your way to put money into a savings bank.

On the other hand, with your savings dollars in a Multistatement account at South Shore National, you can earn yourself a free checking account. Which can amount to quite a savings in itself.

Plus you can earn yourself 10% refunds on the finance charges on your loans.

Is there any doubt in your mind as to why we're winning?

70-Year Olds Eligible For Tax Exemptions

"Quincy home owners, 70 years of age or older, should be sure to file for the statutory property tax exemption, if they are eligible," reminds Putnam S. Borden, Executive Director of the Quincy Council on Aging.

"Under today's inflationary conditions, elderly residents of moderate means need to take advantage of every available opportunity to reduce their expenses," he added. "Recent amendments passed by the legislature permitting certain deductions from retirement income, will now make eligible many who did not qualify previously."

He said he would, as in past years, be available to any senior citizen who had questions or wished assistance completing the exemption form.

Borden can be reached at the Quincy Council on Aging, 1120 Hancock St., or by telephone through Quincy City Hall.

Survival Open House Sunday

A chance to learn what Survival, Inc. is about and to meet the staff and board members will be available Sunday, Oct. 20 when Survival holds an open house from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. in their new administration office.

The new office, 725 Southern Artery, Quincy, coordinates the activities of the youth and drug program serving the entire South Shore.

All interested are invited especially Survival's neighbors in Ward 2. Refreshments will be served and people from Survival will be present to answer questions and give information. Visitors will also tour the new building.

PERSONAL

Tell wife to limit her gab

By PAT and
MARILYN DAVIS
Copley News Service

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
My wife has one habit that is driving me crazy. She won't stop talking long enough to listen to my complaint. No one can get a word in edgewise when this woman begins. How do you stop a nonstop talker?
Not Allowed To Speak

Dear Not:
It isn't easy, but you might try the following suggestion. Tell her that she will be having a very private conversation — all by herself unless she lets you voice an opinion. And if she doesn't allow you to speak, walk out of the room.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
I have a friend and I'd like to know how to handle her. This is the problem. We attended a party and I wore a dress that was a couple of years old. I like this dress and see no reason to let it hang in the closet. When Sally saw me at the party, she said, "Oh, I see you have on your blue dress. It has stayed good for years hasn't it?" At this point, I wanted to strangle her. This remark could be multiplied by a hundred. How can I handle this friend?
Letty

Dear Letty:
This is a friend? The next time this gal dishes out one of her left-handed compliments, simply say, "I'm sorry but I guess I didn't hear you. Would you please repeat that remark?" Even the dullest of dullards should get the point.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
My boyfriend and I are having an argument about movie ratings. I say that they are worthless and that if a teenager wants to see an "X" rated film he will find a way. My friend thinks ratings do help and that most teenagers are for ratings. Please give us some statistics on this.
Cindy and Mike

Dear Cindy and Mike:
The following statistics come from Scholastic Magazines, Inc. of New York City. This survey was conducted among junior and senior high school students in over 1,200 schools throughout the country by Scholastic's National Institute of Student Opinion and included over 50,000 of America's juniors and seniors.

The young people had definite opinions on the current movie rating system. Thirty-six per cent feel it helps them select a film, 23 per cent feel it keeps young people from seeing worthwhile films, 11 per cent says the ratings aren't strict enough. The remaining 30 per cent feel the ratings just don't work. They say if they want to see an "X" or "R" film, they can. A majority of the students (65 per cent) said they are tempted to see it if it is rated "X" or "R." Thirty-five per cent answered that it does not encourage them.

Confidential to Secretary:
The boss's affair is none of your business. If the boss tells you to put her calls through immediately, do just that. You are paid to take his messages and follow his instructions.

Today's Women

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY

He's a terror as fix-it man

By ANN RUDY
Copley News Service

I would like to offer a word of advice to women who complain because their husbands won't do little fix-it jobs around the house: count your blessings.

Just yesterday our bathroom door knob fell off and I picked it up and Scotch-taped it back on, looking nervously over my shoulder to see if my husband was approaching. "Listen," I said to my daughter, "don't tell your father about this or he will want to fix it."

"Sure, Mother," she answered, "I understand."

She understands all right. She knows the terror of living in the same house with a man who wants to fix things. He will even settle for breaking them so he can fix them.

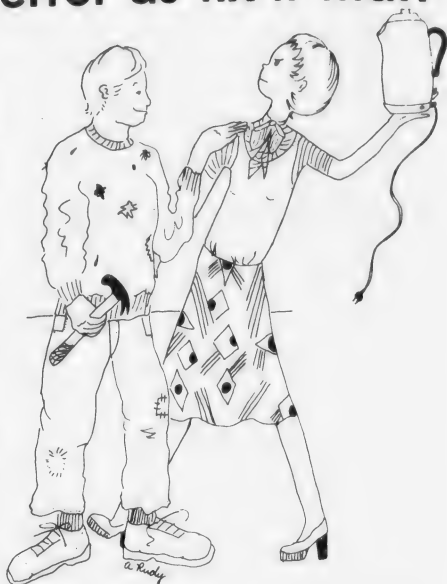

"Look here," he will say, rattling my coffee pot vigorously, "the little red light on the bottom doesn't light up. Want me to fix it?"

"To tell the truth," I answer, "I'd a lot rather have you pick up your underwear and learn to make breakfast."

But sarcasm is useless. He has the screwdriver out and the bottom off the coffee pot before I can explain that the little red light never lights up until the coffee is done.

Now, of course, it just never lights up. But he swears the coffee tastes better.

"Aren't you glad I gave that old pot a going over?" he asks, and I roll my eyes toward the ceiling, in search of support from the gods. He is probably the only incompetent fix-it man who has a weekend wardrobe that makes him look like a pro.

Beat-up jeans, paint-spattered shirt and rubber-soled shoes for climbing onto the roof at a moment's notice to fix a suspect TV antenna. The last time he climbed onto the roof it cost us $30 for x-rays to find out why he couldn't climb down without pain.

He carries a pocketful of nails with him at all times in case I need a picture hung — an event I have managed to avoid since 1964 when he slammed home a nail with such force it took him 20 minutes to get the hammer out of the wall.

I told him then and I tell him now: "You don't see the guy next door acting like you on weekends. He sits around or falls asleep in front of TV. Why can't you be more like him?"

He said he'd try, but I don't believe him. Some women have all the luck.

Zip lip on son's wife

By RIV TOBIN

Dear Mrs. Tobin:
My son and daughter-in-law don't have any children yet but already she is telling everyone how she is going to raise her family. She believes in complete freedom — and I do mean freedom. No discipline, no schedule and no clothes. My son seems to go along with this theory. Should

I tell her how I feel and what I see in the future for them all?
Mother-in-law

Dear Mother-in-law:
Follow your son's lead and zip your lip. What your daughter-in-law says and what she does may be two different things. Diapers, formulas, etc., will put her on a schedule, and the police will put clothes on the kids. I'm sure your daughter-in-law will learn discipline and pass it on to her children.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:
I just took the sheets off our guestroom bed and found the pillow cases smeared with eye makeup. Should I write and tell my sister? I think the cases are ruined.
Mad in Montana

Dear Mad:
There are many laundry products on the market for this very problem. Forgive and forget.

Questions on etiquette may be mailed to Riv Tobin, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper.

FICKLE FINGER OF FATE AWARD

With car thefts reaching the staggering one million per year mark, everything possible should be done to inhibit this expanding blight. However, some approaches work in reverse. Here's an example, reported in the Journal of American Insurance.

"The New York Times Magazine ran an arresting article at the beginning of the summer explaining the stolen car racket in that city. Illustrating the story was a picture of the basic tools used by car thieves in playing their trade and a description of the methods used by the thieves.

Recently the magazine printed a letter from a New York woman whose car had been stolen. She asserted that according to police the publication of the article was followed by a noticeable increase in thefts.

Interestingly enough, the editors chose to illustrate this letter by once again printing the photo of the essential tools that every good car thief must have."

For more complete forecast, read indications for your Ascendant sign plus Birth sign. To find your Ascendant sign, count ahead from Birth sign the number of signs indicated.

Time of Birth:	Probable Ascendant is:
4 to 6 a.m.	Same as birth sign
6 to 8 a.m.	First sign following
8 to 10 a.m.	Second sign following
10 to 12 Noon	Third sign following
Noon to 2 p.m.	Fourth sign following
2 to 4 p.m.	Fifth sign following
4 to 6 p.m.	Sixth sign following
6 to 8 p.m.	Seventh sign following
8 to 10 p.m.	Eighth sign following
10 to Midnight	Ninth sign following
Midnight to 2 a.m.	Tenth sign following
2 to 4 a.m.	Eleventh sign following

ARIES: (March 21 to April 19 — Also Aries Ascendant) — Good time to review business and professional matters to evaluate your past actions and accomplishments. It's not too late to make necessary changes. Be open to compromise. Catch up on home chores.

TAURUS: (April 20 to May 20 — Also Taurus Ascendant) — Faraway places interest you and a saving program begun now can make those dreams come true in the future. Don't let sympathy for a friend lead you into extravagant gestures. Don't dwell on past mistakes.

GEMINI: (May 21 to June 20 — Also Gemini Ascendant) — Concentrate on business affairs. Enlist cooperation and make necessary decisions. Give credit to others where it is due. Tie up all loose ends. Clean out drawers, review insurance policies and legal papers.

CANCER: (June 21 to July 22 — Also Cancer Ascendant) — High activity period when you may feel spread too thin. Changes in romantic relationships are essentially favorable. A cycle is ending and you may be approached with offers of another job. Don't resist change.

LEO: (July 23 to August 22 — Also Leo Ascendant) — Possibility of ending a close relationship which leaves you free to move on to more important things. Consideration of a change of residence may be on the program. Good time to start a diet program for weight change.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22 — Also Virgo Ascendant) — Your tendency to be critical and sharp in speech could do much permanent damage to a friendship now. Relationships in general appear strained and you can have very faulty judgment about others. Be careful.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22 — Also Libra Ascendant) — The need for a meaningful relationship can lead the single into talk of marriage now. Rewards for patience in the past can come to you now in the form of financial increase. Develop a more forgiving nature.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21 — Also Scorpio Ascendant) — Curb temperamental reactions to annoying "little things" in job environment. Concentrate on the domestic scene — intimate entertaining there can be extremely enjoyable. Also find time to meditate and go inside yourself.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21 — Also Sagittarius Ascendant) — Good time to join community organizations and give your support. Social life brightens and the possibility of career achievements are here too. Guard against over-indulgence in pleasure and drink.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19 — Also Capricorn Ascendant) — Accent is still on career, and be sure that positive results will be reaped for the extra effort and hard work. Some new project can be favorably received by a superior. Other projects "peak out" now too.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18 — Also Aquarius Ascendant) — Pressures and responsibilities may suddenly lift now. Opportunities for progress will present themselves now, so be alert. You are getting professional attention. Cooperative effort with a woman succeeds.

PISCES: (Feb. 19 to March 20 — Also Pisces Ascendant) — Don't let success make you unrealistic so that you over-extend yourself. Be very realistic. Be suspicious of offers that sound too good to be true — your business judgment could be faulty now. Delay decisions.

Zsa Zsa adores dogs

By NANCY ANDERSON
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Zsa Zsa Gabor has just about decided to decline a bid to star in "Forty Carats" in London because she can't take her pets into Britain.

Her role in the play which she did on Broadway is so perfect for her she could make a career of playing it, but she won't if it separates her from her adored dogs. Besides it would get monotonous.

"I'd love to have a new play that's right for me," the Hungarian queen of diamonds sighs. "Forty Carats" is so bullet proof that David Merrick told me, 'As long as you live you can make money in this.'

"But I don't want to do it forever."

For the past year, Zsa Zsa has been pouring thought and money into redecorating and enlarging her new house, previously the Howard Hughes-Jean Peters love nest.

She calls it "cozy," but it's hardly that, since it encompasses, among other features, a walk-in closet "bigger than the Paramount wardrobe department" (to quote Miss Gabor) and a bathroom spacious enough to accommodate a life-size, wooden horse from a Parisian carousel.

Zsa Zsa says she doesn't know how many gowns, hats, shoes, etc., are stored in her super-sized closet which is equipped with a refrigerator for her makeup.

"This is my last wedding hat," she says, displaying a bonnet. "It came from a picture I made with Tony Curtis. When I first saw this house, it was like a hotel, in the worst possible taste, all dark gray and red satin. Howard Hughes had a terrible bathroom, but I enlarged it."

ZSA ZSA GABOR

The dark gray and red satin have been replaced by fresh, garden colors.

Her bedroom, which opens onto a garden, is alive with greens, while the principal color in her informal sitting room is sunny apricot.

Among her treasures are novel fan letters from a woman named Edna Hulbert who embroiders her messages on pillow tops. Two of Edna's billets doux are tossed on one of Zsa Zsa's sofas.

Miss Hulbert's needlework notes make no demands of the star, but numbers of Zsa Zsa's female fans write for romantic guidance.

"My advice is given seriously," Miss Gabor says. "When a woman writes that she's bored with her husband, I tell her to look into her self."

Mon., Tues., Wed. & Sat. 9:30 - 5:30 Open til 9 Thurs. & Fri. Nights

From now on, here's where we'll be to help.

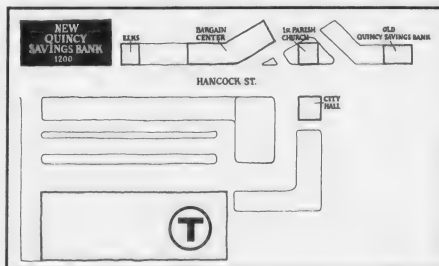

At 1200 Hancock Street, in our new main office a few blocks up the street from our old one.

A big, bright, totally modern building that's been designed with you in mind. Quincy Savings Bank's new headquarters offer you attractive, efficient facilities, free parking, drive-up tellers, and a host of other features that add up to better, faster service.

And since we think we owe the people of Quincy something for the success that's made us outgrow our old quarters, we've built a community room into our new office that's available for the use of local groups.

During the week of October 21st, we'll be holding a terrific grandopening celebration. When you come in you'll get pastries and other refreshments, free gifts, a chance to win one of six $200 savings accounts, and free English Bone China when you deposit $50 or more! So be sure to stop in and see our new building. We'll be open from 9-3 Monday thru Friday, and until 6 p.m. on Thursdays. Our old main office, at 1374 Hancock Street is now our Quincy Center branch office, and will be open from 9-3 Monday thru Saturday, and until 6 p.m. on Thursdays. And remember, at all locations of the Quincy Savings Bank, we're here to help. And we do.

Notre Dame Alumnae Assn. Opens With Harvest Luncheon

The Notre Dame Academy Alumnae Association of Hingham will open its 1974-1975 season with a Harvest Luncheon Saturday, Oct. 19 at 1 p.m. The event will be held at Marian Hall, Emmanuel College, 400 The Fenway, Boston. Choral entertainment will be provided by the Boston Chapter of the Sweet Adelines, followed by Mass at 4 p.m. in the chapel with Rev. Msgr. Edward F.

Dowd as celebrant.

Co-chairmen for the event are Miss Dorothy Killion of Dorchester and Mrs. Sulo Suoini of North Weymouth. Serving as hostesses are President Mrs. Robert Freeman, Mrs. Joseph Henaghan, Mrs. Robert Jarvic, Mrs. Robert Gallagher, and Miss Ann Landers. Reservations may be made by calling Sister Ellen St. James at Notre Dame Academy, Hingham [749-4727].

St. John's Sodality Opens With Mass Sunday

Our Lady's Sodality of St. John's Parish will open the 1974-1975 season at a Mass to be celebrated by their spiritual director, Rev. Joseph M. Connolly, Sunday at 8:30 a.m. A Communion Breakfast will be served in the rectory hall following the Mass. Sister Laetitia Anne Campbell, O.P., newly appointed Coordinator of Adult Education at St. John's, will be guest speaker. Her subject will be: "The Discipleship of Mary".

Bently SS Alumni To Meet On Oct.30

Place Like Home!", promises to provide an enjoyable evening for Bentley alumni and their family and friends.

Reservations must be made prior to Oct. 25, and may be sent in to chapter president David Marden at 386 Pleasant St., South Weymouth, Mass. 02190.

Market Report

Food Shopper's Hot Line To Give Daily Best Buys Tips

Print this number, large and red, near your telephone: 1-800-392-6026.

Before you go food shopping, call it from anywhere in Massachusetts, without charge.

It will give you all the latest inside information on the food-buying front, as gathered daily - long before most of us are awake - by the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture [MDA].

The new toll-free number went into service earlier this week, when Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight made the first call to open the line.

A three-minute recorded message will contain the day's best buys at your local markets - spoken slowly enough for you to take notes for your shopping list - as well as the nutritional value of the items, and some ways to get the most value out of them. From time to time, recipes will be offered.

The service is the latest weapon employed by the state in the war against inflation. Since "knowledge is power", the MDA will dispense as much information as possible so that consumers can buy food more economically and use it more wisely.

MDA investigators cover the wholesale markets every morning before dawn, recording the incoming shipments of fresh food products, as well as the buying activity. This information, coupled with reports from across the Commonwealth on consumer demand and upcoming retail sales, gives the Division of Markets the ability to report up-to-the-minute food-buying information.

The hot-line reports will be in consumer language - not in the kind of wholesale "shorthand" often heard in radio market reports.

At this time, the hot line has fewer incoming lines than planned. But it operates 24 hours a day. It costs nothing to call. If you find it busy, keep trying. It should be worth your few minutes in market basket savings.

Look for these items on special sale this week, says the MDA: carrots, celery, chichory, escarole, eggplant, mushrooms, peppers, Bartlett pears, squashes, grapefruit and McIntosh, Cortland and Red Delicious apples.

Burke's Seed Bill Wins Committee Approval

Congressman James A. Burke [D-Milton] announced today that the House Committee on Agriculture has approved his bill, H.R. 9468, which would authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to distribute free seeds to the American public for use in home vegetable gardens. Burke, said "The Committee has shown great foresight in passing the bill. Their action indicates a real concern for low and middle income families hard-pressed by inflation, and an understanding of impending world food shortages which could have serious ramifications for this Country."

Burke said he hopes his bill will act as a stimulus to a "back to the soil movement" where city, as well as rural people, can learn to appreciate the food on their table.

He hopes for early and favorable action by the full House. "In this time of skyrocketing food prices, now is the time to enact his bill and allow the little man to get a break in his food bill by growing his own vegetables," he said.

Living, Today

By Dr. William F. Knox

'Tell Her You Love Her'

Last year there were 1,826,000 divorces in the United States. The cost of these people is extremely high ... emotionally and financially. The hearts of most of these 3,652,000 people have been literally rung out ... often personalities shattered. In many instances the divorce took place after a long period of conflict where one ... or the other ... or both failed to keep romance alive in the marriage. Real lovers are continually renewing their friendship ... and expressing their feelings of love. When this stops, the erosion of love quickly sets in.

Leonard and Linda had many fights ... mostly over his drinking. Linda never knew what she could count on ... for like most alcoholics, she never knew what mood Leonard would be in. One night Linda became so upset with Leonard's drunken conduct that she drank to her neighbors, Beccy and Jim, and began pouring out her feelings ... how Leonard had accused her of being a poor mother ... poor cook ... poor sex partner. He was ... of course, expressing shame for his own inadequacies ... poor father ... seldom enjoying the meal ... impotent sexually. When their neighbors were empathizing with her, Jim said to his wife, with warmth and kindness ... "I'm so thankful for you, Beccy, you're everything to me ... and most of all I love you."

The wife stopped consoling her friend and threw her arms around her husband ... "That's the first time you've told me you love me in a year!" ... she exclaimed.

In the State of Maryland a legislator has introduced a bill to legalize a "renewable" three year contract for marriage. The D'Neils in their book ... OPEN MARRIAGE, recommend that couples voluntarily form and keep renewing their own marriage contract ... which means that whatever conflict arises ... whatever difference of opinion they are subjected to the fires of your mutual love for each other ... to be reduced to a new agreement with each other. Thus your relationship continues to be up-to-the minute fresh and alive.

The erosion of love can be avoided ... If certain "caretaking" of the marriage is not ignored. Let me suggest the following:

1. TELL EACH OTHER DAILY HOW YOU FEEL toward each other. "I love you ... but I hate those damn rollers you put in your hair each night." The loving wife will find some way to solve her hair problem. Against his love there must be a better way. (Incidentally, there are several ways). Likewise, let a wife express her true feelings and loving husbands will respond adjusting any matter that is injuring their relationship.

2. MAKE LOVE FREQUENTLY AND WITH VARIETY. If the sexual relationship is a source of conflict your marriage is definitely in jeopardy. This continued sleeping one in the bed and the other on the couch is bad for backs ... couches ... marriages.

3. GO A WAY TOGETHER FOR WEEK-ENDS together ... without the children. Rest ... talk ... form new agreements ... resolve problems ... have fun.

If you have the basics in the marriage the continual repeating of these three will keep your romance alive ... and what good is a marriage without romance? "Tell her you love her."

Kitty Dukakis:

'Mike Is Sensative And Concerned About Women'

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

Kitty Dukakis has been campaigning for her husband Michael in every city of the state - cities "medium, small and large."

The fact that her left leg is in a cast as the result of a recent fall hasn't slowed her down a bit.

Her deep-set, dark eyes grow pensive as she tells of what she saw, what she heard, what she learned as she canvassed the state:

"Of course the economy is the trouble place more than anything else. But there is also a feeling among the voters that we should be a beacon for the rest of the nation, that Massachusetts has resources it isn't using. We could be a strong light, an example to the rest of the country."

She paused for a moment, collecting her thoughts, and continued:

"There is an attitude - a pessimism, a cynicism - that nothing can be done. But Mike has given the people a sense of hope, of pushing forward and putting the state on its feet."

Born in Cambridge, Kitty attended Brookline public schools and Pennsylvania State University before graduating from Lesley College with a degree in elementary education.

Kitty now teaches modern dance part-time at Lesley College and at the Brookline Arts Center. She loves teaching dance to all ages and does not want to give it up. She said:

"Mike is very sensitive and supportive of me. This shows, I feel, that he is sensitive and concerned about women. I'm not a mere appendage. I have a career of my own."

A typical campaign day in Kitty's life begins when her three children - John, 16, Andrea, 9 and Kara, 6 - leave for school. The day's itinerary might include a college speaking engagement, a radio or newspaper interview, a factory tour, an appearance at a high school, and street campaigning. But she is always home at dinner time and Mike tries to be there, too. Kitty said:

"Mike has strong concerns about his family. He's only missed 20 dinners in the last couple of months and that's good!" she boasted. "The children see him every day. That time is their time with him."

When not caught up in what she calls the "hectic but exciting" political life, Kitty likes to sew, garden, and bake her own bread. She added:

"Mike is a very good cook, too. He has come to be quite proficient in the kitchen."

The Dukakis lifestyle involves hours and hours of discussion.

Kitty said, "Our day is a constant discussion period. Our lifestyle is such that it is a part of our daily routine. Mike asks my opinion on issues ranging from abortion to busing. We discussed every piece of legislation he filed, especially his no-fault insurance bill."

Kitty has never felt cramped, stifled or restricted in living a political and often public life. She said:

"I don't feel negatively about politics or campaigns. I've never had an interview when I've been concerned about what I was saying, worrying whether or not it would 'hurt' my husband. I've never been told how to dress or how to wear my hair or how to act in a certain situation. Happily, I think it's because individuals are more concerned now about women's rights and rules."

Heritage Program In Info Computer

The programs of Quincy Heritage have been selected for inclusion in the computer information network of the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration, Washington, D.C., announces Mayor Walter J. Hannon.

The listing in the Bicentennial Information Network [BINET] means that communities throughout the country can learn about Quincy's Bicentennial programs through computer terminals at ARBA regional offices, Hannon said.

The selection of Quincy Heritage's programs for the information network will also result in the publication of details of the plans of Quincy Heritage in the ARBA's document entitled Official Master Reference for Bicentennial Activities.

Hannon said he is "extremely pleased" with the city's selection for the information network. He noted:

"Quincy Heritage is the pacesetter in the development of Bicentennial programs. In fact, outside of Boston, I don't know of another community in the state that can touch what Quincy Heritage is offering. Of course, this is because we began our planning some four years ago with individuals from all segments of the private and public sector participating."

Hannon cited several projects that Quincy Heritage is undertaking including tourmobile service, a coordinating council of historic sites, planting of trees, an historical signing network into the city, an information center, a motion picture film, a historic trail brochure, the Hancock Cemetery restoration, a local history course at Quincy Junior College, a book on Quincy, poster and slogan contests, renovation of historic sites, exhibits, parades and flea markets.

Information about those programs as well as data on projects still under development, will be included in the computer network.

Guidance Offices Open Evenings

The Guidance Offices at the three Quincy high schools will be open Tuesday evenings from 6 to 9 p.m., according to Richard Haines, head counselor. Parents, students, and interested adults from the community are urged to use the available guidance services for college placement, occupational planning, or vocational training.

Delahunt Would Decline Judgeship Or Post In Dukakis Administration

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Word along the political front is that Rep. William Delahunt [D-Quincy] will get a judgeship or a top administrative post if Mike Dukakis is elected governor next month.

But don't believe it, insists Delahunt.

Delahunt, who has served as Norfolk County coordinator for Dukakis, no doubt could have either if Dukakis is elected—and the polls so far indicate he will be the next governor. But he doesn't want either—or anything else, for that matter.

"I enjoy an active political career," Delahunt says. "I'm not interested in a judgeship nor a post in the administration. I've already told Mike this and he understands.

"I just like the excitement of an active political career. No way would I take a job if Mike offered it to me."

That's from the horse's mouth.

THE DEMOCRATIC CITY Committee has a new treasurer: former School Committee Vice-Chairman Paul Kelly. He succeeds former Ward 4 Councillor Albert Barilero who gave up the post because of increased duties as an inspector for The Game.

The Democrats, incidentally, will stage a fund-raiser Oct. 24 at St. Mary's parish hall, West Quincy. The top of the ticket, Mike Dukakis, Tom O'Neill and Frank Bellotti will be there and will share equally in the proceeds for their campaigns.

JACK DI MARCO of Copeland St., West Quincy, now belongs to that golfers' elite circle: owner of a hole-in-one. DiMarco scored it at Ridder's, Whitman on the 170-yard, par 3 third hole. He used a 5-iron. He's been playing golf for a little over a year. With him on the momentous occasion were his brother, Lou, John Martinelli, both Quincy and Frank Tivnan of Weymouth.

A COCKTAIL PARTY will be held for Quincy's Francis Bellotti, Democratic candidate for attorney general, Monday, Oct. 21 at the Braintree Armory, Union St., Braintree, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Tickets, $15 per couple, may be obtained from Quincy coordinators Sabina Stenberg and John [Butch Mahoney] by calling 471-4840 or 472-5270.

AND A RECEPTION for Sheriff Charles Hedges will be held Thursday, Oct. 24 at 7 p.m. at the Dedham Inn, formerly Hotel 128. Tickets may be obtained from Chairman Atty. Stephen Keefe [479-9700], Deputy Sheriff John Brownell [479-2998] Willis Smith [472-2254] or from treasurer Alfred Ricci, at Hedges headquarters, 27 Milton St., East Dedham.

LIKE-FATHER-LIKE-son-dept: Joseph Koch, 17-year-old son of Richard Koch, the city's new director of natural resources, is undergoing basic Army training at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., in the Ozark Mountains. He graduated from North Quincy High School last June. His father did his basic training at the same place after graduating from North in 1942.

SPEAKING OF THE Koch's, Dick's daughter, Susan, 16, will bowl again Saturday at 3:30 p.m. on the Pinbusters Show, Ch. 7. She won the match last week. Her sister, Linda, bowled on "Candlepins For Cash" last year.

LOOK ALIKES: James Donahue, chairman of the Quincy Conservation Commission and Planning Director Geoffrey Davidson—without goatee.

IRWIN COHEN, highly successful track coach at Northeastern University and a Quincy resident, will soon join the Board of Directors of the Quincy Track Club.

INCIDENTALLY, when Gov. Sargent recently made the announcement that work will definitely start on the much needed schoolboy track facility on MDC land in Neponset, Quincy was the only city which will be eligible to use the facility to show any interest.

Frank Kelly, vice president of the Quincy Track Club, and Secretary Lou Tozzi, who conducted the weekly meets during the summer, took 50 members of the QTC to the meeting in Dorchester and each wore a QTC shirt. Sargent praised the group for their interest and spirit and Tozzi presented QTC shirts to the governor, MDC Commr. John Sears and Rep. Donnelly of Dorchester.

Biting The Bullet

By WENDELL WOODMAN

BOSTON — I'm still a little foggy about Mr. Ford's intentions toward my tapeworm. What does he mean by asking me to "bite the bullet?"

Owing to that ain't the same as French bread and it won't sit in the stomach any better than the roots I've been foraging for the wife and kids, I can make do with cartridges if I'm convinced it's in my country's interest.

But I'm not convinced yet, and the price of bullets puts them a little out of my reach [or about where hamburger was in 1961].

May I humbly suggest as an alternative that we ask Saudi Arabia to bit the bullet first?

Our world gone mad is at the mercy of a few crazy sheiks who've managed to groom American foreign aid into an economic time bomb, and if bullets go on the menu the only real question is the manner in which they should be administered.

President Ford and Dr. Kissinger dropped some diplomatic hints a few weeks ago [and a year late in coming] that people in glass tents have to eat just like the rest of us.

You have oil and we have food, observed the Administration. The bleeding "Is there any child here who does not know that the seed of war in the modern world is commercial and industrial rivalry?"

—Woodrow Wilson

hearts, naturally, don't like that kind of confrontational talk. Food, they say, should never be used as a weapon.

So how come it's okay to use oil as a weapon?

And the great heart answers that we're using too much energy.

One constructive way to cut down on that energy is to stop shipping food to those parasites in the Middle East who are out to bankrupt every culture that uses oil.

To the economists who take their thumbs out of their mouths long enough to wonder what the golly-whiz to do about this inflation thing, the solution is to up the price on food exports.

If the Shah of Iran isn't willing to feed his people bread at $35 a loaf, then let him scrape by on figs and grapes. If he wants wheat, let's charge him ten times as much for a bushel as he's soaking us for a barrel of oil.

Blackmailers understand that sort of thing. We give them a relatively simple choice: either fill your treasuries or your tummies.

Now the compassionate, intellectual cult will be terribly dismayed by such a heartless suggestion, but only because they do not understand what inflation is all about. The direct source of world-wide inflation is the artificial price of oil.

The Arabs are bankrupting the world so they can do in Israel, and if we don't stop feeding them, we're going to find ourselves at Armageddon with nothing heavier than a stomachful of bullets.

If it's economic warfare, let's play tit for tat and launch the $700 chicken wing, and by the time we've priced lamb chops and ice cream cones off the Arabian market, we'll be able to afford not to freeze.

There is nothing more humane than diverting an aggressor from his unconcealed designs for conquest through bankruptcy and starvation. Those idiots don't deny that; they brag about it.

The President had better stop hinting and start doing, because God must be awfully disappointed right about now.

Richard Morrissey To Be 'Roasted' Oct.25

Richard M. [Dee Dee] Morrissey will be "roasted", Friday evening Oct. 25, at the Victory Road Armory, Dorchester.

A social hour will be held at 7 p.m., followed by a catered Roast Beef dinner at 8 p.m. The event is being sponsored by friends of Morrissey, in recognition of Mr. Morrissey's many charitable, athletic, civic and municipal endeavors for the past 25 years.

Proceeds of the event will be donated to the charity of Morrissey's choosing.

Committee members include, Joseph Flaherty, chairman, Thomas McCluskey, secretary, Thomas Malloy, treasurer; ticket committee, Donald Hardin, Edward Dorsey, Joseph Newton, Carl Gnospeilus, Harold Galvin, Harold Sheehan, Edward Crowley, Martin Joyce, Jim Bagley, Paul Patouchi and Richard J. Koch.

Deadline for purchase of tickets is Friday Oct. 18, from any person on the above committee. Six hundred reservations have been received to date.

Morrissey, who lives at 9 Buckingham Rd, is the owner of Dee Dee's Restaurant on Newport Ave., and a member of the Quincy Conservation Commission. He is a former member and chairman of the Quincy Park-Recreation Board, former commissioner of the Youth Football League, Junior Baseball League and a director and sponsor of Quincy Little Loop Bowling.

Achievement Tests At High Schools

On Wednesday, Oct. 23, and Thursday, Oct. 24, the California Achievement Tests will be administered to all sophomores in North Quincy High School, Quincy High School, and Quincy Vocational Technical School.

Due to the lack of adequate facilities for conducting a standardized testing program as a part of the regular school day the juniors and seniors in the three high schools will report to their homerooms at 10 a.m. Oct. 23 and Oct. 24 instead of the usual 8 a.m. starting time.

Freshmen and sophomores in the three high schools will report to their homerooms at 8 a.m.

Youth Speaks Out

- Ted Kennedy, Joan Kennedy, Wilbur Mills - Some of our politicians would be much better off if they didn't drive.
- With the price of a dozen eggs what it is, Halloween trick or treaters may have to use an egg substitute.
- President Ford urged Boston residents to respect the law. Let's hope they do it better than he did in pardoning Nixon.
- If gas prices go much higher, the expense will rival your car payment.
- NOT WANTED: Two $9.00 tickets to see the Bruins play the Washington Capitals - Who?
- President Ford has urged us to wear Win Buttons which means Whip Inflation now. Turn it around to NIW and it means Nixon Investigation Whitewash.

'Prayer' Topic Sunday For Quincy Church Women United

"Prayer" will be the topic of Rev. M. Alicia Corea at the annual prayer service and breakfast of Church Women United in Quincy at Memorial Congregational Church, 65 Newbury Ave., North Quincy Sunday, at 7 a.m.

Rev. Mrs. Corea, now the only woman minister in Quincy, has been associate pastor of the Houghs Neck Congregational Church for 25 years. This year she was named co-pastor with her husband, Rev. Dr. Peter V. Corea.

Rev. Douglas MacIntosh, pastor of Memorial Congregational Church, will give the pastoral prayer and benediction. Guitar music will be by Rev. William Heinrich, pastor of First Church of Scituate, and his daughter, Miss Erika Heinrich. James Duncan of Wollaston Congregational Church will be soloist.

Mrs. Lillian Tokarski of Wollaston Church of the Nazarene, the day's chairman, will preside. Mrs. George Stephen, president of Church Women United in Quincy, will also speak.

Other committee members participating are Mrs. Ruth Mathews, Mrs. Martha Reid, Mrs. Mattie Walman, Mrs. Andrew Rankin and Miss Mary Bair.

Clergy In Drug Abuse Workshop

Clergy of various denominations from the South Shore area will be involved in a four-hour workshop on drug abuse Friday afternoon and Oct. 25 from 1 to 5 p.m. Sponsored by the Cardinal's Ad Hoc Committee on Drugs, the two-session workshop will be conducted at the Quincy Center United Methodist Church, 166 Granite St., Quincy.

The first session is devoted to answering the question, "What Is The Situation" relative to drug abuse in the South Shore district. Rev. Henry Kane, Drug Education Director for Boston, and Rev. Gary Nettleton, pastor of Quincy Center United Methodist Church will conduct the overview of the problem.

Included in the first session of the workshop will be representatives from the Quincy Police Department, Quincy Public School social health co-ordinators John Mahoney and Maureen O'Brien, Quincy District Court chief probation officer Richard Venna, and a panel of youths from the Milton, Quincy, and Weymouth school systems.

During the first session Mahoney will explain the basic pharmacology of drugs. Special Agent from the Drug Enforcement Administration, Joseph Catala will outline the history of drug abuse. Rev. Nettleton will address the subjects of sex and youth culture. Fr. Surette, the Director of Life Sources, will focus upon contemporary society and its relation to the drug problem.

The second session will probe strategies for "How we can respond." A psychiatrist, Dr. Dana Farnsworth, will discuss drug abuse as a family crisis; Dr. John Renner of Mass. General Hospital will speak on counseling the individual; and a director of Survival, Inc., Charles Diamond, will explain evaluation and referral of victims of drug abuse.

All South Shore clergy are invited to attend the workshop. Contact person for the event is Rev. Gary Nettleton, who can be reached by telephone [773-182] or mail [Quincy Center Methodist Church, Fort and Granite St., Quincy, 02169].

After 77 Years

Quincy Savings Bank Opens New Downtown Main Office

After 77 years in the same location, The Quincy Savings Bank Tuesday moved its main branch office into newly constructed headquarters at 1200 Hancock St., across from the Quincy Center MBTA station.

The new three-story headquarters building, of masonry and solar bronze glass, has been designed from the ground up, to provide improved service and a more pleasant environment for customers and employees, alike.

The handsomely landscaped building contains 52,000 square feet for expanded and more efficient facilities in all departments, drive-up tellers, free parking, and a community service room, for local groups to meet in.

Opening festivities which run for three weeks, starting Oct. 21, one week after the official opening, include coffee, pastry and free gifts for all, drawings for six free $200 savings accounts. And free English Bone China for everyone who opens a $50 savings account, or who adds $50 to a present account. For the added convenience of its customers, the former headquarters location at 1374 Hancock St., becomes the new Quincy Center Branch, and will specialize in loans.

Hancock Bank Net Income Up 17.3%

Hancock Bank reports net income for the third quarter up 17.3 per cent over third quarter earnings in 1973, according to William E. Kelley, president.

Kelley said third quarter net income totalled $254,659 or 91 cents per share against $217,128 or 78 cents per share for the third quarter last year.

Likewise, Hancock Bank experienced an increase in net income for the nine month period ending Sept. 30, 1974. Net income rose from $690,670 for the first nine months last year to $705,531 for the nine months this year.

Per share earnings for nine months this year were $2.52 compared with $2.47 for the first nine months last year.

Hancock Bank, based in Quincy, has 15 offices throughout Norfolk County.

Hugo's Lighthouse Again Wins Holiday Award

Hugo's Lighthouse, Cohasset has won for the 22nd consecutive year the Holiday magazine award for distinctive dining.

John Carzis, owner of the

Eugene Raux Selected For HNS District 'Man Of Year' Award

Eugene J. Raux of 47 Clement Terrace, North Quincy, has been named Holy Name Society District Man of the Year.

A member of the Sacred Heart Holy Name Society, Raux attended Francis W. Parker School, North Quincy Junior and High School, graduating with the class of 1942. He served as an Officer with the United States Air Corps in World War II. He is an official of the Hancock Paint Co.

Recently friends, neighbors and associates honored him.

Mayor Walter J. Hannon, presented him with the Citizens' Award, a special ceramic tile with the Manet [City Seal] on it.

He has been long active in Montclair School PTA Neighborhood Carnivals, fund-raising, parish activities, education and scouting.

EUGENE J. RAUX

The HNS Man of the Year is selected by Archdiocesan Director, Rev. James Lanergan, in residence at St. Mary's Church, West Quincy, and his staff who consider all the candidates from the 33 parishes of this Holy Name Deanery, nominated by ballot.

Joseph Kahler of 62 Ruggles St., Quincy Point, District President made the announcement. Rev. John Downey, Pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Quincy Point serves as Spiritual Director for the 33 area parish representatives, and participated in the voting.

Raux will receive his award at the Nov. 3 televised Mass at Ch. 7, Government Center. Friends are invited to attend. Doors open at 8:30 a.m. Mass and ceremonies are at 9.

Raux is married to the former Mary O'Brien of North Quincy, presently Children's Librarian at the North Quincy Library. She serves on the Sacred Heart Parish Council.

The couple have four children, Mary, a first year student at Harvard Medical; Eugene a senior at Boston College; Redmond a sophomore at Wentworth Institute; and Christine a senior at Archbishop Williams High School.

Lamb Chairman Maritime Academy Committee

Lt. Henry J. Lamb Jr., of 20 Williams St., North Quincy, is serving as general chairman of the "Castine Caper Committee" planning Massachusetts Maritime Academy's annual Homecoming Weekend.

The festive weekend will take place on Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 26-27 on the 55-acre Taylor's Point campus bordering the Cape Cod Canal.

Lamb's committee has been functioning for nearly a year, preparing for Homecoming Weekend and the mythical New England Maritime championship football game with Maine Maritime Academy.

Lamb, a faculty member at the Academy, is a member of the class of 1963. He expects more than 1,000 people to attend the Victory Dance scheduled for Saturday night. Dance proceeds will benefit the Adm. Lee Harrington's Presidential Scholarship Fund.

Also a member of the planning committee is George D. Santry of 30 Euclid Ave., Quincy, a member of the class of 1965.

Homecoming Weekend will begin with tours of the new $11 million campus and the new training ship "Bay State". There will be a parade preceding the football game and a series of dinners will follow.

Reppucci Running As Independent 'By Choice'

Herbert Reppucci, West Quincy and Wollaston candidate for state representative in the Fourth Norfolk District was honored recently at a house party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Walsh of 150 Pine St., Wollaston.

Reppucci stressed that his decision to run Independent for Representative "was by choice and not chance."

"I firmly believe," Reppucci said, "that with the voters distrust of government resulting from Watergate this year, a candidate must be without ties to any political power group or special interest group."

"My candidacy has stressed that as an independent, I can discern the true feelings of the voters without being encumbered by the political obligations of a candidate of either of the two major parties would have.

"The results of my decision to run independently were somewhat difficult. First, I had to gather more signatures than my opponent had to collect. Second, my name was not allowed to be placed on the September Primary ballot, thereby denying me the same privilege my opponent has by law.

"Despite these difficulties, I believe that my choice to run as an Independent, will better enable me to serve the people of West Quincy and Wollaston, since I owe no one anything."

Richard Riley Receive's Merit Commendation

Richard Riley, son of Mrs. Dorothea Riley of 121 Green St., Wollaston, has received a Letter of Commendation for his score on the National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Exam.

A senior at Boston College High School, Richard is one of 22 students - all seniors - to be honored in the National Merit Scholarship Program. The students all placed in the top three per cent of over one million students taking the exam.

Joyce Baker Would Limit Legislature On Higher Costs.

At a reception held at the home of Mrs. Thomas Costello, 50 Lincoln Ave., Wollaston, Joyce I. Baker, candidate for the Fourth Norfolk District state representative seat, announced her intention to co-file a measure to limit the legislature's ability to impose higher costs on cities and towns.

"It is now much too easy for the state to force new expenses on cities and towns and thus take away from us local control over our own tax rate", Mrs. Baker said.

"All it takes now is a simple majority vote in the legislature. I am supporting a constitutional amendment that would require two thirds vote to impose costs on two or more cities and towns unless the state is willing to put up the money or the town has already voted to accept the expenses.

"The so called 'Home Rule Amendment' only protects single towns. The legislature can get around it by simply making any costly bill apply to two or more towns.

"The idea for this amendment is not new. But for the last few years the legislative leadership has kept the bill from even getting on the constitutional convention agenda. They don't want to give up one iota of legislative power.

"My opponent has voted against putting the bill on the agenda for the last two years in a row.

"He voted, as I see it, against giving Quincy more power over its own finances, and in favor of keeping that power in Boston. I absolutely disagree."

After Stunning Waltham

Quincy Hopes To Stay 'Up' For Newton

QUINCY'S PRESTON CARROLL dives over Waltham's Dave Poirier for three yards in early first-period action at Quincy Veterans Memorial stadium.

By TOM SULLIVAN

Quincy's football teams have won some big games through the years but few were any bigger than last week's stunning last second upset win over previously unbeaten Waltham and Coach Hank Conroy just hopes the Presidents don't suffer a letdown Saturday at Newton.

Quincy and Newton meet for the first time in a Suburban League game at 1:30 p.m. and if the Presidents hit as hard as they did last week and show the same poise under pressure; they stand a good chance of making their first Suburban League record 2-0.

Newton started fast this year with non-league wins over Framingham North, 21-0, and Medford, 15-0, but was then bombed by Brockton, 40-7, and last week was nipped by Weymouth North, 13-12.

Waltham, 8-1 a year ago with only a loss to Super Bowl Champion Brockton, came roaring into Quincy's Veterans Memorial Stadium with a 3-0 record and a heavy favorite to top Quincy, which had been struggling with a 1-2 record.

Quincy, however, turned in an aggressive two-way performance to pull out a 21-20 win with just 14 seconds to play after Waltham had taken a 20-14 lead with 1:06 remaining.

"What can I say?" asked an elated Conroy. "We worked all week on our two-minute drive, meaning a quick series of plays with less than two minutes to play and it paid off. The boys didn't lose their poise, as they might well have when falling behind with only about a minute left, and that final drive was very encouraging."

"There were so many kids who deserve credit, it is hard to single anyone out. But" how about Mike Murray? This boy, a junior, never played until we used him at Revere kicking the points. He kicked one against Revere and what pressure he had on him today, kicking the winning point with 14 seconds left. The pass from center was high and he did well to get the kick off, but it was perfect."

Conroy praised Preston Carroll, who was a doubtful starter right up to game time but who ran well despite a bothersome knee. He gained 53 yards, scored his seventh touchdown of the year and ran well all day. Paul Vespaziani and Paul Ramponi also ran well and Jimmy Forrester had a great day at quarterback. Showing a lot of poise, he hit on 10 of 19 passes for 130 yards and the tying touchdown, and despite being sacked five times, he picked up some valuable yardage.

Hank admitted it had to be a real team effort but also had good words for Doug King, Gerry Durante, Paul DiCristofaro, Steve Coleman who, in his words "did a great job"; John Riggs and Mike Wysocki. "Everyone on the team played a great game, they all deserve credit," he said.

"Waltham came here with a boy who was rated one of the top tackles in the state [Fred Smerlas, 240-pound N.E. wrestling champion], but we ran right at him and the other tackles and moved them pretty well," Conroy added.

Ramponi turned in a key play when he ran the kickoff back from his 25 to Waltham's 49 following the Hawks' go-ahead touchdown. Thus 'runback' set the stage for the winning drive. Quincy nearly scored on the game's first play when Carroll, in the clear, dropped Forrester's long pass. The Presidents failed to quit, however, and drove to the first touchdown, covering 63 yards in eight plays.

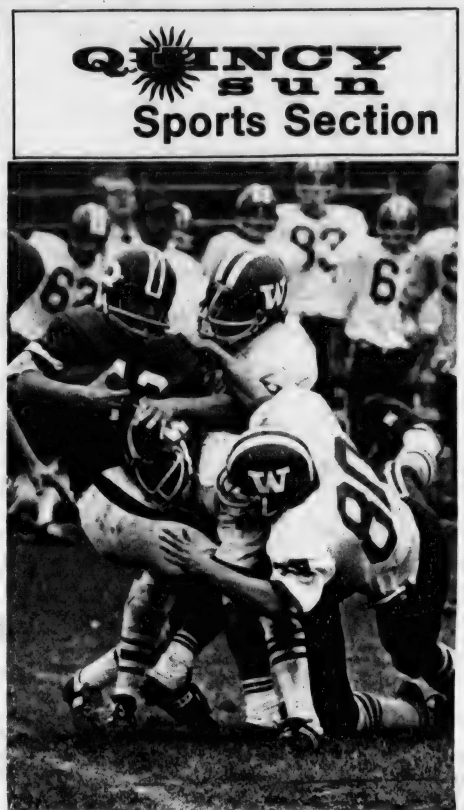

Forrester hit Riggs for nine yards, Vespaziani went for seven and Carroll for 14. After two plays had lost five; Mike MacKenzie, who had another outstanding day as a pass receiver, with eight receptions, made a remarkable catch for a 21-yard gain to the Waltham 16, from where Carroll scored. Murray's kick for the point was long enough but went wide.

A short Quincy punt carried only to the Presidents' 43 late in the first period and Waltham went on to tie the score.

Waltham drove to its second score midway in the second period after a Quincy punt went to Waltham's 43.

Quincy bounced right back and marched 54 yards to score after a fine kickoff return by Ted Wiedemann. A pass from Forrester to MacKenzie, who flicked to Carroll, was good for 24 yards to the Waltham 19, another by the same combination added eight yards and Vespaziani scored from the one with time running out. Forrester passed to Rich Hebert for the tying points.

The teams battled back and forth until the late stages of the game. With a minute and a half left Quincy's King was called for pass interference, giving Waltham a first down on the Quincy 12. A disputed face mask penalty moved Waltham to the six and with 1:06 left, Dave Poirier found Rick Mansur all alone in the end zone and hit him for a 20-14 lead.

It looked bad for Quincy but after Ramponi's fine kickoff return, Forrester passed to Carroll for six yards, then hit MacKenzie, who pitched back to Carroll on a flea-flicker play for 12 yards to the 31. A 15-yard penalty against Waltham set it back to the 16. Forrester passed to MacKenzie for 10 and, with 14 seconds to play, hit him for the eighth time in the corner of the end zone to tie it. Then came Murray's big kick for the winning point.

Quincy had only 92 net yards rushing as it was hit for 48 yards in losses, including Forrester's five sackings. Waltham had a net gain of 128 yards. Forrester's 10 for 19 were good for 130 yards while Poirier hit on seven of 12 for 99. His final one was intercepted by Rich Hennessey with five seconds left to save it for the Presidents. Quincy had 15 first downs and Waltham 16. The Presidents were hit with 91 yards in penalties, Waltham 50.

Raiders, Doherty Host Weymouth South

"Brian Doherty, Brian Doherty, Brian Doherty."

North Quincy football coach Ralph Frazier repeated the name following last week's thrilling last minute win over Everett.

Frazier had words of praise for a lot of other Raiders, but mostly he talked about another brilliant performance by the junior halfback who gained 140 of his team's 171 yards on the ground and scored two of the three touchdowns.

"I just pray Brian stays healthy, he is the meat and potatoes of our offense," Frazier said. "He was just outstanding again today. This was the third game in a row in which he has scored over 120 yards by himself."

Everett, an old Greater Boston League rival of North, which is now in the Suburban League, threw a genuine scare into the Raiders, who went off the field at halftime with a 14-0 lead but found themselves in arrears, 16-14, with 2:16 remaining in the game. North came back in those final minutes to pull out its third straight win, 20-16, at Everett. It is 3-1 for the season.

Saturday North faces winless Weymouth South at Veterans Memorial Stadium in a non-league game and Frazier hopes his team will take nothing for granted and be "up" for the visitors.

Weymouth showed nothing in its first three games, bowing to Hingham, 27-6; Quincy, 32-8; and Boston Latin, 25-0. But Joe Kelly's wildcats came back last week to tie Brookline in the final seconds of regulation time and then lost in the tie-breaking overtime, 20-18.

North's attack was weakened last week by the absence of Rich Marino, who was out with bruised ribs. As a result, Doherty had to carry the load and did a superb job.

Paul McGuigan, making his first start, did well and Mike Meehan ran the team in fine style at quarterback.

The defense, as usual, was strong with the secondary particularly outstanding. Steve Lothrop intercepted three passes and Chris Morton intercepted one which set up North's first touchdown.

John Gallagher was hailed for his two-way performance and Paul Doherty, who kicked two conversions, kept Everett in bad field position with booming kickoffs which sailed out of the end zone.

The whole team blocked well but given special mention in this department were Mark Reale and Matty Constantino. Richie Joyce, Tom Callahan and Frank Struzzola, filling in for the injured Dennis McGuire, also received the plaudits of their coaches.

Morton intercepted a pass early in the second period to set up North's first touchdown drive. Brian Doherty scored from the five and Paul Doherty kicked the point.

Later in the period Meehan dove over from the one and Paul Doherty again kicked the point.

North took the second half kickoff and drove all the way to the Everett five but lost the ball on a fumble.

Everett scored early in the final period on a pass from Doug Foley to Jeff Dubbin and the same combo added the two extra points. Later Foley passed to Dan Ross for eight yards and the tying touchdown and again hit Dubbins for the tie-breaking points.

North began its winning march from its 30-yard line with 2:16 left to play and with 52 seconds remaining Brian Doherty dove over from the one.

North stuck to the ground as it picked up 171 yards while throwing only three incomplete passes. It had 11 first downs.

A-N Downs Broadmeadows, Sterling Rolls By Point

In last Friday's Quincy Junior High football games the Atlantic-North ninth grade team defeated Broadmeadows, 16-6.

Joe Deane scored both A-N touchdowns with Dave Sylvester and Jim Moore adding the conversions. Frank Dragone scored for Broadmeadows. A pass for the extra points failed.

The eighth grade teams played to a 6-6 tie. Mark Grindle scored for BM and Mike Spinelli for Atlantic-North.

The BM seventh grade romped, 22-8. Tom Brennan scored two touchdowns and Tom Roche caught a Paul McConville pass for the other. Paul Graham scored for A-N and Ricky Anderson added the points.

Last Thursday Sterling ninth grade defeated Point, 22-6. Rick Gibbody scored the first Sterling touchdown and Jimmy Maze scored the other two. Ken Johnston added two extra points on a pass and Lenny Picot the other. Peter Niosi had Point's touchdown.

Point's eighth graders won, 6-0. Peter Griffin had the winning touchdown.

Sterling won the seventh grade game, 16-0. Eddie Tinney scored the first TD with Chuck Sylva adding the points. Leon Frazer scored the second on an end run, breaking two tackles. Steve Picot scored the conversion.

Earlier in the week Atlantic-North ninth grade defeated Central, 8-0. North had the ball most of the first half but was unable to score. Deane scored the touchdown on a pass after the intermission and also added the two-point conversion.

Atlantic-North's eighth grade team came up with its first win, 6-0, as Danny McIntyre scored on an end-around play.

The seventh grade teams played to a scoreless tie.

Sarruda Penn. Headhunter

For the second week in a row Jim Sarruda, former North Quincy standout, was among the weekly award winners for the U. of Pennsylvania football team.

The defensive player of the week the previous week in Penn's win over Lehigh, Sarruda, a senior, won laurels following a come-from-behind 12-9 win over Brown. He was named the Quakers' Headhunter by leading the team in tackles. The hard hitting linebacker led the squad in both solo tackles and assists with nine of each. He leads the team in both departments for the season.

Penn has a 2-0-1 overall record and is 1-0-1 in the Ivy League.

North Battling For Lead, Quincy Still In Race

The Suburban League soccer race continues red hot with North Quincy battling Newton and Brockton for the league lead and it appears the fight for the championship could go down to the final day.

Lou Ioanniti's North booters fell a half-game behind Newton last Saturday when they were held to a 1-1 tie by Brockton, which is right behind the Raiders. Newton defeated Cambridge Latin to make a half-game ahead of North. North has a fine 9-1-2 record. Newton is 10-1-1 and Brockton 8-1-3.

Quincy, meanwhile, is not too far out of the race as it defeated Weymouth South, 6-1, Saturday to make its record 7-3-2.

Tuesday North hosted Weymouth North and Quincy played at Cambridge Latin. Friday it will be Brookline at North and Quincy at Brockton and next Tuesday Waltham at North and Quincy at Weymouth.

North. Walter Melton scored North's goal unassisted last Saturday as the Raiders played another strong defensive game.

For Ron Martin's Quincy team Marco DiCenzo and Peter Keenan had two goals apiece and Glenn Schlager and Emido Michaelangelo one each.

Joe McEcheran had three assists, Bob Barros two and Ken Donovan one.

Earlier in the week North had defeated Cambridge Latin, 4-2, with John Penella having two goals, Donovan and Melton one apiece. Tim Clifford had two assists and John Mackey one.

Quincy nipped Rindge Tech, 3-2, with Mark Raymond having two goals and DiCenzo one. Tom Connolly had two assists and Scott Simpson one.

Joe McCarthy got his first chance to start in goal due to Mike Kennedy's illness and he turned in an excellent performance.

Bantam A's Win, 5-4

The Bantam A team edged West Roxbury, 5-4, for its second straight Bay Colony Association win.

Mark Giordani scored twice, Don Perdios, Eddie Kane and Dave Lewis once each. Bobby

Hayes, Giordani and Kane had two assists each, Mike Van Tassel, Leo Doyle and Brian

Mite A's Win, 3-1

The Mite A team defeated Hingham, 3-1, for its third straight Bay Colony Association win.

Scott Messina, Bob McCabe and Keith Smith had the goals and Danny Kelly, Paul Marshall, Chris Hurley and Mark Chambers assists. Steve White, who undergoes open heart surgery this week, was outstanding on defense.

QYHA Dance Saturday

The Quincy Youth Hockey Association will hold its first dance of the season Saturday from 8:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. at Sacred Heart Hall, North Quincy. Music will be provided by the Tara Show Band.

Tickets are available at the Quincy Youth Arena from the following committee members: Maureen and Jack Carney, Mary and Tom Heffernan, Lorraine and Bill Rooney, Bev and Dick Reinhardt, Marie and John Murphy, Barbara and Jack Campbell, Marilyn and Ernie Zimmerman, Carol and Jerry Collins.

Koch Boys Bowling Deadline

Deadline to join the Koch Club Boys Bowling League is Saturday at 8:45 a.m. at the Merrymount Daylight Alleys, 17 Broad St. Adjacent to Bryan

VEF Post. Boys 9 through 16 are welcome and will be assigned to a team and bowl.

● Quincy Youth Hockey

Midget A's Defeat Weymouth

The Midget A team took its third straight South Shore Conference win when it defeated Brockton, 4-1, at the Charles River Skating Club. Quincy will play Weymouth Sunday at the same rink. Dennis Bertoni, Jackie Powers, Tom Cahill and Joe McConville scored the Quincy goals with Dave Previte having two assists and Dave Peters, Powers and Bertoni one each.

Also playing well for Quincy were Jimmy McConville, John Chivaroli, Pat Downey, Jerry DeLuca, Brian Watts, Bobby Fitzpatrick, Tom Cahill and Bud Hanlon. Jeff Nord was outstanding in goal.

PeeWee B's Bomb West Roxbury, 13-0

The Pee Wee B team, tied in its first game, mauled West Roxbury, 13-0, with P. T. Kelly and Tony Krunelis sharing the goal duties.

Bob McHugh, Mike Panico,

Chuckie Marshall, Joe Rathgeb and Tommy Mullen had two goals each, Danny Flynn, Steve

Walsh and Tommy Roach one apiece. Panico and Mark Veasey

each had three assists, McHugh and Roach two each, Marshall, Rathgeb, Flynn, Walsh and Tommy Heffernan one apiece.

Palmer In 4th Straight Shutout For Mite B's

Goalie John Palmer earned his third and fourth straight shutouts when the Mite B team walloped Hull, 7-0, and South Boston, 8-0, in the Bay Colony

Association. Scoring against Hull were Jim Daly with two goals, Bob Kane, Bob Foreman, Mike Barry, Greg Keefe and Danny Hall with one each. Jeff Murphy had two assists, Kane, Foreman, John Krantz, Kevin Zanardelli, Mary Tolson, Billy Glavin, Tim Barry and Bobby Drury one each.

Murphy's Hat Trick Paces Squirt A's, 15-1

The Squirt A team bombarded West Roxbury, 15-1, Sunday for its third straight Bay Colony Association win.

Tommy Murphy had the hat trick, Paul McCabe, Dennis

Furtado, Mike Marshall and Kevin White two goals apiece, Kevin Craig, John Cummings, Richie Stevens and Kevin Chase one each. Craig and Cummings had three assists apiece, Marshall and Murphy two each and McCabe and Stevens one apiece. On the holiday the team tied Hyannis, 1-1, with Murphy having the goal and Marshall and Craig assists.

Squirt B Majors Shut Out Weymouth, 9-0

Goalie Kevin Whalen earned the shutout as the Squirt B Major team walloped Weymouth, 9-0, for its third straight Bay Colony Association win. Kevin Duff, Mike McNeice and Kevin McSweeney had two goals apiece, Stephen Hall, Kevin Tenney and Dave Hickey one each. Paul Bamberg had three assists, Billy Gran and McNeice two each, McSweeney, Duff, Mike Chiochio, Joe Livingstone, Paul Egan and Timmy Ryan one apiece.

PeeWee A's Blank West Roxbury, 6-0

The Pee Wee A team defeated West Roxbury, 6-0, for its second Bay Colony Association win in a row, with Jimmy

Tommy Gerry, Robbie Zanardelli, Freddie Palmer and Tommy Jo Connolly one each. Palmer, Sean Dennis, Neil Shea, it three wins in a row, topping Hyannis, 6-1.

Robbie Craig had two goals, John Furey, Zanardelli, Gerry and Beniers one apiece. Scott Richardson had two assists, Shea, Marshall, Palmer and Zanardelli one each.

Campbell and Kenny Mann sharing the shutout in goal. Bobby Currier had two goals, Zanardelli, Bobby Beniers and Tommy Gerry had assists. On the holiday the team made

Squirt B Minors Bow

The Squirt Minor B team dropped its first Bay Colony Association decision in three games, bowing to Hull, 4-3.

Dave DiCarlo, Richie Durham and Dave Allen had the Quincy goals and Dick Tapper, Rick Reardon, Chris Harrington and Kevin Greene assists. Todd Richardson played in goal.

Bantam B's In Tie

The Bantam B team, which had won its first two games, tied West Roxbury, 5-5, in the Bay Colony Association.

Tom Pistorino had two goals,

Mike Pitts, Paul McDermott and Mike Storer one each. Billy Deitsch had two assists, John Yaxter, Mike Gulizia and Tommy Brennan one apiece.

BANTAM B MINORS IN FIRST LOSS, 5-2

The Bantam Minor B team suffered its first loss in the Bay Colony Association when Scituate took a 5-2 decision.

Brian Norton and Jeff Taylor scored the Quincy goals and Jim Scanlan played a good game in goal in a losing cause.

Junior High Girls Basketball In Full Swing

A year ago girls' basketball made its debut in the Quincy junior high schools with Central, coached by old pro Mary Pratt, winning both the varsity and junior varsity leagues.

However, the big surprise was Point, the smallest school, finishing second in both leagues.

Coached by Kathy Bertrand, the Point varsity, with only nine players, had a 5-3 record, and her jayvee squad, with eight players, finished 6-2.

Last week Point varsity started off with an impressive 28-16 win over Atlantic-North and Miss Bertrand has hopes for another successful season.

"The girls demonstrated a well-rounded team effort," Miss Bertrand said. Janice Russo and Debbie Russo had eight points apiece and Ellen Doucette seven.

"Everyone played excellent defense," the coach said, "with Nancy Barron and Lori Robinson bringing down most of the rebounds."

Rounding out the varsity squad are Claire LeCours, Wendy Isaacson, Diane Nicols, Cheryl McElman, Donna Slicis and Karen McGhee.

Atlantic-North was paced by Lisa Sullivan's six points.

The Point junior varsity didn't fare as well as it dropped a 14-11 squeaker.

Allison Fay paced Point with nine points, while Cheryl Ferguson, Teresa Spano, Carol Sandomato and Roseann Eleutri all played well in a losing cause. Other members of the squad are Cheryl Dauphinee, Joyce Christianson, Lori Lewis, Cynthia Watt, Lynn Watt, Lori Zakrzewski, Cheryl Cadman, Ann Barron, Joanne Roffo, Lisa Montgomery, Rhoda Gabriel, Claire Kaska, and Linda White.

Debbie Sherlock was the big star for A-N as she scored all six of her team's points in the final period when her team pulled out the win.

The varsity squad of 11 and the jayvee squad of 18 shows the tremendous increase in interest at Point and this is also evident in most of the other schools.

Point's varsity later overcame a 10-point deficit midway in the third period and defeated Broadmeadows, 29-23. This made the team's record 2-1.

Losing at the half, 21-11, the Pointers were sparked by Debbie Russo's 17 points and the offensive and defensive rebounding of Nancy Barron and Lori Robinson.

The junior varsity was beaten soundly by BM, 25-5, to drop its record to 1-2.

A year ago the Broadmeadows varsity team had only a 1-7 record.

However, Coach Corinne Mitchell's girls have already improved on that record and could be a title contender this season.

The BM girls had a 2-2 record after their first four games as they dropped a 23-20 decision to Central in their opener but came back to nip Atlantic-North, 23-22, and defeat Sterling, 18-14. They then lost to Point, 29-23.

Returnees from last year are Kathy Campbell, Clare Connolly, Jean Donahue, Patty Maloney, Mary Megnia and Kathy Scheurch.

They are joined by Suzanne Colman, Brenda Hillier, Gail McKeon, Barbara Meegan, Nancy Miller, Stacey, Myett, Charlene Nicholson, Dorothy Shaw and Donna Taylor.

"The team is developing a strong defense, just as the junior varsity team is, and several players, particularly Mary Megnia, Nancy Miller, Suzanne Colman, Hazel Conroy, are strong in this area," Ms. Mitchell said.

"The offensive teams are developing a style of their own, so we will become a well-balanced ball club."

The junior varsity last year had a 5-3 record and this year's club is off to a fast start with three wins and a tie. Following a 5-5 tie with Central, BM walloped Atlantic-North, 36-3, rolled over Sterling, 27-9, and topped Point, 25-5.

Returning players are Lynne Powers, elected jayvee captain, Nancy Campbell, Hazel Conroy, Lorraine Denvir, Paula Lynch, Brenda Morrison and Kathi Ward. Barbara McClelland is a newcomer to the eighth grade lineup.

The seventh graders who comprise the other powerful half of the team are Susan Callahan, Donna DePietro, Dorothy Donahue, Mary Fitzpatrick, Susan Kelly, Joanne Pacetti, Laura Riley and Janet Sines.

"We are looking forward to another exciting and sportsmanlike season in the second year of basketball," Ms. Mitchell concluded. "The girls face the new season fired with a will to win and a desire to improve on last year's records."

The Quincy Junior High soccer league appears well balanced this fall.

Of the eight games played, six were one-goal wins and another was a 1-1 tie.

Broad Meadows, coached by Scott Newell, was in first place with a 3-1 record going into last Tuesday's games. Atlantic-North, the defending champion, had a 2-0-1 mark.

Tuesday Central played Sterling and Atlantic-North faced Point. Today (Thursday) it will be Point vs. Central and Atlantic-North vs. Broad Meadows. Next Wednesday Atlantic-North will meet Sterling and Broad Meadows will take on Point.

In the latest games last week Central and Atlantic-North played to a 1-1 tie with Peter Bourikas scoring for Central and Tom Reaney for A-N, while John Connolly's goal gave Broad Meadows a 1-0 win over Sterling.

Earlier last week Broad Meadows nipped Central, 1-0, on Bill Norton's goal, and Sterling topped Point, 3-0, with Peter DiCenzo scoring twice and Joe Zimmerman once.

Previously Broad Meadows had edged Point, 3-2, with Norton scoring all three BM goals and Wayne Merritt and Paul Carsole scoring for Point, and Atlantic-North edged Sterling, 1-0, with Ed Kearney scoring.

Atlantic-North had opened with a 3-2 win over Broad Meadows as Mike Colon had two A-N goals and Mark Will one, while Sean Garvey and Norton scored for BM. Central had nipped Point, 2-1, with Bourikas scoring both Central goals and Bob Salvati scoring for Point.

●Cross-Country North, Quincy Have Individual Standouts

The boys and girls cross country season continues at Quincy and North Quincy High schools with none of the teams contenders for the league titles but both schools' teams are blessed with some outstanding individual performers.

Girls' cross country was introduced this fall and, although Quincy and North have only one win apiece, prospects are especially bright for next year with some junior high girls running.

Their scores don't count but one girls in particular, Dottie Irvine, a ninth grader at Central, has been a standout for the Quincy girls.

One of the top performers for the Quincy Track Club last summer, Dottie has finished among the top five in every meet and hit her peak last week when she won the meet against Weymouth North as the Quincy girls took their first win, 27-28. Dottie, who had done well in both previous meets, covered the course in 12:38. Quincy's first official finisher was Sally Rickson, the meet winner. Kelly Tobin was third, Jody Yurkstas sixth, Ginger Denvir seventh and Kathy Keating 10th.

"Although their scores don't count, I let Dottie Irvine and her sister, Patty, run for us to gain experience," Coach Tom Hall said. "Dottie is a tremendous prospect and turned in some great performances during the summer for the Quincy Track Club."

Hall's boys' team didn't fare as well last week as it was thumped by Weymouth North, 19-41.

Bob Thorne, who has been the Presidents' first finisher in every meet, was third, Kevin O'Brien was sixth and John Ross ninth, as Quincy's record dropped to 1-4.

Lou Tozzi's North runners picked up their second win, 21-34, over Brookline, as Bart Petracca again was the meet winner. Mark Canavan was third, Art Barrett fourth, Ken Barrett sixth and Ken O'Brien seventh.

North's junior varsity also won, 23-34, with Marty Levenson finishing first.

Next Tuesday Quincy will host Weymouth North and North will be home to Newton, both meets over the Quincy course.

Previously Quincy had lost to Newton, 18-43, but Quincy's Thorne finished third and broke the Newton course record by 32 seconds with a timing of 13:35. O'Brien was seventh and also finishing were Dennis McCarthy, a promising newcomer; Sam Gravina, Ron Vecchione and Stan Park.

The Quincy girls, running for only the second time, lost, 25-32. Dottie Irvine finished a strong third. First official finisher was Sally Rickson in second place. Kelly Tobin was fourth and the other scorers were Ginger Denvir, Jody Yurkstas and Kathy Keating.

Last week Lou Tozzi's North Quincy team lost to Weymouth South, 25-33, despite Bart Petracca's fourth successive record-breaking performance.

Weymouth's Dan Doyle won his 32nd straight race and set a new Weymouth course record, and Petracca, finishing a close second as he lost for the first time, also broke the old record, finishing in 14:07.

Artie Barrett was third for North, Mark Canavan sixth and Ken Barrett 10th.

The North girls, winners in their first meet in history, also lost at Weymouth, 15-50, as the Weymouth girls swept the first 10 places.

Quincy boys also lost, 15-48, to Brockton, which has lost only one meet in more than five years. Thorne was Quincy's only finisher among the top 10, placing sixth.

The girls also were defeated, 22-33, as Brockton's Tina Francario set a new Quincy course record of 11:31. Sally Rickson was fourth for the First Ladies, Jody Yurkstas seventh, Kelly Tobin eighth, Ginger Denvir ninth and Lisa DiMino 11th. Dottie Irvine, again unofficially, placed fourth.

GREG KING, who was an excellent player at Quincy High, is a senior defensive safety man for the strong Curry College football team.

Mixed Foursome Results Listed At Furnace Brook

The annual mixed invitational Scotch foursome tourney was held recently at the Furnace Brook Golf Club.

Mike Brandon of Furnace Brook and Helen Noviki of Wollaston shot low net of 68, while Dave Devin and Pamela Mansbck, both club champions at Braintree, had low gross of 78.

Dick Corbin of Furnace Brook and Betty Ingham of Pembroke had second net of 69 and Earl Wirtz of Furnace Brook and Ann Sheehan of Wollaston second gross of 82.

Marty and Jean Kusser of Braintree tied for second net of 69 and Ernie Angino and Harriet Lonergan of Ponkapoag had third gross of 84.

Also tying for second net of 69 were Frank Foster and Alice Pagnano of Furnace Brook and Dick and Connie Harrison of Furnace Brook. Fred Galeazzo of Wollaston and Barbara Spinello of Furnace Brook and Kurt Sakalowicz and Mary Murdock of Ponkapoag shot a net of 70.

Mr. and Mrs. George Flate were chairmen and their committee included Mr. and Mrs. Richard Corbin, Mr. and Mrs. James Morrison and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Hill.

In the Ladies Day "Scratch and Scramble" tourney, Aileen Hoag and Jenny Lutfy shot low gross and Rena Roche and Ellie Mulroy low net. Mimi DiFederico and Rose LaHive had second net and Jeanne Doherty and Pat Cugini third net.

Track Facility Soon A Reality

The much needed schoolboy track facility has cleared its last hurdle and will soon become a reality.

Gov. Sargent and MDC Commr. John W. Sears announced that the long awaited MDC facility has the green light to proceed at the Hallet Street dump site in Dorchester.

Last November the state comptroller ruled no payments could be made to the design engineer until it was made clear the MDC had received precise authority to locate recreational facilities on land taken for park purposes.

Rep. Joseph Brett (D-Quincy)

filed legislation at the MDC's request specifying the land could be used for recreational facilities. The bill failed to win approval.

As a result of the legislative setback, John Wright, general counsel for the MDC, undertook a study of the General Laws and found sufficient legal precedent to submit a 10-page memorandum of law to the comptroller's office earlier this month. The memorandum cleared the way for the comptroller to approve expenditure of the funds, thus assuring development of the athletic plant.

OLYMPIC CHAMP

On Sept. 4, 1972, swimmer Mark Spitz became the first person to win seven Olympic gold medals.

Lighting At Faxon Park Tennis Courts Dedicated

A formal dedication of the new lighting installation at the Faxon Park tennis courts was to be held Wednesday night at Faxon Park, South Quincy. Mayor Walter J. Hannon was to throw the switch at 7 p.m. illuminating the four most recently installed tennis courts in the city. Construction of the courts and installation of the lighting completes an extensive refurbishing and installation of new facilities at Faxon Park.

The Mayor, in 1973, presented a major park program of $100,000 in improvements to Faxon Park and waterfront acquisition of land in Squaw Rock, Squantum, Germantown and Mound St. Beach, Quincy Point. Faxon Park and Squaw Rock have been completed, Germantown is in the final acquisition stages and the Mound Street Beach land purchase is being formulated.

The City Council approved the program and the funds to accomplish the improvements and acquisition.

Total cost of lighting was $11,658. Cost of the four tennis courts installed was $45,064.30, the fence enclosing the tennis courts $5,125., construction of the little league or softball diamond $14,820 and resurfacing of the complete roadway and picnic area $23,245. Cost for material to install new water facilities and bubblers was $1,500.

Hannon Proclaims 'National Guard Recruiting Week'

Mayor Walter J. Hannon in cooperation with Major General Vahan Vartanian, Adjutant General of Massachusetts has designated the week of Oct. 20-26 as "National Guard Recruiting Week" in Quincy.

Hannon said he views the opportunities offered by the Guard as twofold: in training and as a source of supplemental income.

The Mayor pledged the cooperation of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act [CETA] staff in this major recruitment effort. Information will be made available to all applicants applying for positions under CETA.

Plans were outlined at a conference with Mayor Hannon, Paul Ricca, CETA Director, and Lt. Col. Anthony J. Aprile, Recruiting Officer and Capt. Brian F. Sullivan, Race Relations/Equal Opportunity Officer.

General Vartanian expressed his appreciation for Mayor Hannon's support and said, "The Mayor and his city staff are making an outstanding contribution in bringing our message to the men and women in the City of Quincy."

Conservation Commission Opposes Squantum 'Wetland' Construction

The Quincy Conservation Commission has passed a unanimous resolve declaring itself opposed to any construction which would "significantly encroach" upon the marshland in the city's new Squantum section.

The Commission issued the resolve "in accordance with its responsibility to protect and preserve the viable marshland remaining in the City."

Clara Yeomans, executive secretary of the Commission, said the commission is "taking no stand on the building of a school at this time." She said:

"It is our responsibility to watch over the wetlands."

Bible Study, Breakfast Sunday At Point Congregational

Weymouth Rotary Club 'Big Band' Night Nov. 1

The era of the "Big Bands" returns for an evening Nov. 1, at the Surf Nantasket.

The Weymouth Rotary Club will present for the 10th year the 15-piece band of John Savini playing the sounds of the big bands of the 1930's and 1940's. Proceeds will go to the club's community projects, college loan and scholarship programs. The Savini orchestra is comprised of many musicians who formerly played with the big bands, some have recently returned from tour with some of the better known bands, and some who teach.

Local men well known in this area include:

Al Anthony of Whitman who played sax and arranged for Al Donohue, Shep Fields, Gene Krupa, Stan Kenton, Buddy Moreno and Tommy Dorsey; Bob Shurtleif of South Weymouth who played drums with Tony Pastor and Buddy Morrow; Ted Casher on alto sax, familiar to Music Circus goes as one of the "pit" men there, also played with Woody Herman and Ray McKinley.

The orchestra plays original arrangements of Tommy Dorsey, Duke Ellington, Glenn Miller, Artie Shaw, Stan Kenton, Harry James, Benny Goodman and Les Brown, just as they were played at the Totem Pole, The Glenn Island Casino, Frank Dailey's Meadowbrook. Admission price is $5 per person.

Edward T. Dwyer, II is club president. Richard C. Clifford is Ways and Means Chairman.

TV MAILBAG

'Night Stalker' has lot of stories

By RICK ROBERTS
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — The TV mailbag:

Q. "The Night Stalker" is one of my favorite new shows this year. Isn't there any danger of them running out of monsters? Also can you give me some information on Darren McGavin and Simon Oakland? — G.B., Los Angeles.

A. The new drama series, based on the made-for-TV movie of the same title, should have plenty of stories for the near future.

Officials from ABC say the stories will be not only about monsters, but also about the bizarre and supernatural.

McGavin stars in the title role of reporter Carl Kolchak who seems to have a penchant for running into the eerie stories featured in the show.

McGavin is a native of Spokane, Wash. He attended high school in the San Francisco area and later went to the College of the Pacific, where he first became involved with acting.

His first television series was as private eye Mike Hammer, the detective created by Mickey Spillane.

Other television series McGavin has been featured in include "Riverboat" and "The Outsider." He has also made numerous guest appearances on television shows and has made several television films.

Oakland appears in the television show as Kolchak's managing editor, Tony Vincenzo.

He has appeared in more than 1,000 television segments.

His first regular role in a television series was as Inspector Spooner, in "Toma," last year.

Oakland is a native of New York City where he was a musical prodigy and gave violin concerts as a teen-ager.

After World War II he returned to New York City and appeared in several Broadway productions and eventually began appearing in movies.

Q. How long will the "Bicentennial Minutes" be shown on television? — J.P., San Diego, Calif.

A. The "Bicentennial Minutes," which premiered last July 4, are produced by the CBS network and are related to the founding of the country. They will be shown continuously through July 4, 1976.

Several television and movie personalities, as well as officials will serve as narrators for the segments.

Information given on the "Bicentennial Minutes" directly corresponds with an event on that date 200 years earlier.

Q. My teen-age boys "dig" the rock shows on Friday night. Unless these shows are on, they are unbearable to live with. Can we expect more of these shows this year? — J.R., Joliet, Ill.

A. In addition to any locally shown rock concerts, with ABC network has as part of its "Wide World" series its weekly feature "In Concert."

MBTA Court Hearing

Cerasoli said the covering of the old wording and the reprinting of the new wording over it would save money and would therefore be the first-choice course of action to be argued in court.

However, if such a move is prohibited by law, Cerasoli said he would advocate the reprinting of the entire First Norfolk District ballots. The district covers all of Ward 2, Precincts 1, 2, 5 of Ward 3 and two precincts in North Weymouth and would involve the reprinting of approximately 8,700 ballots.

In his complaint Cerasoli also requested the court to halt the distribution of the First Norfolk District election ballots received by the city of Quincy last week.

Cerasoli said he was not contacted by the attorney general's office to ask the intent of the public policy question. He said he wanted to appear at the February federal hearing on the proposed South Quincy station to "present the hearing with a mandate from the people and represent their view."

Now, Cerasoli fears that the intent of the referendum may be misconstrued. He said:

"Now it is easy for officials at the hearing to say, 'Did the people vote against the building of a South Quincy station or did they vote against the passage of a bill requiring the MBTA to construct a rapid transit station in South Quincy?'"

They All Agree On RCA XL-100.

"The true, natural color of the new black matrix picture tube is really fine. Even I was amazed, and I own the store. Own an XL-100, too."

Pete & Remo

"If all my customers owned an XL-100, I'd have to start looking for a new line of work. It's 100% solid state and nearly maintenance-free."

Don Taglieri and Allan Haas

* More TV program directors, TV station chief engineers, senior TV cameramen and independent TV service technicians own RCA than any other color TV. Don't settle for less for your family!

Lovelace

A Pair of Romantic Rings
As Perfectly Matched
As You and Yours

If you want a ring that's truly romantic—to reflect your ideas of love and marriage . . . different from the one your mother chose, or even your sister's . . . Lovelace was created for you. What could be more romantic than 14-karat gold woven into fine lace?

The engagement ring a circle of lacy gold, fragile-looking but sturdy, surmounted by a single perfect stone . . . one-fifth, one-quarter, one-third or one-carat diamond. The wedding ring a perfectly matched band. And the wider man's wedding band has a romantic ruggedness that's sure to appeal to him. $295.

WE CAN HELP YOU CHANGE YOUR WHEELS.

Supposing you fell in love with a new car on Hancock Street, on the 18th or 19th. And you have this sudden urge for a loan of $3,000. If you come in and ask us on the 21st, we should be able to hand you your money on the 22nd along with a free portable safety reflector. And, we'll only charge you as little as $14.23 a month interest on the loan.*

And after 30,000 miles or so, you can always come back and ask us for a little extra money...to help you change the tires.

Yes, you can call us in advance at 472-0025. We're now ready to help you at any of our four offices, including our new loan office at 1374 Hancock Street in Quincy Center. We'll be there to help. And we do.

*Based on annual percentage rate of 10% for 36 months, at $90.80 per month, total repayment $3484.80

Streamlining Government

City Launches Drive To Cut Municipal Costs

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

The city took a major step this week on a new economy campaign designed to cut operating costs and to streamline municipal government at the same time.

The campaign seeks to introduce each city department, one to another, in order to increase interdepartmental cooperation and efficiency, including mutual use of equipment and other facilities.

The idea for such a campaign sprouted during a brainstorming conference held Sept. 18-19 when city officials and department heads met with Mayor Walter J. Hannon at his summer home in Kennebunkport, Me. A total of 140 recommendations were offered and the economy campaign was only one of them.

Representatives from all city departments attended the Monday meeting.

Mayor Hannon commented on Monday's session:

"The program was good. People got something out of it and learned things about the School Department they hadn't known before. We hope to find out where one department can help out the other and streamline costs of government, if we can."

The Quincy School Department was the first to introduce itself to other city departments. The all-day session took place Monday at Francis W. Parker School on Billings Rd. Superintendent of Schools Dr. Lawrence Creodon admitted that the matter of introducing a well-known department to city is indeed "a ticklish problem."

"They know us," said Dr. Creodon, "and yet they don't know us."

Dr. Creodon explained that the School Department is equipped with vast technological capabilities of which other city departments could take advantage.

For example, he said that the Honeywell 200 Data Processing computer housed in Quincy Vocational Technical School

Despite Odor Rust Colored Water All Right To Drink

Quincy residents will be experiencing a change in color, taste and smell of their drinking water due to the temporary use of water from the Sudbury Reservoir System and the Spot Pond Reservoir in Medford.

A section of the City Tunnel normally providing water for sections of Quincy has been shut down due to a phase of construction on the 10-foot, $20,000,000 Dorchester Tunnel. Quincy is now receiving its water from two other reservoirs.

Health Commissioner Dr. Alfred Mahoney emphasized that the rust-colored water "is fit to drink and to use." He said that residents can expect to experience the water change from two to four weeks.

Owen Eaton, Superintendent of Quincy's Water Division, said the water being piped in from the other reservoirs has "an earthy smell and taste." He said, however, that Quincy is "constantly testing" its water and the quality is "excellent". Eaton said:

"Quincy water is such pure water that people notice any change right away. They should go to the communities not served by the MDC and taste that water!"

The MDC reports that the project's contractor is working "24 hours per day" on the removal of the tunnel plug, the insertion of necessary valves and the finalization of the project scheduled for completion around Dec. 1, 1974.

Pleads Innocent To 9 Counts Famigletti Has 20 Days To File Pleas, Motions In Cemetery Case

Former Cemetery Supt. Anthony Famigletti pleaded innocent in Norfolk Superior Court Tuesday to nine charges stemming from alleged irregularities within the Quincy Cemetery Department.

Arraigned before Judge August C. Taveira, Famigletti was released in $100 personal recognizance. No continuance date was set but Famigletti's attorney Morris Goldings has 20 days from the date of the arraignment to file special pleas or motions.

Famigletti pleaded innocent to the following charges:

- Larceny over $100 at Quincy, Dec. 20, 1971.

- Larceny under $100 at Quincy, July 15, 1972.

- Two counts of conflict-of-interests, one at Quincy, July 15, 1972, the other at Quincy, Oct. 8, 1973 when Famigletti allegedly "did solicit and accept money for himself otherwise than provided by law."

- Two counts of removing a tomb, one at Quincy, Sept. 27, 1973, the other at Quincy, March 17, 1973.

- Removing memorial structures at Quincy, Sept. 29, 1973.

- Removing a gravestone at Quincy, March 17, 1973.

- Falsely making an instrument [a document] at Quincy, Aug. 31, 1973.

The arraignment confirmed a report in last week's Quincy Sun that only one person had been secretly indicted by the Norfolk County grand jury.

The case months ago caused a furor in Quincy as accusations and speculation spread widely throughout the city with innuendoes that a number of persons were involved in irregularities in the cemetery department.

The case was probed by Special Investigator J. Blake Thaxter, former assistant district attorney from Cohasset. He was appointed by Dist. Atty. George G. Burke following nomination by the Norfolk County Bar Association.

Winning Heritage Contest Slogan To Become Auto Bumper Sticker

The winning slogan in the $1,500 Quincy Heritage contests co-sponsored by the Quincy Savings Bank and The Quincy Sun will become an auto bumper sticker.

Thus, the winner will not only receive the top prize of $300 in that category but his or her entry will receive national attention, too.

"Wherever cars from Quincy go, the slogan will be seen and read," said Rev. John R. Graham, executive director of Quincy Heritage.

He said the slogan will be used for a bumper sticker to be made available early in 1975 as part of Quincy's celebration of its own 350th birthday and the nation's Bicentennial.

In addition to the slogan contest, the Quincy Savings Bank and The Quincy Sun are also co-sponsoring a poster contest.

The theme of both contests is "Quincy's Pride: Patriots, Presidents and Possibilities."

Entries for both contests are beginning to stream in. Deadline for submitting entries for either or both contests is Nov. 30.

You may enter either or both contests as often as you like. The only restriction is that you must be a resident of Quincy. Both contests are open to all ages.

If you are thinking of entering, now's the time to start putting the words together for your slogan or trying out your skill with pen and ink.

For each contest there is a

Veterans' Day Parade Monday

Several thousand people are expected to march Monday [Oct. 28] in the annual Veterans' Day Parade honoring Quincy veterans of all wars.

The three division parade, sponsored by the Quincy Veterans Council, will begin at 10:30 a.m. in the Ross Parkingway and will proceed down School and Hancock Sts. to Adams Academy.

Former Mayor and Senator James R. McIntyre, now state senate counsel, will be the main speaker at ceremonies at the academy building.

Council Commander William Ash, will be chief marshal and Thomas Hurlbeaus Sr., vice-commander of the council, and Joseph McDonough, junior vice-commander, will be his aides.

Also heading the parade will be aide de camps Walter Johnson, finance officer, Albert J. McKinnon, chaplain, Roger Whitcomb, public relations officer, James Lynch, historian, and Lawrence Carnali, graves officer.

Included in the parade's lead division will also be the Holbrook High School Band, Paul W. O'Neill, adjutant and past commander, Chairman John M. Gillis and staff, Mayor Walter J. Hannon and national, state and city officials.

Rev. Frank Bauer, pastor of Wollaston Lutheran Church, will deliver the invocation with Rev.

Broad Meadows Open House

Broad Meadows Junior High School will hold an open house next week as part of American Education Week.

Principal David P. Tenney has invited all parents to visit the school Thursday, Oct. 31, Friday, Nov. 1 and Monday, Nov. 4, from 9 to 11 a.m.

Student guides will be available to take parents on tours of the building and the school's administrators and counselors will meet with parents.

Interested parents may visit classes of the teaching teams.

John Adams Honored, Heritage Ceremonies Oct.30

Ceremonies honoring the 239th anniversary of the birth of John Adams will be combined with the official opening of Quincy Heritage's Visitor Information Center from 9:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. Oct. 30 on the steps of historic First Parish Church.

The event will begin at 9:30 a.m. with the playing of patriotic songs by members of the bands at Quincy High School and North Quincy High School. The bands will be joined by students in the choral group at Atlantic Junior High School under the direction of Mrs. Marion Clancy.

The North Quincy High School Band, under the direction of David Watson, will play "God Bless America", "U.S. Field Artillery March", and "Grand Old Flag".

The Quincy High School Band, under the direction of Michael Cahill, will play "Star Spangled Banner", "Declaration of Independence", and "Procession of Nobles".

Free coffee and pastries will be available to the public in front of City Hall. The coffee and pastry will be provided through the courtesy of the school system's Culinary Arts Department, headed by Edward Repucci.

Members of the Quincy Women's Club Juniors and their children will serve the coffee and pastries while dressed in colonial-style costumes.

At approximately 9:45, the Air Force Junior R.O.T.C. color guard from Quincy High School will be led by Lt. Col. Arthur E. Allen onto the steps of the First Parish Church. They will be joined by a naval color guard and Sea Cadets color guard.

A 12-man contingent of the Charlestown Militia, led by Captain James O'Neil of Charlestown, will also be stationed at the church. The five and drum section of the Militia will conclude the musical part of the pre-program ceremony with selections from 9:50 to 10 a.m.

The welcome to the ceremonies and introduction of dignitaries will be provided by Rev. John R. Graham, executive director of Quincy Heritage; the city's organization for its 350th birthday in 1975 and the nation's Bicentennial in 1976.

The official American Revolution Bicentennial flags will be carried by track-team members in the Quincy Public Schools to each of the 21 elementary, five junior highs, two high schools, vocational-technical school, and Quincy Junior College for simultaneous flag-raising. City Council President Arthur H. Tobin will present the ARBA flags to each of the school representatives.

This is an Ad for the Granite Co-Operative Bank, North Quincy and Quincy Center. This message is for you, the average person. We have the best savings plan in Massachusetts for people who have as little as $100 to invest and don't care to risk even a penny.

This plan isn't new but is certainly worth reminding you about. It's got a fancy name: Paid Up Shares, but you won't have to find a stock broker to buy them. You see us...and then you'll own a piece of our bank. We're a co-operative bank and that allows us to offer these shares.

Here's what many people have done for years, and what we hope you'll do. Walk into either of our banks. Ask the teller to give you paid-up shares [one for each $100]. What you'll get is a bank book. Each $100 in the book means you own one share in our bank. Every month we send you a check as a dividend...computed at 5% per year. Keep the money here and we keep sending you checks. And, if you want, we can deposit the dividend in a regular savings account [which earns more interest] and buy you another share when you've got $100 accumulated. The best part of this whole deal is you get your money back from us just by asking for it. You get it right then. Then there is no notice.

If you'd like more information on our simple world of finance just call us. We're always happy to have you make a good investment in our bank.

Cerasoli To 'Educate' Voters On MBTA Referendum

Robert Cerasoli, Democratic candidate for state representative, says he will knock on doors in the First Norfolk District to educate the voters on the rephrasing of the South Quincy MBTA referendum question.

He is taking this action after losing a court fight to have the ballot question rephrased.

Cerasoli had filed a formal complaint Oct. 11 in Norfolk Superior Court charging that the attorney general's office had rewritten the original public policy question, making it "confusing and unclear". Judge Henry W. Lean then granted a court hearing on short order of notice.

But last Friday, Cerasoli lost the court battle to re-word the referendum. Judge Lean, after hearing the case and taking it "under advisement" - a move which Cerasoli said made him hopeful of a favorable decision - denied a motion by Cerasoli's attorney Daniel G. Raymondi requesting a preliminary injunction to re-word the approximately 10,000 ballots already printed. Judge Lean issued no explanatory opinion with his decision.

Yet through his planned education campaign, Cerasoli hopes to explain to the people "that a change has been made by the attorney general's office." Opposed to the building of a South Quincy station, Cerasoli emphasized, nonetheless, that he will not merely urge people to vote 'no' on the question.

"I intend to go out and educate the people on the issue," he said. "If a person is in favor of the building of the station, I will tell him or her to vote 'yes'. If the person is opposed, I will tell him or her to vote 'no'...I want to let the people make their own decision."

The public policy question will appear on the November ballots in the following form:

"Shall the representative from this district be instructed to vote in favor of the passage of a bill requiring the Mass. Bay Transportation Authority [MBTA] to construct a rapid transit station in South Quincy?"

Cerasoli, fearing that the intent of the referendum might be misconstrued by officials at the February federal hearing on the proposed station, had urged in his complaint that the court require the attorney general and the secretary of state to redraft the rewritten public policy question to read as follows:

"Shall the Representative of this district be instructed to support the construction of a Rapid Transit Station in South Quincy by the Mass. Bay Transportation Authority [MBTA]?"

Speaking of the phraseology which will appear on the ballots, Cerasoli said:

"I still feel that the question is confusing and the wording unclear. This is another time when an executive agency has taken away the people's right to vote on a question affecting their local area."

"People are going to have to read the question at least two times. The two wordings don't mean the same thing. People are not familiar with legislation - with 'the bill requiring the MBTA to construct a rapid transit station' - simply because the legislation hasn't been written."

"The purpose of a ballot question has been defeated and the only valid way of getting public sentiment on the issue is to knock on doors."

Stop snacking and diet

By PAT and
MARILYN DAVIS
Copley News Service

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

I am at least 20 pounds overweight. I eat a well-balanced diet but am inclined to snack. If I am looking at television, I enjoy a salami sandwich, potato chips, and some cheese. I find this a relaxing way to spend the evening. It is not as if I don't have a lot of will power because I do. But I cannot see depriving myself of my favorite foods.

All of this is presenting a problem. My husband says I must take off the extra pounds. He doesn't understand that I gain easily and would really have to diet. Again, I repeat I DO HAVE WILL POWER so that isn't the problem. Do you have a suggestion?

Harriet

Dear Harriet:

I am sure you have a lot of will power because you haven't used any of it! Stop the snacking and make an appointment with your family doctor. He can give you a reducing diet, then it is up to you to put all that will power you have been saving to work.

Remember that dieting is no mystery. It's common sense and counting calories. Don't be too discouraged. It took time to put on those extra pounds and it will take time to take them off.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

For several months one of the women in my office has been trying to match me up with her daughter. She has been suggesting that I come to her home to meet Sue, has brought pictures of this girl to the office, and has stressed Sue's good points. I think I know more about this girl than she knows about herself.

However, I am leery of becoming involved when the mother is so anxious. There must be something wrong with this gal or she would be getting her own dates. I am not hard up for dates and dislike taking a chance. How can I handle this situation in a tactful manner?

Cornered

Dear Cornered:

Have you heard anything from Sue? She probably is no more eager for a blind date than you are. Tell this overly anxious mother that you are booked solid. Period.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

My folks are really burned. I went to a party and didn't get home until 2 a.m. Mom and Dad are furious. My curfew is 12:30. I am 14 and old enough to use some judgment. How can I get Dad off my back?

Joe

Dear Joe:

Arriving home an hour and a half late is NOT a way to convince me that you are showing good judgment. Why be so inconsiderate of your parents? Have they ever picked you up an hour or so late after a football game or any type of social function?

Next time try dialing the phone and keeping the home front informed if you are unavoidably detained. That way your judgment will be showing.

Artificial sweeteners dangerous to infants

In view of the sugar shortage in England, mothers have been warned against using artificial sweeteners or sugar substitutes in infant foods or formulas.

Chemicals like sorbitol and mannitol used in some of the sweeteners may cause diarrhea or dehydration in small infants, especially if the mothers overestimate the need for sweeteners and add too much. — CNS

Forget tennis — ruffles too

By ANN RUDY
Copley News Service

Tennis may be good for circulatory systems, but it can play havoc with mental health.

Feelings of inferiority, guilt and impending doom are all part of the game. At least they are if you are not Billie Jean King.

I'll never forget the first time I stepped onto a tennis court — my husband had urged me to learn the game and offered to teach me. That alone was emotional dynamite, but what did I know five years ago?

I went out that afternoon and bought an adorable little one-piece skirt outfit and pair of ruffled pants to play in. Just wait until he sees me lean over to pick up the ball, I thought.

But I hadn't counted on him taking the game so seriously. The first time I missed the ball and bent over fetchingly to retrieve it, my husband took no notice of my ruffles at all.

Instead, he snarled, "Run up on the ball! Run up on the ball! Don't stand there and wait for it to bounce past you!"

"OK, OK, ..." I said and felt my first pang of anxiety. But not my last. Apparently, he wanted me to really play.

I planted my feet, newly encased in white tennis shoes, firmly apart and went into a half-crouch. I narrowed my eyes, the better to see the ball, and tried to remember the time I had caught the high, pop fly for my eighth-grade baseball team to win the Redwood City Junior High pennant.

You can do it, girl, I told myself, and shot an arm out to return his high-speed ball. The force knocked the racket out of my hand.

Holding my shoulder, I looked across the net. He was smiling now, but it was a Vincent Price smile — just before he strangles the helpless heroine. "You're carrying your weight all wrong," he began. "Let's stick to tennis," I retorted, and leaned over to pick up a ball I'd dropped on purpose, just in case. But it was no use. He wanted me to be Billie Jean King.

We had a few more volleys — verbally — and, all in all, it was the most loveless love game I ever played.

Finally, he said if I didn't improve he'd give up on me entirely, and I quickly accepted his threat. I've never regretted it. I don't feel inferior anymore now, but I'm still struggling with guilt over the $25 I spent on the tennis dress and those $12 ruffled pants I never get to show.

My recovery has been slow, both on and off the court.

The Kitchen Almanac

When preparing fresh pineapple — after slicing off the outside layer, use a strawberry huller to remove the "little brown eyes" that remain in the fruit. . . . Check the label to see if meat should be "cooked before eating." Don't assume that it is fully cooked.

Brussels sprouts are low in calories and provide a large amount of vitamin C as well as other vitamins and minerals. . . . Add chopped, ripe olives and minced onion to mayonnaise or salad dressing before mixing with eggs for egg salad.

Speedy dessert ideas: Roll balls of your favorite ice cream in corn flakes. Serve with chocolate sauce. . . . Keep a cake in your freezer for unexpected entertaining.

A thin white sauce is usually preferred with starchy vegetables such as peas and lima beans; a medium white sauce with other vegetables.

From the "we're all in this together" dept. — Does industry respond to national crises and consumer needs? Engineers at KitchenAid have developed Energy Saver dishwashers. A push of a button keeps the 1100-watt air heater off during the drying cycle — saving about 50% of the electricity normally used. (A fan remains on to circulate air and speed drying.)

SCORPIO: (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21 — Also Scorpio Ascendant) — You are under pressure to perform now. Let the gentle side of your nature out and resist authoritative attitudes. Read all documents and contracts carefully before signing — a legal opinion may be advisable.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21 — Also Sagittarius Ascendant) — You are receiving attention on a career level and possibly some additional responsibility. An increase in salary will be forthcoming. Success in matters dealing with writing, advertising, publications.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19 — Also Capricorn Ascendant) — Accent on business, with need for finishing up projects in process. Results of this activity appear very favorable. The pace is hectic and your nerves could suffer if you're not careful. Caution in transit.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18 — Also Aquarius Ascendant) — You must make every effort to curb your temper and guard against combative, aggressive attitudes and acts. Impulse could lead you into very negative results. Check residence for accident hazards. Drive defensively.

PISCES: (Feb. 19 to March 20 — Also Pisces Ascendant) — Finances may get an unexpected boost. Something worked on in the past could pay off now. Areas of publishing, writing, legal affairs appear active. Control your emotions and consider your intuitions logically.

More girls are smoking

Though the rest of the population has cut back on cigarette smoking, according to Dr. Luther Terry, former U.S. surgeon general, it has increased among girls between the ages of 12 and 17. Fifteen years ago the incidence of smoking girls was only one-tenth that of boys the same age, Terry says. — CNS

YOUR HANDWRITING TELLS She's worried that the romance is gone

By DOROTHY ST. JOHN JACKSON

Dear Dorothy:

Nine years ago I married to belong somewhere. My husband is a good provider, a hard worker and very solicitous of my needs. He carries a lot of insurance for my benefit, in case of his death, and I can always trust him regardless of where he is or what he's doing. I just don't see the nice little things about him anymore. He used to be so loving, always something nice to say, a little fit, now and then, to let me know he cared. Now, after these 9 years, I'm beginning to wonder what has become of the man I married.

Dear G.H.:

Your husband just doesn't feel that, after he's caught his heart's desire, he has to keep on chasing it!

With the lack of pressure, your forward slant, and upswing endings on your words, you feel that the honeymoon should go on forever! Your husband's devotion to his work, to your needs and well being, after nine years, still provides you with no substitute for arduous love. Love to you is an emotional thing! To your husband, it is an established fact!

The small loop on capital I teases and torments you! It keeps your 'green eyes' snapping when his attentions are channeled in other directions! If you say you trust him ... then, do it!

Your husband may not be the lavish lover he once seemed to be, but he's protecting you from your feminine fears. And, if he's true to his work, and to you, he's giving you plenty of "living" insurance! He's insuring you against a rainy day, against a hard cold world, and the "scratchy" pitfalls of everyday life!

Seems like that's the kind of love you should appreciate, the kind that gives you closeness ... with strength!

EUROPE TOUGH ON DRUNKS

Although the drunk driver kills some 25,000 people annually on American highways, our penalties are extremely mild and convictions equally low compared to the havoc sewn.

This is not so in foreign countries. Finland, for instance, jails a person caught driving with any detectable trace of alcohol in his blood. Even with no accident involved, he faces up to five months in prison. In Bulgaria, a driver faces a minimum of ten years imprisonment if he causes death with ANY alcohol in his system. Norway and Sweden both allow alcohol concentrations of .05, but beyond that, watch out...you automatically go to jail. This is about half the allowable rate in this country.

Are these stringent laws effective? They must be! The highway death rate in Sweden, for instance, is half that of the United States.

Market Report

Food Shopper's Hot Line To Expand

The busiest telephone in the Commonwealth right now seems to be the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture's newly-installed Food Shopper's Hot Line, the MDA reports.

The toll-free number has been ringing without let-up, proving the concept even: more popular than expected.

As originally installed, the unit can handle 20 calls per hour. Additional lines are in the process of being put in to handle the volume.

The number - called without charge from anywhere in Massachusetts - is 1-800-392-6026. If you're totally frustrated, however, you can call the MDA Division of Markets at (617) 727-3018. This is a regular line, not toll-free.

The Hot Line is a permanent installation, operating 24 hours a day. It carries a three-minute message - recorded bi-weekly, on Monday and Thursday mornings - containing current retail best food buys, as well as nutritional, menu and recipe suggestions. It was instituted by the MDA in a further effort to help fight inflation, and keep families well and properly fed.

Since it is a public service, says the MDA, special requests and suggestions are invited. A note addressed to "Hot Line", Massachusetts Department of Agriculture, 100 Cambridge St., Boston 02202, with comments and suggestions will be welcomed.

Recipes using current best buys are suggested on the Hot Line, but not detailed. Requests for recipes will be filled promptly if you send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the above address.

You can spread your food dollar further by stocking up on some of the more easily stored produce now, says the MDA. If you have a cool, dry place to keep dry vegetables, this is a good time to lay in 50 pounds of native potatoes or some of the smaller, hard-shell squashes, or a 20-pound bag of onions. A visit to a roadside farm stand this week-end should help.

Root crops such as parsnips and carrots can be left in the ground through the winter, notes the MDA. Cover the plot with about 12 inches of leaves or hay - hold the mulch down with a couple of boards - then dig them up in the spring.

Heritage Awarded $9,200 For Cemetery Restoration

Quincy Heritage has been awarded $9,200 by the executive office of educational affairs for the continuation of the Heritage restoration project at Hancock Cemetery, announces Senator Arthur H. Tobin.

Tobin said he has been notified by Secretary of Educational Affairs Joseph M. Cronin and the Massachusetts Bicentennial Commission that the Quincy Heritage project will be "a valuable and interesting way to celebrate our Bicentennial."

The grant will allow Quincy Heritage to complete restoration work begun at the Hancock Cemetery last summer, Tobin said.

This phase of the program calls for "gridding" the cemetery, mapping of burial plots and studies of the histories of families buried there. Gridding involves dividing the cemetery into small sections in order to accurately determine locations of gravesites.

Some 50 high school students will be working on the project under the direction of North Quincy High School anthropology teacher Richard Riley. The students will be provided through the Neighborhood Youth Corps and the Quincy Youth Commission and will be compensated for their work.

In accepting the grant, Quincy Heritage executive director Rev. John R. Graham said the Hancock Cemetery restoration project will be a major contribution to the city's celebration of its 350th anniversary in 1975 and the nation's Bicentennial in 1976.

Rev. Graham views the beautification of the 330-year-old cemetery as an "ideal project" for involving the youth of the city with the value and process of historic preservation while providing them with needed jobs.

Present Economy Makes New NQHS Questionable, Says Joyce Baker

At a reception at the home of Mrs. Alden Shores, 107 Winthrop Ave., Wollaston, Joyce I. Baker, candidate for state representative in the Fourth Norfolk District, discussed some of the problems confronting a new political candidate.

She pointed out the obvious advantages of an incumbent who has the opportunity to vote for popular legislation and to publicize these votes at election time.

In response to questions regarding the proposed new North Quincy High School, she said:

"An $18 million dollar new facility is certainly questionable in light of the present economy, serious inflation, and, most important, declining school enrollment and the voters of Quincy should have the opportunity to decide on such an important issue."

She questioned if all alternatives have been thoroughly explored, such as alternate sites, expansion within the present area of North Quincy High on the opposite side of Hancock St. Mrs. Baker expressed concern "that the voters of Quincy would be exploited for political purposes and ambitions." She said she has found in calling on over 3,000 homes, — a growing disillusionment among voters in Quincy because they feel their wishes are not being considered on major changes in the city.

In response to direct questions concerning busing, Mrs. Baker again stated her position: "Busing is not a solution to quality education, the primary concern is quality education for all children. The recent scare tactics of Boston politicians about busing throughout the suburbs only aggravates the problem."

In the area of welfare reform, Mrs. Baker strongly feels that young able-bodied single adults should be denied benefits. "It is a disgrace to see healthy young people frittering away their time secure in the knowledge they can always go to welfare for a handout."

Mrs. Baker was questioned on fiscal responsibility, one of her campaign themes. She said: "The current legislature has been totally fiscally irresponsible; time and time again the current legislature has either passed unnecessary bills costing the taxpayers millions of dollars or has voted down legislation that would have cut spending."

Mrs. Baker cited voter indifference as a result of distrust and disappointment toward politicians in general.

"This", she said, "is an alarming indication of a breakdown in our political system and one that cannot be allowed to continue. The United States still has the best system of government and none has been proven better. We must all work toward preserving our democratic process."

"Individuals must become involved in their government, both city, state and federal and one of the best methods is by personal communication with their elected officials. We cannot elect representatives and then forget them or let them forget us until the next election. The lines of communication must be kept open."

She pledged, if elected, to have bi-monthly meetings with her constituents in order to achieve this purpose.

Why pay into a tax escrow? Our Tax Savings Club pays interest.

Putting money aside to pay real estate taxes is quite convenient.

But it's not so convenient when you don't receive interest.

If you are now paying into a tax escrow, you may be eligible to transfer to our Tax Savings Club.

If you are not required to pay into a tax escrow account, you'll still find our Tax Savings Club a profitable and convenient method of preparing for your semi-annual tax payments.

Our Tax Savings Club operates just like a Christmas Club. It requires regular payments in an amount sufficient to pay your real estate tax when it is due.

You'll find our new system of tax savings to be the most convenient, efficient and profitable alternative to non-interest paying escrow. Call us for details.

O'Neill Would Use 'Rapport' To Obtain Federal Funds For Mass.

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

Thomas P. O'Neill, III, running mate of Michael Dukakis, has pledged to use his "rapport" with Congressional officials in trying to obtain federal funds for Massachusetts.

The son of House Majority Leader Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill, Jr., O'Neill in a visit to the Quincy Sun said:

"I have a rapport not only with my father but with Michael Harrington, Jerry Studs and John Moakley. If we have a relationship there, we'll use it to the benefit of the people statewide."

Furthermore, O'Neill wants to "redefine and expand" the office of lieutenant governor to include a role as "the people's advocate between Capitol Hill and Beacon Hill." He noted that many communities are unaware of the federal funding actually available to them and believes that he, as lieutenant governor, could pursue federal funding for the state.

A graduate of St. John's High School (now North Cambridge High School) and Boston College, O'Neill was elected to the Mass. Legislature in 1968 and served a four-year term. He was named "Outstanding Man of America" in 1973 and was nominated as one of 10 Outstanding Young Men in Greater Boston in 1974. He also worked as a stockbroker with Harris, Upham and Co.

O'Neill feels that his experience as a legislator and as a businessman can bolster the Democratic ticket.

"I know the legislative process," he said. "I'm in tune with the people's whims and wishes. As a ticket, Mike and I have pinpointed problem areas and have started to work on solutions. We don't align our policies before the primary, but we were talking about the same issues. The semantics were different but the approach was the same."

O'Neill reports that on the campaign trail the peoples' response to the Dukakis-O'Neill ticket has been "great" - from Democrats and Republicans alike.

THOMAS P. O'NEILL III

"There is enough decaying there in the Republican party, to gain their vote," he said. "They've totally had it. They're not getting the representation they deserve and they are looking elsewhere."

"Mike knows what has to be done. He showed that during the first debate. He was on top of the issues. Mike demonstrates the type of leadership the people are looking for. He'd be a breath of fresh air for the state."

Dukakis has proposed an alternative plan to forced busing, a plan which would establish de-centralized community control of Boston schools. Sometime during the school day, students would be bused to "resource centers" such as museums and zoos.

"It's a start to an approach," said O'Neill. "Mike is the only one who has come up with a viable alternative."

Polls now show the Dukakis-O'Neill ticket in the lead, yet O'Neill has not grown complacent.

"I won't be shocked if we drop one or two points in the polls," he said. "But remember, polls don't vote. We've got a lot of work to do and we're taking nothing for granted."

GOP Needs Miracle

By WENDELL WOODMAN

BOSTON - That cloud hovering over the Republican Party heading into the final days of the campaign is the prospect of annihilation.

Gov. Francis W. Sargent, for reasons that are not too complicated, seems unable to close the gap in his bid for reelection, and unless he can score a first-class miracle between now and Nov. 5, he is likely to take the remnants of the Republican Party down the drain with him.

The point spread in the gubernatorial race based on public opinion surveys suggests that Democratic nominee Michael S. Dukakis will defeat Sargent by a margin in the neighborhood of 400,000 votes.

If that poll is anywhere near accurate, holding the election is only a constitutionally-required waste of time and money. The only question to be resolved on Nov. 5 is whether any Republicans seeking major office can survive a massive Democratic landslide.

In his pre-primary war with the Republican State Committee, the Governor was banking on the illusion of a nomination that would appear to be a non-partisan show of strength. The problem is that he carried that impression a little too far.

He neglected to take into account the fact that while the standard bearer of the party can score a plurality great enough to drag his team mates into office with him, it is conversely true that candidates for lesser offices supply the grass roots for getting that vote to the polls in the first place.

The Governor's problem in overcoming his deficit and closing the gap with Dukakis derives from his failure to enlist an army to help him.

There are five fights for state-wide constitutional office, and the Republicans are conceding two of them to the Democrats. Viewed another

"The worst sin towards our fellow creatures is not to hate them, but to be indifferent to them: that's the essence of inhumanity."

-George Bernard Shaw

way, there are two Republicans who could be traveling the state in the Governor's behalf who aren't there. That is the Governor's fault.

The Democrats have candidates for all 12 Congressional seats, but the Republicans have candidates for only half of them.

The Democrats are contesting all eight seats on the Executive Council. The Republicans are contesting only two.

In the Senate, the Democrats are conceding only four of the 40 seats to Republican incumbents. The Republicans are forfeiting 24 seats to the Democrats.

Of the 240 seats in the House, the Democrats are conceding 22 to the opposition, while the Republicans are forfeiting 132.

There are 10 contests for district attorney. The Democrats are letting one go uncontested. The Republicans are forfeiting seven.

In 12 fights for county commissioner, the Democrats are conceding one, and the Republicans, six.

In the 14 contests for Sheriff, the Democrats are letting four go without fights, and the Republicans are conceding six.

There are seven additional county office vacancies on the line. The Democrats are forfeiting one and the Republicans, two.

Now we come to the summary of Mr. Sargent's handicap in closing the gap on Mr. Dukakis:

There are 348 fights to be decided on Nov. 5. The Democrats are donating 33 of them (9%) to the Republicans. The Republicans are forfeiting 191 of them (55%) to the Democrats, including more than half the seats in both the House and Senate.

So there are 191 ardent campaigners who have absolutely no reason to get out the Republican vote in the constituencies they don't seek to represent.

And that is why Mr. Sargent will have to rely on a miracle to close the gap on the standard bearer of a Democratic Party that at least made an effort.

The extraordinary number of Independents seeking election this year supplies the impetus for getting out the Democratic vote in dozens of fights the Republicans are not contesting. That will not accrue to the Governor's advantage, and it mitigates against his ability to inch in on the projected lead held by Dukakis.

If Dukakis were to defeat Sargent by any margin upwards of 300,000 votes, we can expect an unprecedented Democratic landslide. As a practical matter, the Democrats will capture every constitutional office handily.

A margin like that would probably mean the defeat of two of the three Republicans now sitting in Congress. We could speculate that Silvio Conte of Pittsfield could hold the First District for the GOP against his Democratic challenger, Thomas R. Manning, but only because Conte is intrinsically strong in his territory.

But Republicans Paul Cronin and Margaret Heckler would have a hard time surviving such a landslide, and when we get to the legislative contests that are being contested, the possibilities are horrifying.

Gov. Sargent's dilemma is one he brought upon himself. He was so busy, busy, busy crucifying those shrill, narrow partisans in the Republican Party, he forgot to put any of them on the ballot to help him.

Some people would call that poetic justice.

Some people would call it stupid.

Opposes 'Mini Parks'

Editor, Quincy Sun:

Your issue of July 3, 1974 had a front page article headed, "$60,000 Start - Mini Parks for Downtown Area Improvement".

This week's issue, three months later, informs us that the cost is now $91,000. Of this latest Quincy "goodie", namely an "outdoor living room" planned by City Development Coordinator, [what an impressive title!] John Cheney, I quote him, "so that people can sit on the benches and read in the evening". I hope it will be heated for these poor souls!

In the short space of 3 months, what made the cost of this "goodie" increase 50%? Surely, we do not have that kind of inflation!

Well, as a taxpayer, may I go on record as being opposed to any more of these expensive "mini parks". This is a waste of the taxpayer's money. Please City Hall, have mercy on us!

North Quincy Students Visit Hancock Bank

Six students from Paul Stanton's Contemporary Issues class at North, visited the Hancock Bank under the auspices of Project LINC, recently.

The students were studying the effects of inflation on local banks. They viewed all the operations of the main bank and spoke to Sal Spinoso, a bank vice president, who told them that commercial banks were less effected by loss of funds due to high interest rates, than were savings banks. People were less inclined to take funds out, because of the many services which commercial banks offered which savings banks could not, he said.

Students who visited the bank were John Pennella, Mike Riggins, Joseph Wilkinson, Peter De Gennaro, Earl Rudkin and Paul Duddy.

United Way South Division At 7% Mark

The South division in the United Way of Massachusetts Bay campaign has reached seven per cent of its goal of $222,500, according to a report given at the first luncheon meeting at the Statler Hilton, Boston.

South division chairman Atty. Terry Flukes of Quincy, assistant clerk of Norfolk superior court in Dedham, said that of the 21 towns represented in the south area, from Franklin to Scituate, the town of Hull is leading the division with 42.6 per cent of its goal.

Flukes also reported that once again residents of 1000 Southern Artery, under the leadership of Mrs. Doris Breadmore, have contributed generously to the United Way drive this year in the amount of over $700. This is an increase of better than $300 over last year's contribution, Flukes said.

The campaign so far has raised $5,274,922 or 33 per cent of its goal of $16,000,000, which is 18 per cent more than had been raised at this time last year.

William C. Mercer, president of New England Telephone Company and the 1974 United Way of Massachusetts Bay campaign chairman said: "This is a significant achievement."

Asks Review Of Service

Harrington Asks Delay In Closing Of Squantum Branch Library

City Councillor Dennis E. Harrington is "greatly concerned" by the plan to close the Squantum Branch Library.

He has asked Director of Libraries Warren Watson, and Mayor Walter J. Hannon to delay the closing and the Squantum Branch be kept open while library service to the area is reviewed.

Harrington acknowledged that Watson plans not to discontinue library service to the area, but instead to substitute service via the Bookmobile. Harrington believed that if Bookmobile service to the Squantum area is to be experimented with, the branch should remain open during a trial-period evaluation of the substitute service.

Harrington said the evaluation should be made by area residents. He said he hopes residents will be allowed input into any decision as to what service best suits Squantum and that they will be allowed to transmit their ideas and suggestions to the department through him.

Harrington said he plans to attend the Nov. 4 meeting of the Library Board and speak on the issue. He said he welcomes the opinions of residents on the planned closing so that he may represent the view of the area to the Library Board.

Seniors Housing Social Programs In 4th Year

The fourth year of social service programs in Quincy's senior public housing is now underway notes Putnam S. Borden, executive director of the Quincy Council on Aging.

"The city, under the administrations of Mayor Walter Hannon and former Mayor James McIntyre, has been a leader in providing needed services to our senior residents," Borden said.

The social service program was initiated by the Council on Aging and the Quincy Housing Authority in 1971 to aid senior residents in adjusting to congregating living. Three positions were funded through the Federal Emergency Employment Program. Today, three years later, two of the original incumbents, Frank Kennedy and Mrs. Bella Krovitz, continue to play an important role in the daily lives of the elderly, living at Oceanview and Pagnano Towers," Borden said.

"Providing a variety of needed services, many times outside normal working hours, Mr. Kennedy and Mrs. Krovitz have been instrumental in bringing health care programs to their buildings, in aiding the tenants associations to effectively represent their memberships, in providing recreational activities, as well as helping new tenants to adjust to their changed living arrangements and responding to emergencies, whenever they are needed," Borden said.

Candidates Present Views On Issues For Nov.5 Election

The 13 Quincy area and Norfolk County candidates in the Nov. 5 state election have been given the opportunity to speak out on issues through a questionnaire compiled by the League of Women Voters of Quincy.

The public service project was carried out under the direction of Mrs. Janet Poole, League President, and Mrs. Christina Morrison, Voter Services Chairman.

Assisting them were committee members Mrs. Alicia Coletti, Mrs. Patricia Toland, Mrs. Sheila deBettencourt, Mrs. Anne Kane, and Mrs. Elinor Thompson.

In addition to background information, the candidates [except those for Norfolk County district attorney and commissioner] were asked three questions each not to exceed 150 words in total.

The two candidates for district attorney and county commissioner, both running unopposed, were asked two questions each but allowed 150 words.

Following are the replies:

SHERIFF: One in county. Salary: $19,890. Elected for a six-year term. Has responsibility for general administration and supervision of the county jail and the county house of correction, [the jail holds those awaiting trial, and the house of correction holds those sentenced to terms of not more than two years]. Attends all sessions of court held in the county. Responsible for serving civil and criminal processes. Has power to appoint deputies.

• Sheriff

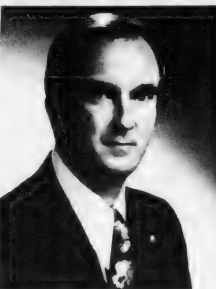

Question 1: [a] What measures do you consider most important in rehabilitating offenders in order to prevent further criminal behavior after release?

[b] What follow up is necessary after release to determine the effectiveness of the rehabilitative measures employed?

2 - Would you please discuss your position on hand gun control?

probation officer oversees their activities.

Answer 2: This appears to be a matter of legislation. We simply carry out the laws enacted by the General Court.

CLIFFORD H. MARSHALL, 64 Edison St., Quincy, Democrat. Age: 36. Occupation: State representative.

Answer 1: [a] Provide meaningful educational and vocational opportunities and programs by certified personnel that meet the needs of the individual inmates through sound classification and analysis, and an alliance with Norfolk County Business Labor and Industry seeking to expand employment opportunities for offenders.

[b] Provide a post-release program to assist in job opportunities, counseling services, job marts and periodical evaluations of the individual's progress through the cooperation of community agencies.

Answer 2: Co-author of the Legislation which bans the use of handguns known as "Saturday Night Specials". Supports a mandatory one-year prison sentence for persons illegally carrying and transporting concealed hand guns.

CHARLES W. HEDGES, 41 Village Ave., Dedham, incumbent. Republican. Age: 73. Occupation: Sheriff.

Answer 1: [a] All offenders must be properly classified and then directed to any of the diversified programs available in his category. A trained staff augmented by professional assistance and competent volunteers enable offenders to take advantage of the varied, optional programs available.

Every inmate except sex offenders and those with warrants lodged against them is eligible to apply for the work release program. Many former inmates are still employed in positions obtained while on the work release program.

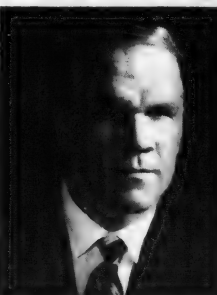

The earned furlough program is important in relieving tensions by enabling inmates to take care of personal affairs.

[b] Our own resource and referral agent follows up inmates on the work release program unless they are on parole. Then the parole officer supervises them until the elapsed date. On occasion, inmates are released on probation for a specified period of time. There again the

• District Attorney

Question 1: What measures would you support to speed up the court docket?

2 - Approximately 85 per cent of court cases in Massachusetts are plea bargained and never come to trial. Many people feel this practice short-circuits justice. Can plea bargaining be made fairer and more visible in order to eliminate this feeling?

GEORGE G. BURKE, 174 Warren Ave., Quincy, incumbent. Democrat. Age: 42. Occupation: Attorney.

[UNOPPOSED]

Answer 1: I have initiated many new procedures in administration and technique; and, as a result, thereof, we have the lowest backlog of cases for a major court in the State of Massachusetts. I do believe that we need new courthouses here in Massachusetts as the present ones are inadequate and ill equipped to handle a modern trial. We also need additional courtrooms and more judges.

Answer 2: It is unfortunate that we have plea bargaining; but, in many ways, it ends up not being an advantage to the defendant. If we provide the tools enumerated in number one, we could go to trial on every case, and any defendants pleading guilty could do so at the time of trial. In Massachusetts, the judge of the court is not included in the plea bargaining, while in other states the judge is required to Elected for a four-year term.

Have charge of county property and management of county business. Have charge of erection and repair of court houses, jails and other public buildings within and for the use of the county. • County

Commissioner

Question 1: Since the individual citizen supports the county through his property tax, how could he have more control over the spending of his money?

2 - How can county government be made to operate more efficiently?

THOMAS K. McMANUS, 20 Shattuck Park Rd, Norwood, incumbent. Democrat. Age: 49. Occupation: Attorney.

[UNOPPOSED]

Answer 1: A newly created County Advisory Board means that each community will have a representative to review the County budget. Norfolk County presently enjoys the lowest per capita tax of any County in the Commonwealth. I strongly recommend that a County Legislature be created which would govern County functions to maintain as much local control as possible.

Answer 2: Full time public defenders have saved the taxpayer hundreds of thousands of dollars. Among others the Registry of Deeds operates in the black and the County Hospital has been able to maintain an equal balance between expenses and income received. The total assessment against any one community is approximately one per cent of the total assessment so a taxpayer assessed $1,500 would pay only $15 to the county. It is my opinion that if the State MBTA, Welfare, and Federal Governments were able to operate as efficiently, the taxpayers would be in a much better financial position.

Quincy's Share Of County Tax $1,013,312

The tax levied on the communities of Norfolk County amounts to $9,366,763.94 for the fiscal year 1974-1975.

Quincy's share of that amount is $1,013,312.93 which means that Quincy pays 10.8 per cent of the total county tax. This amount represents 2 1/2 percent of its real estate and personal property tax.

Quincy received from the county $180,000 which represents court fines, chapter 90 Highway Funds and dog license refunds.

In addition to this money, the city receives the services of the county hospital, the registry of deeds, the house of correction, the courts and the agricultural school.

THE GREAT AND GENERAL COURT: 40 Senators, 240 representatives in 240 districts.
Salary: $12,688 plus travel and subsistence [$2 to $32 per day] $1,200 expenses.

Elected for a two-year term.

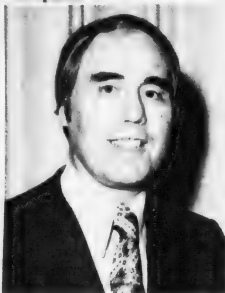

The Senate and the House of Representatives make up the General Court and are the lawmaking body of the Commonwealth. The General Court enacts laws dealing with such matters as state appropriations and finance, public welfare, taxation, conservation, public works, housing and education. A bill may originate in either house. Bills passed by one house may be amended in the other.

● State Senator Norfolk District

Question 1: If ballot question No. 4 passes, how would you propose using Massachusetts Highway Fund monies?

2 - If new tax revenue is needed in 1975, what tax measures would you support?

3 - What measures would you support to improve the process by which judges are selected and disciplined?

ARTHUR H. TOBIN, 58 Huntly Rd., Quincy, incumbent. Democrat. Age: 44. Occupation: Attorney.

[UNOPPOSED]

Answer 1: Allocate a major portion for Massachusetts transportation to [a] offset increase in capital costs, [b] provide matching funds for Federal grants, [c] apportion a sum to offset deficit assessment in cities and town within the MBTA district.

Answer 2: At the present time there is serious debate among fiscal experts as to whether new taxes are needed. When the time comes for that decision to be made, I would consider the means that would have the least effect on the average person and wage earner in the state because of inflation and economic pressures.

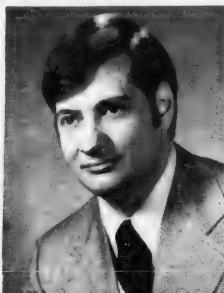

Answer 3: I would favor a screening committee composed of average citizens in the community to make recommendations to the Governor using "best qualified" as a guide, and have the committee look for qualities in the individual of compassion and judicial temperament in rendering justice.

● State Representative First Norfolk

Question 1 - If ballot question No. 4 passes, how would you propose using Massachusetts Highway Fund monies?

2 - If new tax revenue is needed in 1975, what tax measures would you support?

3 - What measures would you support to improve the process by which judges are selected and disciplined?

ROBERT A. CERASOLI, 21 Whiton Ave., Quincy, Democrat. Age: 27. Occupation: Legislative assistant.

Answer 1: I oppose this proposed amendment to the Constitution. It appears that the only possible source of money for mass transportation would be from the Highway Debt Service Fund. This money has already been committed over the next three years.

Consequently, any use of this money for mass transportation purposes must come from an increase in the gas tax or an increase in bond authorization. Either method means increases in taxes. Because of the state's poor financial posture and the constant monetary assaults on the taxpayer, I do not want to think of new ways to spend the people's money.

Answer 2: I am opposed to any legislation to raise additional taxes. The time is NOW to restore fiscal sanity and accountability in government. I favor a freeze on non-essential capital expenditures. There should be a ceiling on spending and the state legislature should force state agencies to live within the fiscal budget if we are to anticipate tax reductions.

Answer 3: Obviously, the present system does not work well enough!

SUMNER H. GIVEN, 41 Sea St., Weymouth, Republican. Age: 47. Occupation: Electrical contractor.

Answer 1: In periods of time when highway construction is lax or slack, I would approve of limited use of highway funds to stimulate patronage of rapid transit by commuters, but not for major transit construction.

Answer 2: I would support no new or additional taxes for two years. I believe some fiscal economy measures must be met that will cut the fat out of the state budget.

Answer 3: [a] Create a Judicial Qualification Committee, composed of judges from the Supreme Judicial Court, Members of the Mass. Bar Association, and members of the bar appointed by the governor.

[b] Judges who violate the laws of the State should be dismissed and then be investigated and prosecuted like any other citizen of the state.

Second Norfolk

THOMAS H. BROWNELL, 14 Moreland Rd., Quincy, incumbent. Democrat. Age: 34. Occupation: Attorney.

[UNOPPOSED]

Answer 1: I would propose that the state use the millions of dollars of state highway funds to enable the state to pick up to 80% of the deficiency for the operation of the MBTA. The property tax payers of the City of Quincy and the other cities and towns of the MBTA district have shouldered the major burden of mass transportation long enough. I also would like to see some of this money channeled to help fight local crime in the streets and improve local roads and street lighting.

Answer 2: Per capita Massachusetts residents are one of the highest taxed in the nation. Consequently, I will not be supporting any new tax measures in the near future. Before we can even think of new taxes, I believe we must change our state's incredibly unfair tax system which places most of the cost of government on low and moderate income groups through regressive sales, property, and flat-rate income taxes.

Answer 3: To improve the judge selection process, I would propose that each County in our state be provided with an independent judicial nominating committee to seek out, screen and recommend highly qualified individuals to the Governor for judicial appointment.

Third Norfolk

JOSEPH E. BRETT, 254 Fenno St., Quincy, incumbent. Democrat. Age: 67. Occupation: State representative.

Answer 1: I sincerely hope that Ballot Question No. 4 does not receive the approval of the voters on Nov. 5. The Massachusetts Highway Fund was established for the sole purpose of providing adequate, better, and safer highways in Massachusetts and its sole source of income is from the gasoline taxes paid by motor vehicle operators. When a motorist uses public transportation, he pays for it the same as anyone else. There is no sound reason why he should be forced to pay for another's transportation in addition.

Answer 2: If proper controls of state spending are instituted by the executive and legislative branches of our state government, there will be no need of additional taxes. On the contrary, if wasteful and unproductive expenditures by the state would be eliminated, as they should, our taxes could be reduced, not increased.

Answer 3: The appointment of judges by the governor should be subject to approval by a separate body such as the Governor's Council or a special commission comprised of legislators and private citizens.

JENS E. THORNTON, 14 Orchard St., Quincy. Republican. [No reply received].

Referendum Questions Explanation In Capsule Form

Voters will find six referendum questions-seven if you live in the First Norfolk District-on the Nov. 5 state election ballot.

To help make the reading and understanding of them easier for you, the League of Women Voters of Quincy has condensed the meaning of each question into capsule form:

Question 1

A proposed amendment to the Massachusetts Constitution which would permit the state legislature to recess sessions for up to 30 days. Presently such recesses can only be called during the first 60 days of a session.

Question 2

A proposal to reduce the size of the Massachusetts House of Representatives from its present 240 members to 160. The cut, if approved, would go into effect with the legislature that takes office in January, 1979. It provides also for a state census in 1975 and every 10 years thereafter. [The LWV favors this.]

Question 3

A proposed Constitutional amendment which would permit the Commonwealth to offer grants to private colleges and universities or to students or parents of students attending those institutions. It would remove the prohibition against use of public money for grants to private colleges.

Question 4

A proposal to permit the expenditure of money from the highway fund for mass transportation. It does not commit any specified amount of money for mass transit, it simply removes the ban against using highway trust funds for this purpose. [The LWV favors this.]

Question 5

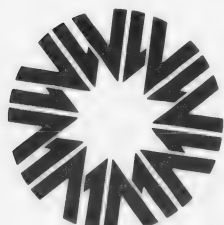

A proposed statute to place further restrictions upon campaign fund-raising and spending practices in Massachusetts. It would create a five-member Corrupt Practices Commission.

Question 6

An advisory question seeking the opinion of voters on creating a Department of Health Systems Regulation.

First Norfolk Question

Voters in the First Norfolk District which includes all of Ward 2, Precincts 1, 2 and 5 of Ward 3 and two precincts in North Weymouth will also find on their ballots an additional question to register their support or opposition to the construction of an MBTA station in South Quincy.

Fourth Norfolk

WILLIAM D. DELAHUNT, 43
Myopia Rd., Quincy, incumbent
Democrat. Age: 32. Occupation:
Attorney.

Answer 1: I would favor use of these monies from the highway fund to improve our mass transit system. In addition some portion of the fund should be utilized to reduce the MBTA deficit.

Answer 2: No new tax revenue is needed if the next governor instructs the various department heads to reduce their budget requests of the previous fiscal year by a flat percentage rate such as 2-3%. This would force state agencies to scrutinize their budgets and streamline their programs.

Answer 3: A judicial commission, comprised of attorneys and people from the community, should be established in every county in the state. Members of the commission shall receive no remuneration, and the majority of the commission should be non-lawyers. In regards to the selection of judges, the commission should make three recommendations to the governor from which he would nominate one for a judicial vacancy within that county. The commission would also replace the bar association grievance committee as a means of disciplining judges.

Massachusetts Bar Association to include a Supreme Court and Superior Court judge and 5 bar members. Candidates would be ranked by merit and the Governor would select "is choice from the top 3 candidates."

HERBERT REPUCCI, 62
Shirley St., Quincy.
Independent. Age: 59.
Occupation: Self-employed.

Answer 1: Upon the passage of Question 4, I would like to see the available funds used in two ways: First, I believe that a minimum of 50 percent be used to offset the MBTA deficit. In this way, local property taxes would be lowered. Secondly, the remaining funds should be used to upgrade and expand rapid transit service. The Red Line should be extended further into the South Shore. I will continue to oppose any attempt to use these funds to pay for a South Quincy Station, which is not only unwanted but will also be obsolete within five years.

Answer 2: I will oppose any and all attempts to raise taxes in 1975. If the state operates at a deficit, then the state budget should be cut in order to balance the books.

Answer 3: Judges should be recommended and disciplined by an independent panel of ABA, Community and Law School representatives and the Governor who should continue to appoint.

Referendum Questions To Be Explained At League Night Oct.30

The League of Women Voters of Quincy will sponsor "an evening with questions"—those on the Nov. 5 ballot—Wednesday, Oct. 30 at 7:30 p.m. at the Adams Shore Library, Sea and Palmer Sts.

The League believes that often the ballot questions are overshadowed by interest in the candidates for state-wide office. Thus on Oct. 30, members of the League of Women Voters hope to bring the ballot questions out of the shadows and into the spotlight featuring interesting speakers with different viewpoints.

Mrs. Christina Morrison, Voter Service Chairman for the League of Women Voters, will be the chairman.

Speakers will include:

- Senator Arthur H. Tobin will explain Question 1 which would allow the state legislature to recess sessions for up to 30 days.

• Elinor Thompson will discuss the League's support of Question 2 which would reduce the size of the House of Representatives from the present 240 members to 160. She is the League House Cut Chairwoman.

• Joseph Gibbons, Dean of Students at Curry College, will discuss Question 3, a proposed Constitutional amendment to permit Massachusetts to offer grants to private colleges, universities and students attending.

• Former Mayor-Senator James McIntyre, present Senate Counsel, will speak in favor of Question 4 which would permit the expenditure of money from the highway fund for mass transportation.

• Rep. Thomas Brownell of Quincy and Peter Keys of Common Cause will discuss Question 5 which would place further restrictions on campaign fund-raising and spending.

• Daniel Driscoll, Quincy Planning Dept., will speak in favor and Rep. Michael Flaherty, vice-chairman of the Legislature's Social Welfare Committee will speak against Question 6. The question seeks the opinion of the voters on creating a Department of Health Systems Regulation.

All voters are urged to attend. Refreshments will be served during a question and answer period.

JOYCE I. BAKER, 162 Warren Ave., Quincy, Republican. Age: 46. Occupation: Accountant.

Answer 1: Highway Fund Monies should be used to improve public transportation in the four major metropolitan areas which would include surrounding towns. Public transportation is a prime necessity for workers traveling to and from employment. Safe efficient public transportation is our best solution to a serious pollution and energy problem.

Answer 2: I am appalled at the current budget and rate of state spending and would not vote for new taxes unless vital services were involved. I would legislate for more efficient use of lottery monies as our administrative costs are excessive compared with other states. This results from patronage and inefficiency. If additional tax sources become inevitable I would favor a more equitable graduated income tax which could stabilize real-estate taxes.

Answer 3: I would support legislation requiring the Governor to submit a list of judgeship candidates to a review board appointed by the

10,000 Extra Copies Of This Section Being Distributed By Pupils

Ten thousand extra copies of this Quincy Sun Special Election pullout section are going to school and then to homes of voters.

The copies will be distributed to public and private elementary school pupils to bring home to their parents to acquaint them with the candidates seeking office and referendum questions in the Nov. 5 state election.

This is a public service project by the League of Women Voters of Quincy, the Quincy public school system and The Quincy Sun.

Cost of the questionnaires to which the candidates were invited to reply, was financed by the Education Fund of the League of Women Voters. The fund is comprised of contributions from Quincy residents.

The Quincy Sun is making the 10,000 extra copies of the four-page pullout section available to the League of Women Voters at a nominal cost as a public service.

For Good Government

LWV Studies And Takes Stand On Many Civic Issues

The League of Women Voters studies governmental issues which are proposed, adopted, studied and acted upon by its members.

The League operates on three levels - national, state and local. Every member of the LWV of Quincy is automatically a member of the LWV of Massachusetts and the LWV of the United States.

On the national level, leagues across the country have studied and supported legislation for human resources, welfare, land use, campaign financing, reapportionment and foreign economic policy among others.

On the state level, leagues in Massachusetts have studied fiscal policy, environmental quality, public education, birth control and abortion, the judicial system, structure of state government and handgun control.

In Quincy, the League of Women Voters supported an expansion of the code enforcement program and supports both the North Quincy and Quincy Point Improvement Projects as worthwhile efforts to upgrade housing in Quincy.

The acquisition of Black's Creek for open space was due mainly to a long hard campaign by the League's Human Resources chairman Anne Kane when most city officials feared that a court battle over the land valuation might bankrupt the city.

Anne Kane used the facts about the acquisition of the land in Scollay Square by the city of Boston to refute this assumption.

The effort to implement the state law mandating a hot lunch program in the elementary schools began for the League in August 1970 in Germantown. The program now is being introduced into the Quincy schools this fall.

The League completed a study of the Quincy School system last year which among other things supported more emphasis on basics in the curriculum, more teacher aides and guidance in the elementary schools and improved communication between home and school.

In addition to its support of open space in the Black's Creek area, the League has supported acquisition of open space on Quarry St. and Freedom Park on Upland Rd.

The Quincy League supports the recycling bins at the dump and hopes to intensify its efforts in this area in the future.

The League has studied transportation on both a city and state level and as a result is now supporting Question 4 on the ballot which would free the highway fund money for public transportation.

The Quincy League is now in the second year of a study of health care in the city examining how well the city hospital serves its clients.

The League also maintains an Observer Corps which attends city council and school committee meetings. They are now in the process of compiling a booklet which would give the citizen information concerning the various boards in the city, their members, duties and meeting times.

Lastly, the League under the direction of its voter service chairman compiles a questionnaire seeking the candidates views on important issues.

The response to the questionnaire is printed in a special voter information section in The Quincy Sun and 10,000 extra copies are distributed throughout the elementary schools in the city.

This project is financed by the contributions of citizens of Quincy who believe that government can be made to work for its citizens if citizens can be made to work for good government.

Call The Voter Information Phone

For information about your government, and it is your government, please give us a call at 357-5880 between the hours of 10 and 2.

We'll try to answer your questions about items of concern such as registration and voting, names of officials, Massachusetts laws, the taxes you pay, our courts, what happens to a bill you're interested in, etc.

The Voter Information Phone is the first in a series of programs planned by the League of Women Voters of Massachusetts to honor Lotte E. Scharfman who died in 1970 while serving as president of the Massachusetts League. Funds given in her memory started this program.

Another of the Fund's Involvement Projects is a course teaching the Three P's, Politics, Parties, Participation. The turnaround in Massachusetts transportation policies because of citizen involvement at all levels of government was used as a prime example of how people change policy. Courses of this type were given to the employees of the New England Life Insurance Co., New England Merchants National Bank, and State Street Bank and Trust Co.

City In Economy, Streamlining Drive To Cut Municipal Costs

operates on-line at less than one-third of its technological capacity.

"This computer could be doing more city-services said Dr. Creedon, "if the city departments could staff it. We have the technology but are lacking the personnel."

Robert. Waywood, School Information Officer, noted that the Water Department's 46,000 water bills will be processed through the school department's computer, switching from a Salem Company which will save time and money. Waywood added that both the city auditor's office and the city clerk's office could also benefit from the available computer services in compiling tax bills and voter registration lists, respectively.

During the meeting - most of which took the format of an open discussion - the School Department also offered its printing services to other city departments. The Police Department noted that the School Department provides 50 per cent of its printing services such as ticket books and police forms.

Other school services available to city departments include the use of library and media facilities such as slides, projectors and overhead screens. In addition, the Council on Aging and Quincy City Hospital could take advantage of the Support and Service Center offering food facilities at the old Lincoln-Hancock School. The Graphics Department could also create cover designs for pamphlets and brochures.

Dr. Creedon said, too, that departments should co-ordinate the purchasing of paper materials, floor wax, light bulbs and other supplies in order to attain these materials at a uniform and low cost. Under the present purchasing policy, Dr. Creedon noted that departments are purchasing the same product at differing price. Communication, cooperation and planning could alleviate such cost variances.

The School Department's 1974-1975 gross budget totals $24,155,509 with $932,927 allotted to Quincy Junior College and $176,186 designated for the athletic department.

State reimbursement will be in excess of $6 million, according to Dr. Creedon.

Last year's budget totaled $20.3 million with $7.7 in revenue receipts. Steven Moynihan, administrative assistant, business affairs, said of that $7.7 million, $4.8 helped to reduce costs for the taxpayer.

In November, the Department of Public Works will introduce itself to the other city departments. A definite date has not yet been scheduled.

Education Week

Open House, Reception At Wollaston School

The Wollaston School will observe National Education Week with an Open House Tuesday, Oct. 29, from 1 to 3 p.m.

When parents have completed their classroom visits, the Wollaston School PTA is inviting them to meet new principal, Dr. Douglas MacDonald, at an informal reception in the Media Center.

Elected officers of the Wollaston School PTA for the 1974-75 season are:

President, Joan Forde; first vice-president, Leona Doherty; second vice president, Margarita Stearns; treasurer, Eleanor Haley; corresponding secretary, Cynthia Gurwitch; recording secretary, Kathleen McKenna.

Cake sale chairman, Janet Corrigan; hospitality chairmen, Terry Dempsey and Ann Greene; room mothers' chairman, Susan McKeon; publicity chairman, Margarita Stearns; family festival chairman, Joseph Greene.

Four open meetings are planned during the school year, with the first to be scheduled early in November. Interested friends as well as parents are invited to participate.

Central Holds 80th Reunion

Quincy's Central Junior High School will hold a reunion Wednesday, Oct. 30 to celebrate the school's 80th anniversary.

All former pupils, faculty members and parents are invited to attend an evening of reminiscing and festivity.

Central Junior High served as Quincy High School in 1894-1924 and has served as a junior high ever since.

Displays will be set up featuring old issues of the Quincy High Goldenrod and the Central Citizen. Any former Centralite having pictures or yearbooks which they would share can contact Central Junior High School Principal Vincent R. Moscardelli.

George Gay Attends Engineering Meeting

A Wollaston educator recently attended the two-day meeting of New England Section of American Society for Engineering Education at Lowell Technological Institute.

George Gay of 31 Piermont St., a faculty member at Wentworth Institute, attended the conference. ASEE, which has 13,000 members, is a professional organization dedicated to the interests and accomplishments of engineering technology educators.

City Receives $4,500 Grant

The city of Quincy has been awarded a $4,500 grant from the National Endowment For The Arts.

Congressman James A. Burke said the funds will be used to assist the city's Department of Planning and Community Development in preparing design standards for the city.

Funds will also help to educate and stimulate property owner's awareness of the importance of good design in the two historic districts as well as other parts of the city, Burke said.

Annual Meeting Tonight

Wollaston Park Association To Discuss Issues, Elect Officers

Wollaston Park Association, Inc. will discuss current Quincy problems and elect officers for the 1974-1975 year at their annual meeting tonight [Thursday] at 7:30 p.m. at Quincy YMCA, Coddington St., Quincy.

The agenda includes a discussion of the future of Wollaston Beach and the role of the association in representing residents' wishes "to keep Wollaston Beach a good and wholesome recreational area."

The association will also discuss the proposed building of a new North Quincy High School at the old Squantum Naval Air Base, a petition for a 10-story height limit in unlimited-height zones, the city's soaring tax rate and methods to lower city spending.

Also slated for discussion is the proposed rezoning of upper Fenno St., from multi-family Residence C to Residence A. The association will report, too, on last year's activities.

Finally, officers for the current year will be elected.

'Probation After Death'

The Bible Lesson in the Christian Science Quarterly for this week is entitled "Probation After Death" and will be heard on Sunday as the Lesson-Sermon at First Church of Christ, Scientist, 20 Greenleaf St., Quincy.

Scriptural selections include Psalms 23: 1, 2, 4 "The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; He leadeth me beside the still waters. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for Thou art with me; Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me."

The third annual Festival of Choirs will be held at Bethany Congregational Church, Quincy, Sunday Nov. 17. All church choirs are invited to participate.

The festival is not planned as a competition but rather as an opportunity for all church singers in the area to enjoy a sociable and inspiring day of music. Junior as well as adult choirs are welcomed.

Each choir may sing one or two selections of their own choosing and then will join the massed choirs in the following selections:

"The Old Hundred Psalm Tune", by Vaughn Williams; "Alleluia", by William Boyce; "Come, Come Ye Saints", arranged by J. Spencer Corneali; "Salvation is Created", by Tschesnokoff; and "Divine Praise", by Bortniansky.

Conductor of the massed choirs will be Miss Edith Roberts, music director of the Heritage Methodist Church, Braintree and a member of the faculty of the South Shore Conservatory of Music, Hingham.

The rehearsal of the massed choirs will begin at 4 P.M. on the Sunday of the concert followed by an hour for robing, refreshments, and fellowship. The concert, open to the public, will begin at 7 P.M.

Choir directors interested in participating may contact the chairman of the Music Committee at Bethany Congregational Church, Mrs. John Krasinski.

Mission-Renewal Program At St. Joseph's

Rev. Dominic Papa, C.P. of the Passionist Monastery, West Springfield, will conduct a Mission-Renewal program at St. Joseph's Church, Quincy Point from Monday through Friday

Oct. 28 - Nov. 1.

Services will be at 9 a.m. and 7:30 p.m.

The year 1975 is a holy year in the church and this Mission-Renewal is a spiritual preparation for the holy year.

Fr. Papa, a well known mission preacher, has just finished a term as the rector of St. Michael's Monastery in Union City, N.J.

William Neil President Quincy Point Church Homes

The corporations of Quincy Point Congregational Church Homes, Inc. and 1000 Southern Artery Senior Citizens Center, Inc. recently elected new officers.

They are: William N. Neil, president; Lindsay L. Tait, vice-president; Irving D. Potter Jr., treasurer; Donald P. Black, clerk and Paul N. Baharian, assistant clerk.

The same officers serve both corporations except that Baharian is the Center's clerk and Black is the Center's assistant clerk. Terms last one year.

In addition, Wayne Parlee was elected a trustee, filling the unexpired term of the late Everett Besse. Edward M. Joyce and Ronald Cebik were also elected trustees, bringing the total number of trustees to 13.

■ Life styles change. Traditions and customs change. So does funeral service. Today, no two funerals are alike, because no two families are alike. Today a competent funeral director must provide a broader spectrum of services than ever before. It's a challenge. Funeral directors affiliated with National Selected Morticians meet this challenge with a wide selection in a broad range of prices so each family may choose what best meets its needs. As members of NSM in this area, we helped bring it about. We believe in matching the service to the need. It helps make us someone to count on, every time.

Red Hot Raiders Hosts To Tough Newton

CHRIS MORTON halts a Weymouth South drive early in third period action at Veterans Memorial Stadium. No. 41 is Frank Strazzula.

NORTH QUINCY'S Paul Doherty gets off punt in final period.

By TOM SULLIVAN

All the marbles are now on the table for the North Quincy football team as it concentrates on going for the championship in its first season of Suburban League play.

Ralph Frazier's Raiders last week put their four non-league games behind them and Saturday at Quincy Veterans Memorial Stadium face a strong Newton team in their second league game.

A come-from-behind 29-12 win over Weymouth South last week hiked North's record to 4-1 but it is only 1-0 in league play with a win over Weymouth North. Its only loss was in a non-league opener to Milton, 8-6.

Newton comes into the stadium following a convincing 22-6 win last week over Quincy to make its record 3-2. It is only 1-2 in the league, however.

Following non-league wins over Framingham North, 21-0, and Medford, 15-0, it was bombed by Brockton, 40-7, and upset by Weymouth North, 13-12.

Joe Kelly's winless Weymouth South team threw a scare into North Quincy as it took a 12-0 lead and held it until the final seconds of the third period. A 22-point final period settled things for the Raiders.

"They certainly did throw a scare into us," Frazier admitted. "This Weymouth South team is better than most people think and they did a great job for three periods. Penalties hurt us a lot in the first half but I'm not trying to take anything away from them, they played a real fine game."

Frazier praised halfback Brian Doherty for his usual strong running game. He gained 112 yards, the first time in four games, he has gone under 120. The North coach also had glowing words for quarterback Mike Meehan, who threw two touchdown passes to Cooper Jordan and also picked up fine yardage with two screen passes, one to Doherty and another to Mark Reale. He also lauded Jordan for his performance.

"Our defense wasn't nearly as sharp as in previous games, especially in the first half," Frazier added. "Steve Lothrop had another good game defensively and picked a fumble off in midair to set up a touchdown. Tom Callahan also had a had a fine day at defensive end. Jack Hatfield set up another touchdown with a fine 40-yard punt return.

"I saw films of the Newton-Quincy game and this is a very strong Newton team. We will have to do better than this if we hope to win."

An early North drive was halted by a penalty and in the second period Ken Dorrell galloped 70 yards to five Weymouth a 6-0 lead.

In the third period Steve Isbicki hit Joe Brown with a 20-yard scoring play to make it 12-0.

Late in the period North scored on a 25-yard pass play from Meehan to Jordan and Paul Doherty kicked the point.

The final period was all North Quincy.

Meehan hit Jordan again with a touchdown pass covering 10 yards and Brian Doherty rushed for the points which put North ahead, 15-12.

Doherty followed up Hatfield's long punt return with a 25-yard touchdown run and Paul Doherty again kicked the point.

The final touchdown, set up by Lothrop's midair fumble clutch, was scored by Rich Marino from the one and Doherty kicked his third straight conversion.

Broadmeadows Looks Like Team To Beat

Broadmeadows looks like the team to beat in the Junior High soccer league.

But defending champion Atlantic-North, Central and Sterling, which had won four straight championships until unseated last year, still have a chance.

BM after last week's games [The games scheduled for Wednesday were postponed until Nov. 4], had a 4-1 record, followed closely by A-N, 3-1-1.

In the latest games BM blanked North-Atlantic, 2-0, on goals by John Connolly and Bill Norton, and Central defeated winless Point, 3-0, on two goals by Peter Bourikas and one by George Bourikas.

In the previous set of games A-N edged Point, 2-1, as Cooney and Peter Martin scored for the winners and Randy Nord for Point. Sterling topped Central,

2-0, on goals by Steve McDonald and Peter DiCenzo.

Norton led the league scoring with six points, followed by Peter Bourikas with five, DiCenzo with three and Mike Colon of Atlantic-North and Connolly with two each. Thirteen players had one goal each.

Panthers Defeat Elks

The Quincy Point Panthers defeated the Quincy Elks, 14-6, in sudden death overtime Sunday in the Quincy Youth Football League.

Ron Ricciarelli scored the Panthers' first touchdown on a 75-yard kickoff return with less than a minute to play to force the game into overtime.

In the sudden death period the Panthers held the Elks for four downs inside their own 10-yard line. John Bradley, Jack Donovan and Mike Trubiano made the key defensive plays to keep the Elks off the board.

The Panthers took the ball and Ricciarelli scored his second touchdown behind the blocking of Bob Roberts and Bill Bonvie to give the Panthers the win.

Other outstanding players for the Panthers were Steve Cacciatore, Ron Cross and Jim Hatfield.

The Panthers will return to action Sunday against the league leading Raiders at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The Quincy and North Quincy cross country teams meet Tuesday over the new Quincy course and North, paced by Bart Petracca, must rate as the favorite.

Going into last Tuesday's meets, Newton at North and Weymouth South at Quincy, Lou Tozzi's Raiders had picked up three wins in their first Suburban League season while Tom Hall's Presidents had only one win.

North last week took the first three places and outclassed Cambridge Latin, 17-46, to make its record 3-4.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC

This is to truthfully advise the public that Kris Corp., Goldberg Painting, Pioneer Drywall, Marshfield Sand & Gravel, Shaw Plumbing, William Boyle Assoc., Lee Welch Electric, and Structural Modes, Inc., do not pay area standard wages or provide area standard fringe benefits for their employees working on the construction of the new furniture warehouse on Wood Road in Braintree, Massachusetts. This new warehouse is owned by the C. Healy Company. The C. Healy Company is also the general contractor. This new furniture warehouse will be leased to and occupied by the Hamilton Furniture Store and Warehouse. We urge consumers to stop doing business with the Hamilton Furniture Store and Warehouse as a protest to that company's relationship with the C. Healy Company, an organization that is using and supporting contractors who pay substandard wages and provide substandard benefits to their employees.

The local unions of the South Shore Building Trades Council have worked hard for many years in negotiating decent wages and fringe benefits in this area, and we seek your support in protesting the destruction of those working conditions by such sub-contractors as Kris Corp., Goldberg Painting, Pioneer Drywall, Marshfield Sand & Gravel, Shaw Plumbing, William Boyle Assoc., Lee Welch Electric, and Structural Modes, Inc. At the same time, we urge anyone employed by any person to continue to pick up, deliver, or transport any goods to or at the Hamilton Furniture Store and Warehouse. We also urge anyone employed by any person including the Hamilton Furniture Store and Warehouse to continue to perform any services at or for the Hamilton Furniture Store and Warehouse. All we ask is that consumers support us in our fight to maintain area standard wages and benefits by ceasing to do business with the Hamilton Furniture Store and Warehouse.

Quincy At Malden In Another Tough One

Things seem to get tougher every week for the Quincy football squad and the situation is the same this week when the Presidents go to Malden to face the Golden Tornado, which shocked Revere, 24-14, a week ago.

This is Quincy's final game outside the Suburban League.

Two weeks ago Quincy faced unbeaten Waltham and pulled out a stunning 21-20 win in the final 14 seconds.

But last week the Presidents traveled to Newton and, unable to contain Newton's passer, Bob Kinsella, dropped a disappointing 22-6 league decision.

Hank Conroy expects another busy afternoon Saturday at Malden Stadium. Before the stunning win over Revere, Malden had defeated Chelsea, 18-14; lost to North Quincy, 14-0; defeated Haverhill, 26-13, and was nipped by Peabody, 14-12. Malden is an old Greater Boston League rival of Quincy and has a 2-1 GBL mark.

"We just couldn't stop their passer," Conroy said. "We started right off by marching all the way to their five-yard line but lost the ball on a fumble and the complexion of the game changed right there."

"Newton came right back but we stopped that drive with a pass interception. All in all, we didn't play a good game and the boys definitely weren't up for the game following their great win over Waltham."

"Preston Carroll had another fine day carrying the ball and Doug King and Ted Wiedemann played strong defensive games."

Newton took the lead early in the second period on Kinsella's pass to Foley for 34 yards. Foley kicked the point.

Quincy soon came back and Paul Vespaziani scored from the two but a pass for the go-ahead points failed.

Newton went off the field at halftime with a 15-6 lead after Peter Toyias scored from the three and Kinsella rushed for the two points.

Newton completed the scoring in the third period on another Kinsella to Foley pass covering 46 points and Foley again kicked the extra point.

Newton out-rushed Quincy, 179 net yards to 78, and gained 128 yards with seven for 12 passing to 67 for Quincy on five for 18. Newton had 15 first downs to nine for Quincy.

-TOM SULLIVAN

Sterling, Central Tie, 6-6

Sterling's ninth grade football team remained in first place in the Quincy Junior High league Monday by playing to a 6-6 tie with Central.

Unbeaten Sterling has a 3-0-2 record and Atlantic-North is right behind with a 3-1-1 mark.

John Lombardo scored Central's touchdown in the first half but Sterling came back to tie it in the second half on a touchdown by Rick Gubbody, who scored on an end-around play.

Central's eighth graders kept their hold on first place with a 16-6 win. Central has a 4-1-0 record.

John Cahill ran 80 yards on the first play from scrimmage for Central and Bob Hennelly added the points. Hennelly scored the second touchdown and Cahill added the two extra points. Jimmy Wojciechowski scored for Sterling.

Sterling's unbeaten seventh grade team kept its record perfect (5-0-0) with a 14-0 win. Steve Picot and Leon Frazer had the touchdowns and Ed Tinney added one conversion.

Last Friday Sterling edged Atlantic-North in ninth grade action, 6-0, when Jimmy Maze intercepted a pass and returned it 50 yards for the only touchdown.

The A-N eighth grade won, 20-8. Mike Spinarelli scored the first touchdown and also added the points. Danny McIntyre scored the second and Spinarelli scored the final TD. For Sterling Wojciechowski scored the touchdown and also the points.

Sterling's seventh graders just squeezed by, 8-6. Picot scored the Sterling touchdown and Frazer added the winning points. Timmy Bell had the A-N touchdown.

The games scheduled for Oct. 16 were postponed until Nov. 11 by rain.

On Oct. 15 Central's ninth grade team defeated Broadmeadows, 20-8. Wink Phelan scored the first Central touchdown on a quarterback sneak. John Lombardo scored the second and Tom Burke took a pass for the conversion. Jim Oriola had the third touchdown. Tom Dedian scored the touchdown for Broadmeadows and Mark Giordani added the points.

Incidentally, last week Ronnie Donovan should have been credited with BM's touchdown in a 16-6 loss to Atlantic-North. Central's eighth graders handed BM its first loss of the season, 6-0. Mike Oriola scored the game's only touchdown.

BM's seventh grade won, 16-0. Ray Verrier scored the first touchdown with a 50-yard pass interception return and Tom Brennan added the points. Brennan had the second touchdown and Dan Goldrick scored the two-point conversion.

TV MAILBAG

Arness has played marshal since '55

By RICK ROBERTS
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — The TV mailbag: Q. My friend and I have a bet going about James Arness. She says someone else played Matt Dillon on Gunsmoke on television before he did. I say he's been on the show since it started. Who's right? — L.R., Elgin, Ill.

A. You win. Arness has been in the role of U.S. Marshal Matt Dillon since the popular show first went on the air in 1955.

Arness, who is 6 feet 6 and weighs about 225 pounds, was chosen for the role of Marshal Dillon after working for several years in movies and little theater groups.

The turning point in his career, Arness says, was a role he had in the movie "Battle-ground."

Other films in which he has appeared include "The People Against O'Hara," "Hondo," "Gun the Man Down," "The Sea Chase" and "Many Rivers to Cross."

Arness, who lives in the Pacific Palisades, Calif., is divorced and has three grown children. He also owns a vacation home in Hawaii where he is able to surf and sail — two of his favorite hobbies.

Q. I like Sonny Bono's new show on ABC, but I liked him better with his wife. Is there any chance he will be joined with a new partner? — K.D., St. Louis, Mo.

A. ABC television officials say there are no immediate plans to find a new partner for Sonny.

According to plans for the show, Bono will be joined each week by various guest stars and he will continue in the same style of playing the underdog who is always being put down by everyone — including his guests.

Sonny started out in the music business at the age of 16 by writing songs but never really made a name for himself until the Righteous Brothers recorded his song "Koko Joe."

He had a varied career in the record business, working as an apprentice producer for Specialty Records. As he moved to various companies he produced records for several groups.

One of his most recent songs, "You Better Sit Down Kids," has been recorded by several singers including Vicki Carr, Glen Campbell and Liza Minelli.

He recently separated from his wife, Cher, whom he married in 1964.

Their television show, "The Sonny and Cher Comedy Hour" was canceled through an agreement with the network.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Questions may be sent to Rick Roberts, TV Mailbag, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper.

QUESTION NO. 1

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION: Do you approve of the adoption of an amendment to the constitution summarized below, which was approved by the General Court in a joint session of the two branches held August 25, 1971, received 212 votes in the affirmative and 39 in the negative, and in a joint session of the two branches held June 6, 1973, received 235 votes in the affirmative and 19 in the negative? YES...NO...

SUMMARY

The proposed constitutional amendment, if approved, would replace the present Article 52 of the Articles of Amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth and would empower the General Court, by concurrent vote of the two houses, to take a recess or recesses amounting to not more than thirty days. The present Article 52 permits such recesses but provides that "no such recess shall extend beyond the sixtieth day" from the beginning of the legislative session.

QUESTION NO. 2

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION: Do you approve of the adoption of an amendment to the constitution summarized below, which was approved by the General Court in a joint session of the two branches held August 25, 1971, received 177 votes in the affirmative and 65 in the negative, and in a joint session of the two branches held June 6, 1973, received 166 votes in the affirmative and 93 in the negative? YES...NO...

SUMMARY

The proposed constitutional amendment, if approved, would provide for a census in the year 1975 and every tenth year thereafter of the inhabitants of each city and town as a basis for determining the representative, senatorial and councillor districts for the ten year period beginning with the first Wednesday in the fourth January following the taking of the census, provided that the districts as established based on the 1971 census shall terminate on the first Wednesday in January, 1979. The census shall specify the number of inhabitants residing in each precinct of a town and each precinct and ward of a city.

Under the proposed amendment, the House of Representatives would consist of 160 members, in contrast to the present membership of 240, and the Senate of 40 members. The General Court would, at its first regular session after the year in which the census is taken, divide the Commonwealth into 160 representative districts and 40 senatorial districts of contiguous territory so that each representative and each senator will represent an equal number of inhabitants as nearly as may be; and such districts shall be formed, as nearly as may be, without uniting two counties or parts of two or more counties and, with respect to representative districts, without uniting, as nearly as may be, two towns or parts of two or more towns, two cities or parts of two or more cities, or a city and a town, or parts of cities and towns, into one district, and without dividing any town containing less than 2,500 inhabitants. The General Court would be permitted to pass laws to limit the time within which judicial proceedings may be instituted calling in question any such division. The proposed amendment further provides that every representative, preceding his election, shall have been an inhabitant of this Commonwealth for five years at least preceding his election and at the time of his election shall be an inhabitant of the district for which he is chosen. Every representative and senator shall cease to represent his district when he shall cease to be an inhabitant of the Commonwealth. The manner of calling and conducting the elections for representatives and for senators and councillors, and of ascertaining their election, shall be prescribed by law. The amendment vests original jurisdiction in the Supreme Judicial Court, upon petition of any voter of the Commonwealth, filed with the clerk of said court, for judicial relief relative to the establishment of House of Representatives, councillor and senatorial districts.

LEGAL NOTICE

QUESTION NO. 3

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION: Do you approve of the adoption of an amendment to the constitution summarized below, which was approved by the General Court in a joint session of the two branches held June 7, 1972, received 250 votes in the affirmative and 3 in the negative, and in a joint session of the two branches held June 6, 1973, received 253 votes in the affirmative and 0 in the negative? YES...NO...

SUMMARY

The proposed constitutional amendment would repeal section 2 of Article 46 of the Articles of Amendments to the Constitution of the Commonwealth [the "anti-aid amendment", so-called], and replace it with a new section 2, for the purpose of allowing grants in aid to private higher educational institutions or to students, or parents or guardians of students, attending such institutions.

The proposed amendment would delete the first clause of the present section 2, which requires that all moneys raised by taxation in the towns and cities for the support of public schools, and all moneys appropriated by the Commonwealth for the support of common schools shall be applied to or expended in only those schools conducted according to law under the order and superintendence of the authorities of the town or city in which the money is expended. The effect of the deletion of the first clause of section 2 would be to remove the constitutional prohibition against the use of public moneys, which have been raised by taxation or appropriated for support of public schools, for grants in aid to private higher educational institutions or to students, or parents or guardians of students, attending such institutions.

The proposed amendment would also alter the second clause of the present section 2 by removing the prohibition against a grant, appropriation or use of public money or property or loan of public credit by the Commonwealth or any political subdivision for the purpose of founding, maintaining or aiding any school or institution of learning, whether under public control or otherwise, wherein any denominational doctrine is inculcated, or any other school or any college which is not publicly owned and under the exclusive control, order and superintendence of public officers or public agents.

The proposed amendment would also add to the present section 2 a provision that nothing therein shall be construed to prohibit grants in aid to private higher educational institutions or to students, or parents or guardians of students, attending such institutions.

QUESTION NO. 4

LAW PROPOSED BY AN INITIATIVE PETITION: Do you approve of the adoption of an amendment to the constitution summarized below, which was approved by the General Court in a joint session of the two branches held May 17, 1972, received 131 votes in the affirmative and 121 in the negative, and in a joint session of the two branches held May 8, 1974, received 139 votes in the affirmative and 119 in the negative? YES...NO...

SUMMARY

The proposed constitutional amendment would revise Article 78 of the Articles of Amendment to the Constitution to permit the expenditure of money from the highway fund for mass transportation lines and other mass transportation purposes in such manner as the Legislature may direct. The highway fund includes receipts from fees, duties, excises and license taxes relating to registration, operation or use of motor vehicles and taxes from the sale of motor vehicle fuels. The expenditure of money from such fund is presently restricted to highway and bridge construction, reconstruction, maintenance and repair, enforcement of state traffic laws, and administration of the tax statutes which provide highway fund receipts.

QUESTION NO. 5

LAW PROPOSED BY AN INITIATIVE PETITION: Do you approve of a law summarized below which was disapproved in the House of Representatives by a vote of 73 in the affirmative and 150 in the negative and was disapproved in the Senate by a vote of 16 in the affirmative and 22 in the negative? YES...NO...

SUMMARY

Provisions of the act establish an independent Corrupt Practices Commission, with five members to be appointed by the Governor to staggered five year terms. The Commission has subpoena powers and is to investigate, by means of secret hearings, candidates' compliance with all state and federal laws relating to political campaign contributions and expenditures and corrupt practices. If probable cause is shown, the Commission is required to direct the Attorney General to take further action in the proper form and is required to make public a report of such action. In cases involving the campaign practices of the Attorney General himself, a special attorney to be appointed. If no probable cause is shown, the Commission is to state so publicly.

Further, the proposed act extends the application of the current statute regarding the disclosure of campaign expenditures and contributions, to all candidates for office above the town and city level, with the exception of President and Vice President of the United States. The act requires all such candidates to receive and disburse all amounts greater than $25 by check, and makes it a crime to knowingly receive cash payment from a candidate or his committee for a service costing more than $25. The act also requires candidates to designate a single bank as depository of funds and as recorder, with records of receipts and expenditures to be open to public scrutiny.

Provisions of the act extend present campaign spending limits to cover all media expenses and require all media firms [including: television, radio, newspaper, billboard, magazine, advertising, public relations, printing, opinion polling, computer, telephone, telegraph] to report the purchase of media services by candidates. Media expenses of candidates for the offices of district attorney, clerk of court, register of probate and insolvency, register of deeds, county commissioner, county treasurer and sheriff are limited to $.07 for each resident of the respective electoral district. Other provisions of the act require candidates, upon official announcement or filing of nomination papers, to report all political receipts and expenditures since the date of the last general election for the office sought, and count such expenditures toward spending limits. The act also limits candidates to one political committee.

The act establishes a maximum penalty of one year imprisonment and/or $10,000 fine for individuals engaged in corrupt practices, and a $50,000 fine for corporations so involved. In addition, the Attorney General is permitted to bring an action for the removal of a candidate whose election was materially aided by corrupt practices on the part of the candidate or one acting in his behalf, where such removal is otherwise authorized by law.

Over 500 Reported Against New NQHS

More than 500 Quincy residents have registered their opposition to the building of a new North Quincy High School at the Squantum site.

Fritz Streifer and former School Committee Vice-Chairman A. Wendell Clark organized two weeks ago a citizens campaign in opposition to the proposed new North Quincy High. They proposed instead the renovation of the present facility as well as the building of an addition to Atlantic Junior High School.

The two placed newspaper advertisements two weeks ago, asking citizens opposed to the construction of a new school to fill out the coupon declaring their opposition.

To date, over 500 signatures of Quincy residents who are opposed to the Squantum construction site, have been received according to Streifer.

Streifer said he telephones each opposed person, asking them to contact their respective city councilors and to tell them of their opposition to the site.

The original hearing date on the proposed site was changed last week by the city council from Oct. 29 to Nov. 21 at Quincy Vocational Technical School. The change was made so Percentage increase in savings deposits. South Shore National Bank (US) vs. the savings banks (savings banks in Norfolk County), 6 months ended June, 1974.*

What you see here is sort of a progress report on "South Shore National Bank versus the Savings Banks."

As you can see, people are catching on: They're putting more and more of their savings dollars into the same bank where they have their checking accounts. South Shore National Bank.

It's true that the savings banks can pay ¼% more interest. But for most people, who average somewhere under $1000 in savings, that comes to only around $3 a year.

Which is not a very compelling reason to go out of your way to put money into a savings bank.

On the other hand, with your savings dollars in a Multistatement account at South Shore National, you can earn yourself a free checking account. Which can amount to quite a savings in itself.

Plus you can earn yourself 10% refunds on the finance charges on your loans.

Is there any doubt in your mind as to why we're winning?

South Shore National is beating the savings banks at their own game.

WALTER J. HANNON

Quincy Savings Bank
1200 Hancock Street
Quincy, Massachusetts

Gentlemen:

I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate the Quincy Savings Bank as you move into your new Main Office Building.

The revitalization of the downtown area is one of the most important programs that our city is involved in, and any new major commercial building is most important to the growth of the city as a whole.

I commend you for taking the initiative in building a modern banking facility which not only meets the needs of our citizens but reflects a confidence in the future development of our city.

On behalf of the citizens of the City of Quincy, may I extend to you my sincere best wishes for continued growth and progress in our community.

Sincerely yours,

Walter J. Hannon
Mayor.

New Headquarters Far Cry From Original

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

Nearly 130 years ago, Quincy Savings Bank greeted its first depositor in a 15-square-foot back room too tiny to merit the name "office".

At the end of that first year the bank had 188 accounts and $23,879.49 in deposits.

Last week the bank opened its new headquarters in a 51,000 square-foot modern building surrounded by a park-like landscaping of trees.

The new bank headquarters, located at 1200 Hancock St. - opposite the Quincy Center MBTA Station - occupies 26,000 square feet of floor space - more than twice the size of the 12,000 square-foot present bank location and a staggering 1,734 times as large as the original 1845 site.

The bank now serves over 50,000 customers and has over $178 million in assets.

The bank is a three-story structure of exposed aggregate pre-cast concrete and a combination of clear and dark solar bronze glass.

Designed by Architects Design Groups in Cambridge and developed by Spaulding and Slye Corp., the new bank boasts three drive-up teller windows in the rear customer parking area as well as a walk-up window at the front entrance.

Although the principles of a mutual savings bank sprouted during the 1700's, the successful operation of such a bank did not take place until 1816 when Henry Duncan, a Scotch minister, established headquarters in his own cottage at Ruthwell, Scotland. Six years later, both Boston and Philadelphia opened the first two savings banks in the United States.

One writer wisely stated that not only did a wage earner's savings work for him while in the bank but his savings would also "be protected from the schemer and confidence man, from the hazard of such insecure hiding places as mattresses, jars and clocks."

Thomas Greenleaf, a prominent and thrift-minded Quincy citizen and a 30-year moderator of town meetings, spurred the establishment of Quincy's first savings bank. The tiny bank quarters, furnished with a desk, two chairs and a small safe, opened for business May 17, 1845 on the easterly side of Hancock St., just south of Granite St. Greenleaf served as the bank's first president.

FIRST-FLOOR of the new Quincy Savings Bank headquarters at 1200 Hancock St., is spacious and modern for customer service efficiency.

Today's banking customer - pampered with long and convenient weekly hours of business as well as Thursday evening and Saturday hours - merely marvels at the banking hours of 1845: the last Saturday of the month between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

After a decade of operation, Quincy Savings Bank transferred its headquarters to the offices of the Quincy Stone Bank at the corner of Hancock and Saville Sts.

Although deposits hovered under the $150,000 mark in 1854, the bank enjoyed a 50 per cent gain in deposits throughout the next decade until the outbreak of the Civil War in 1861. The war immediately triggered many withdrawals.

Nonetheless, expanded industrial activity jacked the total amount of deposits to over $400,000 by the war's end in Spring 1865.

Six years later, in 1871, the trustees of Quincy Savings Bank voted to establish independent quarters untied to any other banking institution. On the first day of May, the company of bank officers and employees moved into a two-room building owned by John Quincy Adams - a building which occupied part of the present site of the bank.

During the second 25-year span of the bank's existence - from 1870-1895 - the Bank more than tripled its deposits, growing from $549,472 in 1870 to $1,853,888 in 1895. The number of depositors had jumped from 1,956 to 7,145, and the bank's trustees realized the need for expansion.

Workers uprooted the old wooden building which had housed the bank for 25 years and re-planted it on a plot of land on the south side of Granite St., near the railroad tracks. While the new building was constructed on the evacuated spot, banking business transpired as usual in the same, though re-located, headquarters.

When the new quarters were completed in 1897, the Granite St. structure was razed.

Growth held steady during the next decade with Clarence Burgin, future president of Quincy Savings, as treasurer. Burgin held that office under six bank presidents, becoming president himself in 1932. During his 11-year reign as president, bank deposits multiplied from $1,917,000 to just under $21,000,000.

The year 1907 marked the institution of Monday evening banking hours at Quincy Savings. The birth of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company triggered the need for such convenient hours to accommodate the industrial workers. However, with the establishment of regular banking hours - 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. - the evening hours were discontinued.

Yet, at the outbreak of World War I, the volume of business boomed, and the Bank resumed its practice of evening hours - this time on Saturdays.

In 1912 the Bank instituted the ledger card system which quickened the handling of transactions. Seven years later, the bank almost doubled its floor space by constructing a large addition onto headquarters. The installation of a safe deposit department that same year augmented customer convenience.

The decade of the 1920's earmarked the bank's most rapid growth. Deposits grew 2½ times during that time, totaling over $17,000,000.

The year 1940 marked further modernization of the bank's internal operations. Complete machine accounting replaced the slower, manual method and the bank offered its patrons savings bank life insurance.

In 1943, C. Rogers Burgin, son of Clarence Burgin, succeeded his father as president of Quincy Savings.

Two years later, the bank celebrated its 100th birthday, boasting deposits of $26,000,000 owned by over 27,000 depositors.

A decade later, the bank's total assets multiplied over one and one-half times, boosting the total figure to $44,010,486. Ten years passed, and in 1965 the bank's assets jumped almost two times, ringing up a sum of $82,694,404.

When Quincy Savings celebrated its 125th birthday in 1970, assets had exceeded the $100 million mark with a total of $109,597,615, representing a five-year increase of 1.3 per cent. Four years later, total assets have reached $178,018,296. Deposits have more than tripled, attaining a high of $158,379,325.

Quincy Was Quarry Town With 4,200 Population

In 1845, the year marking the grand opening of Quincy Savings Bank, Quincy was a quarry town.

The 1840 census showed a near-doubling of the town's population over the decade. By the time Quincy Savings opened five years later, the population had jumped to 4,200 - more than double the 1830 population of 2,001.

This growth stemmed from the rapid development of the quarrying and stone finishing business triggered by the 1826 opening of the first commercial railway in America built to transport Quincy granite for the Bunker Hill Monument. Similar projects followed in such quick succession that the 1845 Massachusetts census of manufacturers showed the quarry industry as number one in Quincy. The value of Quincy's quarried stone totaled $324,500 and the industry employed 526 townspeople.

The long-established boot and shoe industry ranked second in Quincy. The 1845 census valued boot and shoe products at $133,273 and listed 301 employees.

The Quincy of old also boasted seven tanneries, three shops manufacturing coaches and chaises, and three saddle, harness and truck businesses. The town of Quincy also employed shipbuilders, fishermen and whalers.

The student population in the Quincy of 1845 looks negligible next to today's 16,000 student census. A total of 948 students were registered in 1845.

September of 1845 marked the day when the first wood-burning locomotive steamed through Quincy on the Old Colony Railroad. During the early years of service, only four trains operated - two each way. Yet at the close of the first 55 weeks of running, 48,386 passengers had ridden between Quincy and Boston.

President's Message

'Demonstrates Our Confidence In Quincy'

By CHARLES PEARCE
President
Quincy Savings Bank

We are excited and very pleased. This project reflects not only our desire to provide our customers and employees with the most modern and efficient facilities possible, but also demonstrates our confidence in the City of Quincy and the total South Shore area. We hope the new building also clearly projects the pride, confidence, strength and progressiveness that has been the trademark of the Quincy Savings Bank since its founding 129 years ago.

Why did we decide to construct this new office? Perhaps there is no better way to show the urgent reasons for our undertaking this program than to review the figures of the Bank's growth for the past 15 years.

In 1960 the assets were $57,691,809 and today they are $178,018,296. Deposits have more than tripled and are now at the all time high of $158,379,325. During the same period the dollar amount invested in mortgage loans increased from $33,342,027 to $123,383,133. The bank currently holds mortgages on properties located in more than 34 South Shore communities. Impressive figures - we believe so.

The handling of this greatly increased business in our present facility has been growing more difficult each year. Therefore, after careful study and consideration the Trustees voted on Jan. 9, 1973 to begin plans for the sixth major expansion of our main office facility. As a matter of interest the other times were 1845 [the founding date of the bank- 1855, 1871, 1897 [the year the bank moved to its present location] and 1919. From a small enclosure not more than 15 square feet, furnished with one desk, two chairs and a small safe to this new office of approximately 25,500 square feet. Something to be proud about? We think so.

How did all this happen? The growth would not have been possible without the support of the many thousands of customers who have considered the Quincy Savings Bank "their bank" all these years. Therein lies part of the reason for the impressive growth. The other factor being the people - both past and present - who worked with enthusiasm, imagination and determination to make Quincy Savings a highly respected bank and a leading community enterprise.

However, no project of this size happens by accident. The successful completion of this building program would not have been possible without the help and encouragement of a dedicated group of corporators, trustees, officers and employees. Also, in giving credit where credit is due, we would be terribly remiss if we failed to mention the cooperation and assistance that was so generously given by Mayor Walter Hannon, Council President Arthur Tobin and the personnel of all the city departments who were in one way or another directly involved in this important undertaking. To each of you, individually and collectively - our sincere thanks.

Furthermore, it takes a lot of talent and expertise to design and construct a building that pleases everyone. To the development firm, Spaulding and Slye, we simply say, you did it. The finished product is, as you promised, something that both the Bank and the City can point to with pride.

What about the future? For the city of Quincy we hope our efforts will encourage other firms to the future with the same degree of confidence that we have. More specifically, we hope that the filling of the rental space in the building will bring new people and business firms to the city.

For the bank - we are confident that we have provided the means of giving to all our customers - present and future - a continuous, lifetime program of thrift and credit services in a very personal way. Our slogan is and we hope always will be -

"We're here to help - and we do."

Hailed By Leaders

Mayor Walter J. Hannon has hailed the opening of the new Quincy Savings Bank headquarters as a reflection of "a confidence in the future development of our city."

His reaction was shared by Eric M. Swider, executive vice-president of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and Mark S. Bertman, president of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association.

Hannon said: "...any new major commercial building is most important to the growth of the city as a whole. I commend you for taking the initiative in building a modern banking facility which not only meets the needs of our citizens but reflects a confidence in the future development of our City."

Swider saluted the opening of the new Quincy Savings Bank headquarters as "a vote of confidence in the downtown area and the South Shore."

Swider said: "As the first major structure to be privately constructed in the downtown area within the last 40 years, the Quincy Savings Bank building is the beginning of a massive effort that will take place over the next decade at developing and upgrading this entire area for commercial and office use."

"It is typical of the vision and leadership provided this area by the financial community within the past few years."

Bertman said that the new "fantastically beautiful building" will certainly be "an asset to downtown Quincy." He added:

"It's nice to know that a Quincy company thinks that much of the downtown area to make that kind of investment in its future. I wish them the best of luck."

Best Wishes in your new home

4th Branch Office Soon To Open In Quincy Point

The Quincy Point office of Quincy Savings Bank - to open in late fall - will become the bank's fourth branch office.

With last week's opening of the Bank's new 1200 Hancock St. headquarters in Quincy Square, the former 1374 Hancock St. headquarters will continue operations as a third branch office.

The Quincy Point branch, located at the corner of Washington St. and Southern Artery, was built at the old site of Fireplace Restaurant.

The building, developed by Development Concepts, Inc. and designed by Kenneth F. Parry Associates, Inc., covers 3,600 square feet of floor space. The office will contain six teller stations, safe deposit boxes, a drive-up window, a managers' office and a new accounts area.

The bank's first branch opened 21 years ago in North Quincy at 371 Hancock St.

The second branch office, located in South Quincy at 138 Franklin St., began operations in January 1969.

CHARLES PEARCE, president of Quincy Savings Bank, greeted Mrs. Karen Rydwanski of 53 Russell Park, Quincy, who was the first customer to use the drive-up teller window at the new main office. Accompanying Mrs. Rydwanski were her two children Kristen and Jennifer.

English Bone China Set, Other Gifts

To celebrate the opening of its new headquarters, Quincy Savings Bank is offering depositors the chance to start a collection of Royal Crest English Bone China.

Any person depositing $50 in a new or existing account will receive a free Bone China cup and saucer set.

With each $25-addition to an account, a depositor can buy another cup and saucer and matching cake plate or a cake plate and a coffee stein at a reduced price.

This offer of Bone china will continue indefinitely.

Patrons will receive free gifts of plastic shopping bags, key fobs inscribed with the Bank's name, and colorful rubber jar openers. Light refreshments will also be offered.

Sheriff's Battle Local Feature

70-75% Voter Turnout Forecast

By HENRY BOSWORTH

A fairly heavy Quincy vote is expected in next Tuesday's state final election despite a lack of local ballot battles.

City Clerk John M. Gillis predicts 70 to 75 per cent of Quincy's 48,375 registered voters will go to the polls.

Gillis does not credit the Sargent-Dukakis duel for governor for the expected turnout but is basing his prediction more on a "hunch".

He thought only 30 per cent would show up at the polls in the Sept. 5 primary and a surprising 48.4 per cent put in an appearance.

"The people showed in the primary that they want to be heard," said Gillis. "And I think they're going to turn out next Tuesday even though the Sargent-Dukakis fight doesn't seem to have caused too much interest and despite the fact we have little in the line of local contests.

"Many Independents did not vote in the primary but I think you'll see them out next Tuesday."

A Quincy name—Francis X. Bellotti—on the state-wide ballot should also help the Quincy voter turnout. Bellotti, in a political comeback, is favored by most experts to win the attorney general post over Republican Josiah Spaulding.

In fact, many of the experts are predicting a Democratic

The exteriors of all 18,000 homes in the city are being surveyed in order to review the housing situation throughout the community.

The homes include 13,500 single-family dwellings, 3,500 two-family, approximately 1,000 3-4 family units and about 500 5-8 family units.

The city's Department of Planning and Community Development, under the direction of Mayor Walter J. Hannon, has initiated the study which began this week.

The effort is being made in conjunction with the Housing Assistance Plan under the new federal Community Development Bill of the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

"The survey is the first step in developing a program of meeting housing needs for Quincy people," said Geoffrey A. Davidson, director of the Department of Planning and Community Development.

Under the supervision of Mary E. Weaver, Planning Assistant, the survey of homes is being carried out by 10 inspectors from the city's Health Department and the Quincy Point Improvement Project. It's expected to take three weeks to complete the building-by-building analysis.

This will be the first such effort to study the city's entire housing stock. "If we're going to keep Quincy a fine residential community, we must have specific information about the condition of housing throughout the community," said Davidson.

The survey will include reviews of major building features such as foundation walls, siding, paint, roofs, and porches. The inspectors will also review stairways, railings, fire

40 Companies Seek Help

Work Available For 400-500 At Job Fair

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

More than 40 companies and agencies offering 400-500 job openings will participate in Quincy's third Job Fair Saturday in the Quincy Vocational Technical School gym.

The Fair, sponsored by the South Shore Council for Full Employment, will begin at 10 a.m. and continue until 3 p.m.

Chamber of Commerce Economic Development Manager Harold Davis said that the Division of Employment Security has mailed over 5,000 Job Fair invitations to those registered in the Security office as unemployed.

But he emphasized that anyone seeking employment is welcome to attend the Fair.

Davis said he expects over 3,000 participants in Saturday's Fair.

Quincy's unemployment rate is now in excess of 10.57 per cent. The January-February unemployment survey conducted by Quincy's Office of Manpower Affairs showed more than 4,000 in Quincy's work force of 38,000 out of work. Although another survey has not yet been conducted, Paul Berrini, planner and field representative for the Office of Manpower Affairs, said that with the rise in both national and statewide unemployment figures, he "would not be surprised" if Quincy's unemployment rate hits 11 per cent.

6 Referendum Questions

There are six referendum questions on the Nov. 5 state election ballot—seven if you live in the First Norfolk District.

Briefly, they concern:

QUESTION 1: A proposed amendment to the Massachusetts Constitution which would permit the state legislature to recess sessions for up to 30 days. Presently such recesses can only be called during the first 60 days of a session.

QUESTION 2: A proposal to reduce the size of the Massachusetts House of Representatives from its present 240 members to 160. The cut, if approved, would go into effect with the legislature taking office in January, 1979. It provides also for a state census in 1975 and every 10 years thereafter.

QUESTION 3: A proposed Constitutional amendment which would permit the Commonwealth to offer grants to private colleges and universities or to students or parents of students attending those institutions. It would allow use of public money for grants to private colleges.

QUESTION 4: A proposal to permit the spending of money from the highway fund for mass transportation. It does not commit a specified amount of money but removes the ban against using highway funds for this purpose.

QUESTION 5: A proposed statute to place further restrictions upon campaign fund-raising and spending practices in Massachusetts. It would create a five-member Corrupt Practices Commission.

QUESTION 6: An advisory question seeking the opinion of voters on creating a Department of Health Systems Regulation.

Voters in the First Norfolk District [Ward 2, Precincts 1, 2, 5 of Ward 3 and Precincts 1, 11 of North Weymouth] will find a seventh question allowing them to register their support or opposition to the construction of an MBTA station in South Quincy.

Hannon Opposes Forced Busing

During Monday's Veterans' Day ceremonies at Adams Academy, Mayor Walter J. Hannon spoke out in opposition to forced busing of school children.

He called the court-ordered busing "totally insensitive to the people involved."

Addressing the crowd gathered to honor veterans of past wars, Hannon said:

"Once again we commemorate Veterans Day. We pay tribute to the men and women of Quincy who gave their lives. The guns of war are silent. There is peace.

"But a different kind of war exists today. It's a general distrust of government and its leaders. This distrust has been brought on by many things: runaway inflation, high unemployment and now talk of a recession. As each citizen and veteran alike works against these forces, he must not be oblivious to what's happening around him.

"We have witnessed in the last weeks a shocking example of a

Quincy Point Couple Leave For Peace Corps In Africa

Mrs. Janice King, former first-grade teacher at Thomas B. Pollard School, and her husband Russell left Monday for Swaziland, Africa to join the Peace Corps.

Mrs. King, 26 and Mr. King, 29, will undergo a three-month training period before beginning their two years of service in the Peace Corps.

A graduate of North Quincy High School and University of Connecticut, Mrs. King will teach primary education in Africa. Her husband, a graduate of Needham High School and a former tow-pilot at Plymouth Airport, will teach mechanics while in Africa.

Speaking of their decision to enter the Peace Corps, Mrs. King said, "We like to travel and we'd also like to help people less fortunate than we are."

Before leaving for Africa, Mr. and Mrs. King lived at 12 Craig Ave., Quincy Point.

Back-To-School Night At Sterling Junior

Parents had an opportunity to view facilities and meet with the teachers and leadership groups at Sterling Junior High School Wednesday night.

Recommendations from the Advisory Council of Teachers (A.C.T.) and the Parents' Advisory Council (P.A.C.) developed the format for the "Open House" night in keeping with the American Education Week theme "Stay Involved".

Parents viewed exhibits in the Industrial Arts, Home Economics and Art areas. Student Council served as guides.

A brief meeting provided parents an opportunity to meet the Sterling Leadership groups. Members of the Guidance Staff, Special Needs Team and Teachers' Council were introduced. A member of the Student Council greeted the parents and the co-chairman of the Parents' Advisory Council addressed the parents, explaining their new role at Sterling.

The Student Council guides hosted the parents with coffee and cookies in the cafeteria.

McIntyre Urges:

'Give Vietnam Veterans Rightful Respect, Benefits'

Former Mayor-Senator James R. McIntyre, keynote speaker at Monday's Veterans' Day celebration, challenged citizens and veterans to honor and aid those who served in "the unpopular" Vietnam War.

Sketching the past patterns of adulation and benefits showered upon returning war veterans of World War I and II, McIntyre, a Korean War Veteran, and now State Senate Counsel, told the crowd gathered at Adams Academy that the world is now a changed one.

Standing on the site of Patriot John Hancock's birthplace and a few feet from the World War I "Doughboy" statue, McIntyre declared:

"We have been through an unpopular war," he said, "one in which the banners were not unfurled, one in which there was no total effort made to secure victory, one in which veterans returned one by one to no music, parades, cheers."

"While the benefits seemed to be shrinking, there were no loud cries for assistance because their war was an unpopular one."

Calling upon the nation to bind the physical and psychological wounds of war, McIntyre urged all citizens to insure each veteran of this "unpopular war" a "rightful place of respect" within his homeland. He said:

"Let us recognize our duty as veterans and as a nation...to seek to make them useful members of a productive world and...to remember their orphans and widows."

He asked: "Should we penalize those who...still shouldered their rifles and did their duty for their country...Should their petitions for aid be rejected?"

Although McIntyre said the answer to that question should be "a resounding 'no'," he conceded that many Americans "are not willing to pay this debt because ... theirs was an unpopular war."

McIntyre then echoed the words of President Abraham Lincoln who, in his last inaugural address, called for conciliation, understanding and concern for the veterans of the divisive Civil War. McIntyre said:

"As he asked for unity and aid for our returning veterans...so we should on this day rededicate ourselves so that the needs of our new generation of young veterans should not go unmet."

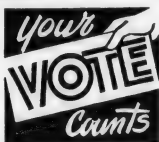

Re-zoning Hearings Nov.6

The City Council will hold public hearings Wednesday, Nov. 6 on two rezoning changes and the flood plain ordinance.

The first rezoning change deals with Upland Rd - the land bounded by Dimmock St. and Adams St. This will be discussed at 7 p.m.

At 8:15 p.m., the second zoning change concerning the land bounded by Wollaston Ave., Waterston Ave., Greene St. and Fenno St. will be discussed.

Finally, at 8:30 p.m., there will be a joint hearing with the City's Planning Board to discuss the flood plain zoning ordinance.

federal court order telling a person where to send his child to school. The court said you shall desegregate the school system. The order was totally insensitive to the people involved. It has turned a city into an armed camp. Hate and distrust prevails.

"But let us not hold the courts totally responsible, for the court only carries out the laws that are made by the politicians. To those who pass these laws, do they ever really experience the results.

"Does not a man have the right to live where he chooses; work where he chooses; go to church where he chooses; and send his child to the school of his choice.

"This is not to be taken as bigotry, for it is not. To me, it is common sense. It is our basic right as a free people.

"If only we could ask those men and women who died - those men and women we remember today - did you die for less than that. Hopefully, they would answer - we gave our lives for that and more.

Hubby collects turtles

By PAT and
MARILYN DAVIS
Copley News Service

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
My husband has what could be called a hobby. He collects turtles! Our yard is filled with these big, lumbering creatures. By actual count, we have 15. I want these animals out of my yard. I've told Gene that either the turtles go or I go. What else can I say?

Needs Help

Dear Help:

Keep in mind that the tortoise beat the hare. Don't let this happen to you. Your husband has a relatively harmless hobby. He could be collecting blondes.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

I constantly read about interfering mothers-in-law. Well, let me give you a run-down on my sister-in-law. She is going to ruin my marriage if I can't think of a way to put a padlock on this gal.

Jack and I have been married for six months. My sister-in-law, Linda, is constantly coming to our apartment. She is here to eat dinner four nights out of seven and thinks our place is a motel on weekends. She constantly calls Jack on the phone — something about her car, her job, or any excuse she can think up. To top it off, she is constantly touching, patting and hugging my husband. I am beginning to think that there is something wrong with this girl. I want her out of our apartment, off our phone, and her hands off my husband. How do I accomplish this miracle?

Barbara

Dear Barbara:

You didn't mention what your husband thought of this live-in sister-in-law. Have an honest talk with Jack. He is the one who should handle this touchy (in more ways than one) problem. If Jack does not get this girl out of the apartment, you should both consult a third party.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

I have a double problem. I have a scar under one eye which is quite noticeable. I also have dark circles which seem to emphasize the scar. How do I camouflage this problem?

Irene

Dear Irene:

Your problem can be solved with a coverup cosmetic such as Erace. Since scars are often uneven, apply Erace with a brush for best results. Fill blemishes by stroking them over the stick and brush over scar until completely covered and blended. Erace also conceals under-eye shadows. Choose it in a tone which harmonizes with your foundation and skin tone.

Order Of Priority

If a $10 fire extinguisher saves a $30,000 home, the economics are self-evident. If that same extinguisher misleads a person into forgetting logical, intelligent priorities, a discussion of economics is inappropriate.

What is the proper order of priority in case of fire in the home? First: Be certain that everyone is evacuated [fire drills are recommended]. Second: Notify the fire department. Third: If the fire is a small one, and if you are sure which class it is, and if you can safely fight it, then consider fighting it. Just keep in mind that this is a very dangerous business for an amateur. Often a fatal business.

In regard to the purchase and ownership of a fire extinguisher, remember to be certain that it carries a UL [Underwriters' Laboratories] label, and that it is neither too heavy nor too complicated to operate during what probably will be a panicky time.

Today's Women

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY

It's time to say goodbye

By ANN RUDY
Copley News Service

Once before I said goodbye to my daughter when she was 13 and I saw the little girl leaving and the young girl unfolding like an early summer rose.

Goodbye, I said then, to the crayon drawings carried home from school for mother's admiration. Goodbye to Halloween dressups and her joy in my home-made costumes. Goodbye to her tiny feet in my best shoes slopping behind me and her pride in being "just like mommy."

So long to the soft and gentle curve of her baby cheek as she lay sleeping surrounded by her favorite toys. And I said hello to a new and dignified young lady who suddenly became my equal and not just because she was tall enough to look me in the eye.

She was still full of fun and zany as ever, but she was able to ask stimulating questions — some I had no answers for. Through high school and into college she went, with her enthusiasts.

Prom dresses, football games and school spirit, a broken heart here and there, special boys for dinner, girl friends on the phone forever and permission to stay out just a little later than she had the year before.

Yes, I missed the little girl, but the seedling had turned into a sunflower and her warmth was full compensation.

Now I find I must say goodbye again. At the height of her youth and beauty she will be married. And that is as it should be.

But I will miss the everyday of her, the year-long spring of her. And the silence of her empty room will be as the forest after a sudden shower: an awesome quiet broken only by a far-falling last tear-drop of rain.

May her life be full of beauty and may her children bring her all the joy that she has brought to me.

RIGHTS 'N' WRONGS

Should he visit first in-laws?

By RIV TOBIN

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

During World War II I married a French girl. She died giving birth to our second daughter. A year later I remarried, so the children have really known only one mother. For several years I corresponded with my first in-laws but it was difficult because I know little French and they know less English. This spring my wife and I and the two girls are going to Europe. Should we call on the grandparents? They are old, but well and alert. The children know about them.

Concerned

Dear Concerned:

It would be a wonderful thing to do! After all, these old people ARE the grandparents. Don't worry about the language problem. Children have a way of crossing such barriers. I have a feeling your first in-laws are going to be thrilled to see you all so happy. Adieu and bon voyage.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

I have terribly arthritic hands and my doctor prescribed typing for therapy. May I type my personal letters?

K. ir/Kailua

Dear K.:

It was once considered bad form to type social correspondence, but no more. Type away!

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

My husband took correspondence courses for 11 years and finally was granted a Bachelor's Degree. People say he shouldn't refer to himself as a "college graduate" because he really never went to a college. Are they correct?

Proud of Carl

Dear Proud:

Carl has a Bachelor's Degree. He IS a college graduate.

ARIES: (March 21 to April 19 — Also Aries Ascendant) — Find time for relaxation and play this week. Attend to things as they arise instead of letting them accumulate, causing tension. Good time to start new projects. Entertain those who can be helpful to you.

TAURUS: (April 20 to May 20 — Also Taurus Ascendant) — Affairs with family and partner require a "delicate touch" — be fair diplomatic. Catch up on long-distance correspondence, ordering supplies, etc. Romance blossoms. Use patience and fair play with competitors.

GEMINI: (May 21 to June 20 — Also Gemini Ascendant) — Review your budget and trim it where possible — curb extravagance. Mental pursuits prosper. Start new projects. Home repairs should be attended to now. Hold a family conference to straighten out differences.

CANCER: (June 21 to July 22 — Also Cancer Ascendant) — You are highly energized. Don't scatter your forces — concentrate on one thing at a time. Agreements can be reached now on matters that were pending. Discharge obligations to relatives. Guard health — concentrate.

LEO: (July 23 to August 22 — Also Leo Ascendant) — Allow your creative ability to come out. Some long-standing burden lifts now and you are immensely relieved. You're in the spotlight and can win friends and influence people. Get personal ambitions under way.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22 — Also Virgo Ascendant) — Your health should improve now and some dream could come true. Romance brightens too, but don't spend all your time basking in glory. Use energy toward further attainment career-wise. Mail holds surprises.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22 — Also Libra Ascendant) — Things that have been held up should be released now. Your own personal development is completing. Career matters appear relaxed and calm — Conflicts cease or don't bother you. New inspiration comes too.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21 — Also Scorpio Ascendant) — The pace slows and tensions ease so that you can accomplish much now. Satisfy your restless urge to travel by armchair journeys and conversations. You may be investigating possible job change.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21 — Also Sagittarius Ascendant) — Rewards for past efforts appear to come in now. Finances look bright. Deep love is on the menu too. Social life is gratifying and you can meet new, exciting people through mate or loved one.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19 — Also Capricorn Ascendant) — Business projects previously bogged down should get a lift now. Problems are solved and delays are released. Listen to others — partners, mate and associates have valuable information. Be receptive.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18 — Also Aquarius Ascendant) — Good time to make changes in routines, programs, or job assignments for coworkers. Health matters are important. Set up diet regimes for yourself and family — get enough rest and exercise. Don't gossip.

PISCES: (Feb. 19 to March 20 — Also Pisces Ascendant) — Where you have been unable to reach agreements or sign contracts appears to move ahead now. Completion of projects hanging fire is emphasized. Distant news regarding career matters comes and is good.

'Overnutrition' worries experts

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Registered Dietitian

In the past the attention to nutrition has concentrated on deficiencies. Today, however, many experts in the field are also concerned with "overnutrition."

The alarming increase in obesity gives rise to newer thoughts in dealing with overconsumption of food.

The last 50 years have seen many changes in scientific attitudes toward diet and nutritional needs. More and more data are continually being researched and documented.

As progress continues, ideas change. As an example, it wasn't too many years ago that a fat baby was thought to be healthier, and even cuter, than a slim child. Fat adults were identified with prosperity, happiness and contentment.

Today we view these characteristics differently. A fat baby is developing bad habits that can make him an unhappy teen-ager and an unhealthy fat adult.

An overweight pregnant woman who delivers a fat baby adds considerable risk and hardship to the childbirth.

Pregnancy no longer is an excuse for eating indiscriminately and piling on fat. Weight can be controlled during pregnancy. Some women put on 30 or 40 pounds while carrying a seven-pound baby. They continue to be overweight 20 years after delivery and blame it on their pregnancy.

Excess fat, at any age, can now be thought of as a pollution of the body. A pollutant that permeates the body, surrounding vital organs and clotting blood vessels, shortening the life span.

Studies of other cultures in areas of South America and numerous parts of the world show people living over 100 years and still physically active. It was found that their diets contained only about one-third of the calories and about half as much protein, as the average American diet.

Research is being conducted on the high consumption of protein because it makes up such a large proportion of the total American diet.

Excessive amounts of protein may be broken down by the body processes and produce kidney stress. The public has been victimized by the "all protein" diet in the mistaken belief that it builds strong muscles and does not produce fat deposits.

Calories and protein intake can also become excessive as people grow older and their requirements decrease. This is often true with men who have been athletes in school years and then, in sedentary business lives, continue to eat the same quantities.

Everyone's activity level decreases with age and the caloric intake either must be lowered or fat will accumulate.

Overnutrition is practiced in many other ways such as the indiscriminate consumption of vitamins. Excessive sodium, the practice of salting all food before tasting it, produces all sorts of problems, including edema (water retention) and kidney stresses leading to disease.

Too much iron disturbs blood chemistry and liver function.

Halloween Apples Could Be Cheaper Than Candy

With the price of sugar sky-high and candy likewise, this could be the year to hand something else out to the trick-treat-and-cavity set on Halloween, notes the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture (MDA).

Some of the kids may think it's a rip-off - not that they dislike apples, just that they'd usually rather get something to ruin their teeth - but maybe we could start a trend in the right direction. And if you train your own brood to bring their gift apples home, you might make a profit on the deal.

Prices for fresh, native apples are well down from early season. You'll want small apples for filling trick-or-treat bags. They run five or six to the pound. Many roadside farm stands are featuring the smaller sizes now, offering savings even beyond the current low market prices.

The MDA's Food Shopper's Hot Line is still working full time, with many callers unable to get through. While waiting for new equipment to expand the daily price and nutrition service, the department has been able to add one more line, though it's not a toll-free number.

The Hot Line number - 1-800-392-6026 - may be called without charge from anywhere in Massachusetts. If you can't reach it, and live within the Boston area, try 727-7937, for the same recorded message. More toll-free lines are promised soon, says the MDA.

The attention that the pumpkin gets at Halloween often overshadows the fact that it's a most useful vegetable with many tasty and nutritious uses. The pumpkin makes spicy pies, breads, muffins, various puddings and custards; it can be stuffed with meats, vegetables and sea foods; and in many European countries, it is the base for delicious soups with carrots, sliced onion, leeks, chopped celery, parsley, parsnips, etc.

Cooking fresh pumpkin is a great saving over buying it canned, and it's not a difficult process. Take a 5-lb. pumpkin, cut in half or quarters; remove seeds and stringy material; cut into small pieces and remove the rind; boil in just enough water to cover for 25-30 minutes. Drain and mash well; put the mash into a strainer and drain for half an hour to remove the excess liquid. Yield is about 4½ cups. Take it from there with many recipes in almost any good cookbook.

Rev. John Graham Montclair Seniors Speaker

Rev. John R. Graham, executive director of Quincy Heritage, will speak and show slides at a meeting of the

Montclair Senior Citizens Club,

Holbrook Rd., Monday, Nov. 4.

Refreshments will be served at 12:30 p.m. followed by the meeting at 1 p.m.

Mrs. Emma Harris, president, will conduct the business meeting.

Halloween Party For Ward 2 Youngsters

The Ward 2 Civic Association will sponsor a Halloween party for the children of the area tonight [Thursday] from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Fore River Clubhouse, Nevada Rd.

There will be entertainment and refreshments served. All elementary school children and their parents are invited.

Thomas Williams is program chairman.

Serendipity Fair Saturday At Wollaston Methodist Church

Wollaston United Methodist Church is sponsoring a Serendipity Fair Saturday at the church from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Knitted and crocheted items, baked goods and crafts will be for sale.

The committee planning the event includes Mrs. Deborah Swanson, Mrs. Barbara Johnson,

'People Tired Of Cronyism, Phony Slogans,' Says Hunt

James W. Hunt, Jr., campaigning to oust Patrick J. (Sonny) McDonough from his long-held seat in the Governor's Council, promises "action and total involvement" if elected in November.

"The people need a choice," said 25-year-old Hunt. "People are sick and tired of cronyism and phony slogans. They want to see who their elected representatives are...The time has come to examine what a representative has done for them and what he promises to do. I promise action and total involvement that has not taken place over the past 25 years."

McDonough's attendance record at Council meetings has been poor, claimed Hunt.

The Governor's Council is an eight-member board headed by the lieutenant governor, member number nine. It is the Council's duty to confirm the appointment of judges, clerks of court, youth service commissioner, as well as the parole, industrial accident and public utility commission board members.

The Council also authorizes state expenditures through warrant approval. Hunt feels that herein lies an important, investigatory power of the Council.

"The Council could have a very strong power to check and balance the approvals by seeing that the money is spent in the proper manner," he said. "The funds allocated to contractors and state employees should be investigated. Perhaps we can save some of the people's money."

A graduate of Boston Technical High School, the Dorchester Independent attended Lowell Technological Institute and is presently working towards a degree at Northeastern University School of Political Science. He is employed as a special assistant to Boston Public Works Commissioner Joseph F. Casazza.

The Governor's Council meets every Wednesday at the State House. Each Council member receives a yearly salary of $4,000. With eight councillors collecting salaries.

"Thirty-two thousand dollars is a cheap price to pay for a system of checks and balances," said Hunt.

Hunt feels the Council can act "as an ombudsman to the people." "Through the ombudsman approach - developed in Sweden - public officials investigate the activities of government agencies which may infringe on the rights of the people.

JAMES W. HUNT, JR.

"The Council should act as a complaint department, an added voice, which would provide real answers to real questions and would afford a last recourse for harassed and neglected citizens," he said.

During the campaign primary, Democratic candidate for governor Michael Dukakis lambasted the Governor's Council as "an anachronism...an arena for the payment of political debts" and vowed he would as governor, sign an executive order establishing an independent judicial selection commission. Such a commission would abolish the need for the Governor's Council.

Responding to the possible abolition of the Council, Hunt said:

"We will support bringing the issue to the people...But the change would involve a constitutional process and cannot be effected by an executive order. We're talking about a constitutional process that would take eight years."

Hunt added, "If I am elected, there will be five new councillors." That could effectively change the entire make-up of the Governor's Council."

In 1972, Hunt ran for the Council but removed his name from the ballot under protest when a similarly-named candidate entered the race in an effort to confuse the voters. But through his campaigning experience, Hunt said he "has learned his district well."

"I'm ambitious," Hunt said, "and I know the district well. I know the problems facing individuals as well as cities. We could, for instance, actively work on the shoreline in this district...I want to play an active role in this district."

Dwight Challenges Democrats To Be Specific On Patronage Charges

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

Incumbent Lt. Governor Donald Dwight has challenged the Democratic opposition "to start being specific" over charges that "patronage appointments" infest the Sargent administration.

Dwight, in a visit to The Quincy Sun, praised the governor's judicial appointments as "the hallmark of his administration," and charged that Dukakis would be unable to substantiate his claims of "political budding."

"The Governor and I have always believed that the best appointment is the best politics," said Dwight. "The best man or woman for the job has been the rule. Mr. Dukakis had better start naming names, start being specific, about whom he likes and doesn't like. I don't think he will because he can't."

As he canvases the state, Dwight, like all other seekers of public office, hears the voters' united dirge bemoaning the nation's inflated economy.

"One way or another, the voters' concern is the pocketbook," said Dwight. "A large cloud hanging over the nation is inflation," he continued. "Whether it's the high cost of food, the electric bill, or the high cost of living, the voters' concern is the pocketbook."

Dwight emphasized that only well thought-out plans - not magic-want solutions" - will ease the problems facing the state.

According to Dwight, the Republican ticket has performed "specific actions" to win back the alienated members of the Republican Party who voted for conservative Carroll Sheehan in the September primary.

"Yes, we are trying to win them back," said Dwight, "with the unity luncheon, for example, when winners and losers stood in mutual support. Even such a vocal critic of Governor Sargent as State Committeeman Ed King is now telling voters why he is supporting the administration so strongly."

Dwight perceives his role as lieutenant governor as the help-mate, the elected team-mate, of the governor. "We were elected as a team," Dwight said, "and I should do everything I can to make the incredibly burdensome job of being governor easier."

He also handles special assignments from the governor such as the calming of the prisons last year. In addition, Dwight said he participates in the "major decision-making process" at the State House.

One of those decisions was the recent call-in of state troops and the MDC police to oversee the busing of students into South Boston. Those troops will remain in South Boston, Dwight said, "as long as necessary to have the kids go to school without fear."

Distressed by President Ford's remark that forced busing was "not the best solution to quality education in Boston," Dwight said that he concentrates on the other part of Ford's comment - that the law must be obeyed.

"Ford's characterization of the situation was not particularly helpful," said Dwight. "It's an easy thing to say, but the time for saying that has gone by."

The lieutenant governor continued, "We have a plan which must be put into effect. We must have security and domestic tranquility. If we fail, we fail as a society of laws. This administration does not intend to fail."

Dwight said he is convinced that Thomas O'Neill, Democratic nominee for lieutenant is "ducking" him as far as debates go.

He said he thinks Michael Dukakis, Democratic standard bearer, won't let O'Neill debate Dwight one-on-one "because O'Neill's inexperience would come through."

Dwight said there was "a perfect opportunity" for the pair to engage in a debate the night the Sargent-Dukakis TV debate was called off because of the explosive busing situation in South Boston.

"We were invited to substitute," said Dwight. "I accepted but O'Neill said he had other commitments. It was a perfect opportunity. I know if I were O'Neill running against an incumbent, I would have accepted to get the exposure."

Dwight said he is still available anytime for a one-on-one debate.

Committee Named To Establish Deputy Chief Thomas Maloney Memorial

Mayor Walter J. Hannon has approved a resolve submitted by Ward 3 Councillor John J. Lydon, Jr. asking him to name a committee to establish a memorial to retired Deputy Fire Chief Thomas F. Maloney who died Sept. 3.

"Deputy Maloney's contributions to the city of Quincy not only as a firefighter but as a charter member and longtime backbone of The Quincy Municipal Employees Credit Union should not go unnoticed by the citizens of the city of Quincy and all city employees," Mayor Hannon said. "The establishment of this committee will see that Deputy Maloney be properly remembered by all."

Appointed as chairman of the committee is Fire Chief Edward F. Barry who is also a Director of The Quincy Municipal Credit Union. Named to the committee were Councillor Lydon, in whose ward Deputy Maloney resided, Natural Resources Commissioner Richard Koch, Recreation Director William Ryan, City Budget Director William S. Grindlay and Firefighter Patrick Sullivan, treasurer of the credit union.

The committee will make recommendations for the establishment of a memorial within 60 days.

Little Interest In Election

But Wait'll Next Year

By HENRY BOSWORTH

The Sargent-Dukakis TV debates don't seem to have stirred up much voter interest—in Quincy, anyway.

Even the politician watchers can't get worked up. In fact, if you happen to see groups of two or more standing in front of City Hall shooting the breeze, walk slowly by and you'll hear them talking about "next year".

By "next year", they mean the city election—the mayor's race to be exact.

Consensus of the Speculation Corps: it should be a lulu.

They figure a four or five-man/woman battle: incumbent Walter Hannon, Councillor Joseph LaRaia, Rep. William Delahunt and Grace Saphir. And, maybe Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets. And, possibly Council President Arthur Tobin.

Delahunt, for the past several months, has looked like an almost certain mayoral candidate. Insiders now say he will run for sure. The way they tell it, he feels someone with an interest in next year's Mayoral race has been out to do a "job" on him in his bid for re-election in the Fourth Norfolk District. And this has really gotten his dander up.

Come to think of it, some of the signs he's using in the current campaign would fit into a mayoralty race very easily. They read: "Quincy Needs Delahunt".

QUINCY'S TWO DRAFT Boards have been dissolved and their duties taken over by a regional board based in Needham. Richard Koch, city commissioner of natural resources and Asst. City Clerk Thomas Burke have so officially been notified by the Massachusetts Director of Selective Service. Koch, who served as chairman, was appointed by President Eisenhower in 1957 and Burke by President Johnson in 1964.

SPEAKING OF KOCH, his wife, Simmy, one of those nice people you meet in life if you're lucky, is recuperating at the Carney Hospital following back surgery. She'll be in the hospital another week and would like to thank everyone for the many cards, flowers and best wishes.

QUITE A TURNOUT the other night to help "roast" Richard [Dee Dee] Morrissey, Wollaston restaurant owner, former Park-Recreation Board chairman and Mr. Nice Guy. Nearly 800 friends were on hand at the Victory Rd. Armory in Dorchester to pay tribute to Dee Dee, a rather shy guy who goes around doing a lot of nice things without fanfare.

For the past quarter-century he has sponsored and helped in many athletic, charitable and civic endeavors.

So you couldn't blame his wife, Lucinda, for beaming proudly as citations were presented to Dee Dee from: Mayor Walter Hannon, former Mayor James McIntyre on behalf of Senator Arthur Tobin, Rep. Clifford Marshall from the House of Representatives and Dist. Atty. George Burke from the Massachusetts District Attorney Association, Quincy Youth Hockey, Little Bowling Loop, and the Koch Club.

A LOT OF political power turned out for the 41st wedding anniversary of Guy Faiella, chairman Quincy Board of Registrars and his wife, Catherine, the other night at the Bryan VFW Post. Democrats and Republicans alike: Mayor Walter Hannon, Dist. Atty. George Burke, Quincy Court Clerk Dennis Ryan, Asst. City Clerk Thomas Burke, School Committeeman Frank Anselmo and both sheriff candidates, incumbent Charles Hedges and Clifford Marshall, and Atty. John Flavin, to name a few.

Faiella endeared himself to the women in the audience when he offered this advice to the young married men: "Don't ever try to fool your wife."

AN OLD FASHIONED Rally will be held for Quincy's Francis Bellotti Friday from 8 p.m. to midnight at the Statler Hilton main ballroom, Boston. Tickets are $2 per person.

AND A RALLY and dance for Councillor-Rep. Clifford Marshall, Democratic candidate for sheriff, is set for Saturday night from 8 p.m. to midnight at the Quincy Armory. Tickets $1 per person may be obtained by calling Barbara Chiasson [471-3848] or Marshall headquarters [471-6100]. They're also available at the door.

HISTORIC NOTE: Last Friday [Oct. 25] was State Constitution Day, the day that the Massachusetts Constitution was written in John Adams' law office in the John Quincy Adams birthplace, South Quincy. It was also the wedding anniversary of John and Abigail Adams.

SMILE DEPT: Jack Silverstein, the North Quincy druggist, author, punster, jogger and handball star asks: "Did you know that the hospital at Walpole State Prison doesn't have an out-patient department?" [Aw C'mon!]

How Things Would Be Under 'Governor' Dukakis

By WENDELL H. WOODMAN

BOSTON — Shortly after the September Primary, I broke bread with that band of thinkers frequently alluded to as veteran observers. One of them was a campaign aide to Gov. Sargent and not quite as veteran as the other observers.

Somewhere between the tomato soup and the tuna sandwich, His excellency's emissary said of Michael S. Dukakis, "Can you imagine that guy trying to take the credit for no-fault insurance?"

See how easy it is to ruin a good lunch?

I pointed out that Mike Dukakis was, in the mid-sixties, the leading proponent of no-fault insurance, that his sponsorship of the Keeton-O'Connell plan was legendary, that he tilted this silly windmill until he conquered it.

Then I recalled that half-hour of agony the Governor spent on television in 1970 when he signed no-fault into law. He said he didn't like it, thought it was terrible, wondered what would become of the world if a thing like that were ever the law, put it on a par with the sinking of Atlantis and then, mercy me, he signed the damn thing.

Mike Dukakis, I announced confidently, is more responsible for no-fault insurance than anyone else, and his right to take the credit or blame for it, depending on your point of view, is clearly established.

I mention this now to accept that gentlemen's challenge to "put that in your column if you dare," and to lead into a long-overdue estimate of the kind of administration Governor Dukakis is likely to frame after his inauguration in January.

Those who characterize Dukakis as an ultra-liberal renegade whose leanings are supremely socialistic are not laboring under any misapprehension. As much as he would like to sneak back on center, that is his bent. He has a very deep affinity for the left wing.

Letter Box

Favors Putting NQHS on On Referendum

Editor, Quincy Sun:

In your issue of Thursday Oct. 10, 1974 the front page headlines read Dr. Crendon Labels North Quincy High School Referendum "Delaying Tactic"

In the ensuing article Dr. Crendon says that the question of a new North Quincy High School has been around for a number of years and I quote him "now is the time for the elected officials to do what they should do".

I don't believe that anyone regardless of his position has the right to dictate how or when our city councillors should vote no matter what the issue. Secondly Dr. Crendon must be forgetting the turn over of councillors since the high school issue began.

I agree with Mr. William D. Delahunt - put this new high school question on the ballot as a referendum and let the people

RECYCLING PAYS

According to a Reynolds Metals Co. spokesman, last year alone the company recycled more than 1.1 billion cans and paid the public more than $4.5 million. — CNS

"A radical is a man with both feet firmly planted in the air."

— Franklin D. Roosevelt

But Dukakis is also a pragmatist, and the fact of life he'll have to face as Governor for the next four years is performance. He will not be allowed to get away with the kind of nonsense Sargent did because he will not be a minority Governor. This political truth is paramount.

Let's draw the equation this way: whether the Republican Governor or his antagonists in the Democratic legislature are responsible for the unholy state of this state is an open, arguable question. One can blame the other, and that's the way it's been for 10 years.

But if the Democratic Party grabs all the goodies in November, there will be no question who is to blame when we lose statehood. It becomes mutually advantageous for the Governor and the legislative leadership to come to an understanding.

That does not preclude a good old fashioned war between the Executive and the legislature, but it does change the rules. The legislature will abandon its hobby of dumping atrocious legislation on the Governor's desk for the sole purpose of embarrassing him, and the Governor will not be able to call a press conference to whine about "those hacks" in the House and Senate without impugning his own performance as party leader.

The best assessment of this difference was offered by Atty. General Robert Quinn early in his unsuccessful campaign for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Quinn attributes the Commonwealth's chronic boondoggling to what he calls "one-upsmanship", and it derives directly, he says, from a Governor and legislature of opposite parties trying their damndest to out-blame each other for all the foolish things they agree to do.

It's a kind of programmed cataclysm.

The Governor proposes something so preposterous there's no chance in heaven or hell the legislature could approve it.

The legislature says, "Oh no, we're not going to get blamed for killing this nice idea," and they lob it back into the Governor's court knowing that he'll have to veto his own bill.

But the Governor doesn't veto. He signs it into law, and — whammo! — a $300 million catastrophe nobody wanted.

The one thing that can be said about the executive-legislative relationship during Sargent's six years in office is that nobody on Beacon Hill has been guilty of practicing statecraft. The prime consideration on both sides has been figuring out a way to blame the other side for all this maladministration instead of trying to cope with it or straighten it out.

Gov. Dukakis cannot afford the luxury of wallowing in this kind of politics. He'll have to present programs that are defensible on their merits instead of crying to the newspapers to get what he wants. He will have to present budgets that are reasonably restrained because he will be the leader of the party that controls the purse.

This pragmatism will force him to stifle some of his more adventurous experiments, and while the reservations about his personal philosophy are legitimate, circumstances relegate that to a secondary worry.

Dukakis is a knowledgeable, hard-working pragmatist, and it may be, given the situation he'll inherit, that his application to join the moderate division of the Democratic Party is more substantive than illusory.

It it's not, there's always Borneo.

decide. After all, all the people of Quincy have a stake in this question not just those from the north end of the city. Remember the cost of construction today is astronomical. Should we head towards a recession or even a depression, prices will fall and unemployment will rise, which would make better conditions for building a new high school in the future. Thus giving work to those construction workers who would be out of work.

My final thought and one which does concern me, suppose we spend millions to construct a new high school and some judge comes along and says about six years from now, it's time to bus students back and forth from cities to suburbs. I ask you isn't that also food for thought.

Blocks To Stay

Adams Academy To Get Glass Window Facade

A compromise was reached Tuesday by a "peace committee" to end the Adams Academy window-blocking controversy.

Subject to the approval of the Quincy Historical Society, cinder blocks filling in eight windows of historic site will remain in place to increase the interior wall space.

However, wooden casements will be reinstalled in the Academy and a glass facade erected to give the appearance of windows.

This compromise brings to an end a several month's debate over the filling in of the Adams Academy windows. The Quincy Historical Society had blocked the windows on the north and south sides of the building to increase needed interior wall surface area.

The renovations were a part of the Society's plan to transform the old academy - where once stood the birthplace of Patriot John Hancock - into a museum-library-office facility.

The 10-member "peace committee" that reached the compromise included:

Mayor Walter J. Hannon, Senator-City Council President Arthur Tobin, City Councillor Leo Kelly, Geoffrey Davidson, director of the city's Department of Planning and Community Development, Richard Ward, representative from the Board of Managers of the Adams Temple and School Fund, Robert Faxon and Thomas Burgin, representatives of the Board of Supervisors of the Adams Temple and School Fund, H. Hobart Holly, president of Quincy Historical Society, Anthony Losordo, chairman of the Building Committee, and Albert Skirius, architect from Edgar Wood Associates.

During the controversy, Kelly had argued that the filling in of the windows would drastically alter the architectural dignity of the historic building. He had the support of the City Council and the Quincy Planning Board.

Yet the Historical Society had insisted that the windows had to be filled in to increase wall space inside the building. The Historical Society contended that the old building would get "a new lease-on-life" with the renovations and would then be restored "to a useful condition".

The one-hour meeting was closed to the press. Burgin called the meeting "an informal session" but said that people could "speak more freely" without the press present.

without the press present.

"We're trying to work out a compromise," Burgin said, and we'd feel a little freer if we could meet by ourselves."

When asked his opinion, Mayor Hannon said he would abide by a consensus of the people present.

Tobin, asked his opinion by the Mayor, said:

"I have nothing to hide. The issue is before the public...I came with the intent to work something out."

Kelly agreed with Tobin, saying that he had no objection to the presence of the press.

Although all present did not express an opinion, the press were asked to leave. However, Mayor Hannon volunteered to take notes of the meeting and to contact the reporters at the conclusion of the meeting.

Over 2,100 Cars In Forced Busing Motorcade Protest

A motorcade of over 2,100 cars - 1,100 of them from the South Shore area - traveled to South Boston Monday to protest the forced busing of students.

The line of cars left Wollaston Beach early in the afternoon and were greeted at Marine Park in South Boston by local and state political figures. Approximately 10,000 people attended a rally there.

Concerned South Shore citizens organized the motorcade by calling other citizens who in turn called 10 friends to solicit support for the motorcade.

The citizens now hope to form a council which will sponsor teas in private homes, dances and other activities to raise funds to hire a constitutional lawyer who would appeal the court-ordered forced busing.

The estimated fee of such a lawyer is $50,000.

Mayor Proclaims Heritage Week

Mayor Walter J. Hannon has proclaimed the week of Sunday, Oct. 27 through Saturday, Nov. 2 as "Quincy Heritage Week".

Quincy Heritage is the organization planning the series of celebrations of the 350th anniversary of the founding of Mt. Wollaston and the 200th anniversary of the nation.

In his proclamation, Hannon spoke of Quincy as a city rich in history. He noted that Quincy is the home of Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams, the birthplace of Patriot John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Delahunt Named Chairman Special Human Clinical Commission

House Speaker David M. Bartley announces the appointment of Rep. William Delahunt of Quincy as Chairman of a Special Commission Relative to Human Clinical Investigation and Experimental Therapy.

The 21-member commission will be comprised of legislators, physicians, attorneys and doctors of philosophy. The commission, first of its kind in the nation, is viewed as a model for legislatures throughout the nation and on the federal level.

"The Commission's first job will be a most difficult one," said Delahunt. "We will take up the question of minors being called on as donors in bone marrow and kidney transplants."

Representative Delahunt is credited with bringing both sides together in the controversial fetal experimentation issue this past legislative year. Delahunt drew praise from many diverse organizations for the manner in which he handled such thorny questions as abortion and fetal experimentation.

The Massachusetts Citizens for Life said, "Bill Delahunt led the way for many months in the Massachusetts Legislature." Members of the National Organization for Women [NOW] and the American Civil Liberties Union also commended him for his efforts in handling the difficult issues.

Delahunt, a 33-year old attorney, also serves as a Quincy City Councillor. He is a member of the Election Laws Committee in the Massachusetts House.

Well Child Clinics Schedule Announced

Dr. Alfred V. Mahoney, Quincy Health Commissioner, announces the scheduling for Well Child Clinics in Quincy.

He also stressed the importance for parents to immunize their children against Diphtheria, Pertussis, Tetanus, Polio, Measles, Rubella and Mumps.

The Well Child Clinics include formula, diets, health check-ups and the above immunizations for all children up to the age of six. A pediatrician and public health nurse are in attendance at these clinics for consultation and to provide these services. There is no charge. The only requirement is that the children are Quincy residents.

The clinic schedule:

Health Center, every Wednesday from 9:30 to 10:30 A.M.

Montclair Men's Club, first and third Tuesday from 9:30 to 10:30 A.M.

Atherton Hough School, Hough's Neck, second and fourth Tuesday from 9:30 to 10:30 A.M.

St. Boniface Church, lower hall, every Thursday from 1 to 2 P.M.

Fore River Club House, Nevada Rd., first Friday from 9:30 to 10:30 A.M.

South-West Community Center, 372 Granite St., first Monday from 9:30 to 10:30

400-500 Jobs Available

The first Job Fair, held Oct. 27, 1973, drew more than 2,300 unemployed and the second Fair, held March 9, 1974, attracted more than 3,000. During those two fairs, 304 people landed jobs.

Companies will be offering fulltime employment ranging from unskilled to skilled to professional openings. Davis said companies will be interviewing candidates for positions as welders, secretaries, key-punch operators, machinists, insurance salesmen, clerical workers and assembly line jobs - just to name a few.

Davis said, too, that the several thousand jobs listed in Boston's Job Bank will be available at Saturday's Fair. In addition, he said, several fee-paid employment agencies will offer "several hundred" job openings.

There is no fee for participation in the Job Fair.

Davis noted that past fairs have attracted a range of people - the young, the old, the skilled, the unskilled and professionals.

To promote and encourage maximum participation in the Job Fair, Mayor Walter J. Hannon has proclaimed the week of Oct. 27 through Nov. 2 as Job Fair Week. Hannon said: "Unemployment continues to be the number one problem confronting the South Shore area, and only through major efforts such as a job fair can we hope to make significant progress towards reducing unemployment."

The South Shore Council for Full Employment consists of representatives from the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, the Mass. Division of Employment Security, the Quincy Area Manpower Services, the Norfolk County Labor Council and the South Shore

Woman's Caucus.

The following companies are among those participating in the Job Fair:

Snelling & Snelling, Grossman's, Pneumatic Scale Corp., Michigan Abrasives, Mony, Employers Index Network, State Street South, Howard Johnson's, Kemper Insurance, Bergen-Paterson Pipe Support Corp., Guardian Life Insurance, General Dynamics, Office Specialists, Le-Jay Personnel, Masonellin International Inc., Holiday Lithograph, Brush Hill Transportation Co.

Bradlee's, Papa Gino's, Dymo Business Systems Inc., Cumberland Farms, Friendly's and Jordan Marsh.

Davis said he expects the participation of additional companies as well.

18,000 Homes To Be Inspected escapes, doors, windows, gutters, chimneys and garages.

The general appearance of walkways, fences, driveways and yards will also be included.

The inspection of each structure will include an overall evaluation as to whether the exterior is standard, substandard or deteriorating.

The survey results will be included in the city's proposal to the Department of Housing and Urban Development under the Community Development bill.

Over the past year, the Planning and Community Development Department's research reveals that three Quincy neighborhoods could be eligible for improvement programs. These include Southwest Quincy, Atlantic and Houghs Neck.

As a result, the commercial buildings in these three sections of the city will also be evaluated. If necessary, a sample survey of interior conditions may be conducted.

Previous neighborhood improvement projects have been carried out in the Montclair section of Quincy and in Quincy Point.

"The results of the survey will provide necessary information for the Community Development application," said Davidson. "It will also give us the information we need to seek other sources of funding which might become available to continually maintain and improve the quality of our neighborhoods," he added.

Davidson went on to emphasize that the needs are far greater than the available funds.

"American cities have been taking a beating. Federal monies are getting scarcer every year. That's why we're trying to do a more thorough job."

"We want to have our data ready and keep on fighting for everything we can get in order to do a good job for the city," he said.

The results of the survey will be forwarded to Mayor Hannon who will review the proposals made by Davidson's department before they are sent to Washington.

"Through the mayor our city now has the key say in what should be done with available federal funding," Davidson commented. "This hasn't happened before."

Seek Federal Funds

Community Development Meetings Planned

Quincy citizens will be involved in determining the needs and priority setting for community development projects under the new federally funded Community Development Bill.

The legislation, passed by Congress and signed by President Ford in August, brings together former categorical grants into one package. For the first time the city itself can say what needs to be done in community development.

"Over the past three years, Quincy has received an average of $1,250,000 a year for such programs as code enforcement, water and sewer improvement and open-space acquisition," said Geoffrey A. Davidson, director of the city's Department of Planning and Community Development. His department will administer the new program.

For 1975, $1,014,000 will be available to Quincy from the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development. The funds can begin coming to the city as of Jan. 1.

Because many more communities are involved under the new bill and because total funds are less than in previous years, Quincy's share is less than in the past.

"We've got to make every dollar count," said Assistant City Planner Daniel Driscoll.

The city must fulfill certain objective of the bill which is aimed at maintaining viable urban communities through the elimination of neighborhood deterioration. Emphasis is placed on the conservation of the city's housing stock and the revitalization of neighborhoods to make them more attractive places to live.

Davidson emphasized that elements of the new legislation call for discovering better ways to use land resources for both homes and businesses.

"Some of the funds can be used for downtown improvements, as well as the preservation of neighborhoods," he said.

The ways in which the funds will be allocated locally will be decided after local citizens have a chance to meet and determine what needs to be done.

A series of six meetings will be held. A meeting will be held in each of the city's six wards. "We want to get as many people involved as possible," commented Davidson.

The meetings are set for November. "We'll be announcing the schedule next week," he reported.

After the neighborhood groups have met, the data will be analyzed by Davidson's staff and a final report of recommendations for 1975 programs will be sent to Mayor Walter J. Hannon. Hannon will make the official request for funding to the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The complete proposal will include a full analysis of community needs, a program to meet those objectives as well as a housing assistance plan for the city. HUD also requires an annual performance report.

The 1975 program starts a three-year process. "Obviously with the funding from the federal government being extremely limited, we won't be able to do everything the first year," said Davidson.

"But to get ready for future applications, we want to know what the people of the city think needs to be done to make Quincy an even more liveable community," he added. The priorities discussed in the six neighborhood meetings will be evaluated for the long-range proposals.

The city is limited under the new bill to make requests for only certain types of programs. These include code enforcement, rehabilitation and demolition of homes and businesses, public works facilities and improvements, the acquisition of land for recreation and historic purposes, as well as downtown improvement.

Special provisions make it possible for the city to propose efforts in the field of community services such as drug abuse, child care facilities and health and economic development. These projects must be tied to other community development programs in order to be accepted.

Daniel Driscoll, the project manager for the Community Development proposal, said:

"We're pleased that for the first time the Federal government is making it possible for the citizens of Quincy to have a chance to express their views on what needs to be done in community development. This is a big step forward."

This is an Ad for the Granite Co-Operative Bank, North Quincy and Quincy Center. This message is for you, the average person. We have the best savings plan in Massachusetts for people who have as little as $100 to invest and don't care to risk even a penny.

This plan isn't new but is certainly worth reminding you about. It's got a fancy name: Paid Up Shares, but you won't have to find a stock broker to buy them. You see us...and then you'll own a piece of our bank. We're a co-operative bank and that allows us to offer these shares.

Here's what many people have done for years, and what we hope you'll do. Walk into either of our banks. Ask the teller to give you paid-up shares [one for each $100]. What you'll get is a bank book. Each $100 in the book means you own one share in our bank. Every month we send you a check as a dividend...computed at 5% per year. Keep the money here and we keep sending you checks. And, if you want, we can deposit the dividend in a regular savings account [which earns more interest] and buy you another share when you've got $100 accumulated. The best part of this whole deal is you get your money back from us just by asking for it. You get it right then. Then there is no notice.

If you'd like more information on our simple world of finance just call us. We're always happy to have you make a good investment in our bank.

'Slow Children' Signs To Be Posted On Cranch St.

The traffic division of the Quincy Police Department will soon post "Slow Children" signs on Cranch St. in the Hospital Hill section of Quincy.

The move came at the request of Rep. Thomas Brownell who acted on behalf of residents troubled by speeding on Cranch St. which is populated by many small children.

Capt. Roy Cavicchi, head of the traffic division, said that "Slow Children" signs will be posted on both ends of Cranch St.

On behalf of the Hospital Hill residents, Brownell also requested the activation of pedestrian lights at the corner of Whitwell and Granite Sts. where a constantly blinking yellow light makes pedestrian crossings dangerous, if not impossible.

Cavicchi explained that the lights were installed by the state under "Topics Program". Cavicchi said:

"We recognize the problem and are pushing the state to give us a replacement. Installation is a matter of time in order to get the proper equipment."

Lt. William Daley To Be Sworn In As Captain

Quincy Police Lt. William Daley was to be sworn in Thursday as a captain in ceremonies at City Hall.

Daley, a 25-year veteran of the department, succeeds the late Capt. Frank Norton.

He has served as police prosecutor in Norfolk County Superior Court and before that in the Quincy department's community relations.

He joined the department July 25, 1949 and was promoted to sergeant in 1957 and lieutenant in 1961.

Joyce Baker Criticizes Legislature Fiscal Record

At a reception held at the home of Mrs. Stephen Roberts, 37 Estabrook Rd., Wollaston, Joyce I. Baker, candidate for state representative in the Fourth Norfolk District, attacked the fiscal record of the state legislature.

"The working family," she said, "has been taxed beyond the limit of their endurance, and under no circumstances, can continue to bear the burden of the runaway fiscal programs of the legislature."

"Our present legislature has a poor record in responding to the needs of the people. Consistently our legislature has voted to spend more and more tax dollars creating more and more political jobs, many of them unnecessary and serving only to provide patronage for incumbent legislators."

"The public has a right to know how these decisions are being made. Legislators should not be allowed to continue funding their expensive pet projects in private."

She said state spending has gone from $651 million in 1964 to $1,401 billion in 1969 to $2,728 billion for 1975.

"The 1975 budget of $2,728 billion was passed by a house vote of 140-70 and our current incumbent state representative voted in favor of this appalling budget," she said. "Estimates of new needed taxes to fund this year's budget range from $100 million upwards. The legislature failed to delete unnecessary jobs and to add new revenue generating measures and also failed to open up and improve the budget process. This lack of concern for the average voter cannot be tolerated."

Mrs. Baker said her long experience as an accountant as giving her the qualifications to take a business-like approach to state spending.

Mrs. Baker expressed concern over House Bill 7164 which would have provided for state operation, under the Lottery Commission, of sports pool wagering.

"This bill would have allowed the state to promote gambling on professional, and shockingly enough also on amateur sports," she said. "Fortunately this bill was defeated but our incumbent state representative voted that this bill should have passed. It would seem to me, that to open up amateur sports to gambling would result in a breakdown of a tradition in sports as we know it today."

She deplored 'political tactics' used in campaigns.

"I am a new candidate, with the backing of no particular group or groups, and feel I can give the voters of Wollaston and West Quincy their best chance for a complete change in representation," she said.

"Mine has been a campaign to the people and I intend to stay in communication with the people after the election in order that I can know of their wishes when voting on the issues."

'Face The Problem Squarely', Widows, Widowers Advised

Keohane Funeral Home last week held the first in a series of four seminars designed to give guidance to widows, widowers and any other interested people.

Rev. Dr. Victor F. Scalise addressed a large group on "Coping With Your Grief". He told the group that professional counseling is available to the grieving but that "the best aid" is to talk to those who have experienced the loss of a loved one. Dr. Scalise said:

"There is no complete solution, no easy formula. The real solution resides in each of you. God has given us the resources to cope with life. Don't run away...face the problem squarely."

The second seminar will take place tonight (Thursday) at 8 p.m. in the Function Room of the Quincy Savings Bank new main office. Guest speaker will be Mr. O. Donald Gohl, vice-president of Quincy Savings Bank, who will speak on "You and Your Finances."

Quincy Forgets Past

Forget the past and concentrate on the future.

That is the philosophy of the Quincy football players and coaches as they prepare for Saturday's Suburban League game against Weymouth North at Quincy Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The Presidents trailed by only a 16-8 score at halftime last week at Malden but, following a nightmarish second half, they were on the short end of a 54-22 score in their final non-league game of the season.

The walloping dropped Quincy's record to 2-4 [1-1 in the league].

Malden's 54 points may be the highest number ever scored against a Quincy team.

According to Quincy sports buffs, they are the most scored since Quincy moved into the present building 50 years ago.

Although this is Quincy's first year in the Suburban League, Weymouth North is a rival of many years. It has had a frustrating season. Weymouth lost to Braintree, 7-0, in a non-league opener; upset Brookline, 7-0, in the league; lost to North Quincy, 9-0, in the league; shocked Newton North, 13-12, in the league; and last week was bombed by Waltham, 35-6, in a league game.

"We just couldn't stop them in the second half," said Quincy defensive coach Bud Mosher in the absence of Head Coach Hank Conroy. "They killed us up the middle and around the ends. The score could have been even bigger." Two other Malden touchdowns were called back.

Mosher hailed Preston Carroll, who scored 20 points [his eighth, ninth and 10th touchdowns of the year] and ran well all afternoon.

He also singled out Frank Guest and Ted Wiedemann for their defensive efforts and Joe Megnia for a strong game at defensive end. He and his fellow aides, Dave Burke and John Bogan, had good words for quarterback Jim Forrester and Paul Vespaiani, who ran well. They also lauded Steve Coleman for his blocking.

Malden's Steve Carin took a 43-yard pass from John Stanasek for the first touchdown in the first period and Stanasek rushed for the points.

Malden made it 16-0 early in the second period when Mark Burns scored from the three and Stanasek again rushed for the points.

Carroll scored from the four later in the period and Forrester passed to Mike MacKenzie for the two points.

Quincy stayed within striking distance as each team scored twice in the third period.

Don Roach scored for Malden on a nine-yard run and Burns rushed for the points and Carroll went eight yards for the Presidents. He also added the points on a pass from Forrester.

Newton's Kinsella Too Much

Raiders Look For New Start

fall.

Two weeks ago Newton North's Bob Kinsella ruined the Quincy football team.

Last Saturday he and his mates came into Quincy Veterans Memorial Stadium and the outstanding quarterback also wrecked North Quincy and ended the Raiders' four-game winning streak.

Kinsella almost singlehandedly handed North its first Suburban League defeat and its second loss of the season as he completed nine of 11 passes for 201 yards and all three Newton touchdowns in a 20-14 victory.

North's secondary had been one of its strong points in previous games but was the main culprit last week. They had good coverage on Newton's passes but couldn't stop Kinsella's strikes. One time North had the receiver double-teamed but he grabbed the ball out of the two defenders' hands and scored. Late in the game they triple-teamed the receiver only to have him make a sparkling catch to set up the winning touchdown.

This Saturday North goes to Brookline to face a league rival which has had little luck this Brookline opened with an 8-0 non-league win over Boston Tech, but then lost to Weymouth North, 7-0, in the league; lost to Waltham, 33-8, in the league; nipped Weymouth South, 20-18, in a non-league overtime game, and last week was bombed by Brockton's powerful champions, 46-19, in a league game.

"What can I say?" asked North's disappointed coach, Ralph Frazier. "That boy Kinsella is one of the best passers I've seen and he has some super receivers. We had them covered pretty well on passes but still couldn't stop them. They never should have completed the two passes on which we double-teamed and triple-teamed them."

"As far as our team is concerned, Brian Doherty was just exceptional again. [He gained 136 yards, the third time he has gone over 120 yards and the fourth straight time he has surpassed 110 yards]. He is the key to our offense and he has been just great in every game."

Fullback Matty Constantino was singled out for his blocking and Quarterback Mike Meehan for his excellent passing and ball handling. He hit on five of six passes for 80 yards and a touchdown.

Also receiving praise were End Mark Reale and Bruce Hall, who started his first game at center in place of the injured Rich Joyce.

Neither team could move the ball in their first series of downs but midway in the period Kinsella threw his first pass and hit his favorite receiver, Dana Foley, for 41 yards and a touchdown. This was the play on which he grabbed the ball out of the hands of two defenders. Foley kicked the point.

North Quincy then staged its best drive of the day, moving 71 yards for a touchdown, sticking to the ground with only one pass. Doherty started the Raiders off when he went 21 yards to midfield. He went deep into Newton territory but officials ruled he had stepped outside. The one pass from Meehan to Reale ate up 22 yards to the Newton 13. Doherty completed the march, in which North picked up four first downs, by scoring from the two. Meehan went around left end for the two points which put North ahead, 8-7.

Late in the half Kinsella threw a bomb to John Glynn for 45 yards and later hit Dave Brilliant for 18 for a first down on the North 18. After Peter Toyias ran for 12, Kinsella passed to Brilliant, all alone in the end zone, for the touchdown with just 1:11 left in the half.

North took the second half kickoff and drove all the way to the Newton 12, adding four more first downs. But Meehan was hurt and while he was out the attack bogged down and Newton took over on its 14.

Church Women United World Community Day

The 32nd anniversary of World Community Day will be observed by Church Women United in Quincy Friday, at Houghs Neck Congregational Church.

Women of all denominations may attend.

"Discover the Aspiring Majority", the day's theme, will be the subject of Rev. Charles McEachern, pastor of First Baptist Church, Wollaston. He will speak at 2 p.m. following a 1 p.m. coffee hour. Rev. M. Alicia Corea, associate pastor at Houghs Neck, will be organist.

The theme, stressing justice for women and increasing their participation at all levels to bring world peace into realization, leads into the objectives of United Nations International Women's Year which will be observed in 1975.

Mrs. Kenneth Yoerger is chairman for the day. Her committee includes Mrs. Gunnar Skoog, Mrs. Dean Matthews, Mrs. Calvin Black, Mrs. Harry Maki and Mrs. Hugh Rose.

Real Estate A Career Not A Job

Success For All Ages - Young And Mature Success For Both Men And Women With Or Without Licenses

PEOPLE ASK - Why are Conway Company sales agents so successful, even in unusual times like these?

ANSWER - Because every Conway Country agent is taught to sell in the famous "Conway College of Real Estate Knowledge. That's a big reason why we were up 10% in sales for August, up 5% in September and are running ahead in October when many other agents, Coast to Coast, are not meeting quotas.

QUESTION - Is this course for a real estate license?

ANSWER - No. It goes far beyond the license course. It tells you how to offer service and make money in real estate. That's why many of the people who take our course have licenses and previous real estate experience.

QUESTION - What about age or previous education?

ANSWER - Age is no deterrent to success. Basic requirements are intelligence, willingness to work hard, honesty, integrity, high moral character and a desire to help others.

QUESTION - What about Conway Company?

ANSWER - We are the largest residential firm in new england with about 160 of us in our 14 offices which run from Quincy to Hyannis... plus Commercial.

QUESTION - Do you folks plan to expand into new area?

ANSWER - We sure do!

QUESTION - When is the next session of your course?

ANSWER - For one week, beginning November 8.

QUESTION - Do you charge a fee?

ANSWER - No. This one week course is free. Absolutely free.

QUESTION - How do I apply?

ANSWER - Call the number below and ask for an interview. The interview is necessary because we give the course only to those we would consider asking to join our expanding Jack Conway & Co. Call now. Don't put off your chance for success.

Extensions Denied

Mayor Kills Warner TV Cable Contract

Mayor Walter J. Hannon has denied a request by Warner Cable of Massachusetts for a two year extension of their Community Antenna Television License.

The license was granted to Warner Cable by Hannon on Sept. 13, 1972 to establish a cable television system within the City of Quincy. However, due to the fact that Warner had not begun construction of the system by Sept. 1 of this year, it was necessary for them to request an extension.

After receiving a report by a 3-2 majority of members of the city's Community Antenna Television Advisory Board, Hannon said he would follow their recommendation that the license not be extended.

The Advisory Board was acting upon a request by the Mayor for a recommendation regarding the license extension following a public hearing held Oct. 1, at City Hall.

After a study of Warner's reapplication, the board submitted to the Mayor the following considerations upon which the decision was based:

- The negative attitude and lack of cooperation by the Massachusetts Cable Television Commission which "severely hampered" the execution of Warner's contract with the city during the first year of the contract.
- The fear of future harassment by the Mass. CATV Commission if re-negotiations were considered.
- Warner's "sudden lack of interest" in building a system and meeting its contractual obligations to the city, which occurred approximately one year ago.

• Commitments and goodwill created by the local management was nullified by corporate management.

The board while very impressed with the credentials and sincerity of Warner's new local management said it feels that "the many changes and deletions to our existing contract will deprive the city of its short and long term cable needs. It would in fact provide little more than high quality off air signals while contributing minimal educational, community or cultural benefits."

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Clifford Marshall won the sheriff's badge, Robert Cerasoli moved into the vacant First Norfolk District state representative seat and Rep. William Delahunt brushed past two challengers in local election highlights Tuesday.

Some 34,383 - or 71.4 per cent - of Quincy's 48,375 registered voters went to the polls despite rainy, stay-at-home weather.

Quincy rolled along with the Democratic tide backing the Democratic slate from top to bottom. Michael Dukakis and Thomas O'Neill III, took Quincy over Gov. Francis Sargent and Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight, 17,617 to 13,906.

Francis X. Bellotti's home town gave him 19,037 votes over Josiah Spaulding's 14,307 as Bellotti made a successful comeback bid for attorney general after 10 years of playing political second-fiddle.

The only close one in Quincy was Governor's Councillor Patrick McDonough edging young James W. Hunt Jr. in the Fourth District. Quincy gave McDonough 15,776 and Hunt, running as an Independent, 15,300.

"Yes" was the winner on six referendum questions but "No" won on a special question in the First Norfolk District opposing the proposed South Quincy MBTA station.

At 36, Marshall became the first Democrat ever elected Norfolk County sheriff as he ousted veteran Republican Charles Hedges, 73, by an unofficial county vote of 118,700 to 87,850.

In Quincy, it was 21,838 for Marshall and 11,178 for Hedges. Hedges has held the badge for 14 years defeating Democrat Peter McCormack who was appointed-not elected to the job-when Republican Samuel Wragg died in 1959.

The defeat of Hedges leaves Democrats in possession of every major office in a county that not too many years ago was a GOP stronghold.

Cerasoli, 27-year-old legislative assistant becomes Quincy's new face on Beacon Hill as he breezes by Sumner H. Given, 47-year-old North Weymouth electrical contractor to win the seat vacated by Marshall to run for sheriff.

Cerasoli polled 6,781 votes in the district to 2,180 for Given. Quincy gave Cerasoli 4,884 votes and Given 1,060.

Delahunt, 32-year-old Democrat, rolled up a vote of 5,412 to win a second term in the Fourth Norfolk District in a race that featured a battle of 11th hour flyer's between him and Herbert Reppucci, 59-year-old beauty salon operator running as an Independent.

Reppucci finished second with 2,665-2,747 behind.

Mrs. Joyce Baker, 46, president of the Quincy's Women's Republican Club was third with 1,678.

Rep. Joseph E. Brett, 67, won a ninth term, trouncing Republican Jens Thornton 6,670 to 1,819.

Rep. Thomas F. Brownell, 34, running unopposed for a second term in the Second Norfolk District, polled 7,349 votes.

Also running unopposed and their vote in Quincy:

State Treasurer Robert Q. Crane, 26,653; Auditor Thaddeus Buczeko, 26,845; Congressman James A. Burke, 29,079; Senator Arthur H. Tobin, 26,956; Dist. Atty. George G. Burke, 27,076 and County Commissioner Thomas K. McManus, 24,076.

The Kahian-Greco American Party team for governor-lieutenant governor got 2,044 votes in Quincy and the Gurwitz-Bivins Socialist Workers team, 312.

The Quincy vote on the referendum questions:

Question 1 - Yes, 16,091. No, 10,192. [Permits the state legislature to recess sessions up to 30 days.]

Question 2 - Yes, 21,065. No, 5,462. [To reduce the size of the Massachusetts House of Representatives from the present 240 members to 160.]

Question 3 - Yes, 16,091. No, 10,192. [Permits the state to offer grants to private colleges and universities and to their students.]

Question 4 - Yes, 16,019. No, 10,471. [Permits use of money in the highway fund for mass transportation.]

Question 5 - Yes, 16,674. No, 9,295. [Places further restrictions on campaign fund-raising by creating a five-member Corrupt Practices Commission.]

Question 6 - Yes, 20,448. No, 6,540. [Opinion on whether a Department of Health Systems Regulation should be created.]

Question 7 - [In the First Norfolk District only]: No, 2,917. Yes, 2,172 in Quincy and No, 4,056 and Yes, 3,646 in the district. [Expressing opposition or support to construction of an MBTA station in South Quincy.]

Series Of NQHS

Info Meetings Scheduled

A series of information sessions has been planned for the parents of elementary and junior high school children who will later attend North Quincy High School.

The School Committee has mailed 1,300 meeting invitations to the parents involved.

Six sessions have been scheduled in addition to the public hearing on the proposed building of a new North Quincy High School Thursday, Nov. 21.

City Councillor Dennis Harrington was to lead the first information session Wednesday for the parents of children now attending Atlantic Junior High and the Francis W. Parker School.

All other meetings will also take place at 7:30 p.m. according to the following schedule:

• Tonight [Thursday]: parents of children attending Montclair School, at the school.
• Monday: Squantum School parents.

• Tuesday: Quincy School and Miles Standish School parents at Quincy School.

• Thursday, Nov. 14: Central Junior High and Wollaston School parents at Central Junior High.

• Monday, Nov. 18: Mass. Fields School parents, at the school.

• Thursday, Nov. 21: Public hearing at Quincy Vocational Technical School.

$1,500 In Prizes Waiting

Can You Top These Heritage Contest Slogans?

Slogans for the $1,500 Quincy Heritage contests co-sponsored by the Quincy Savings Bank and The Quincy Sun are streaming in.

A number-of posters have been received also.

The winning slogan will become an auto bumper sticker. Deadline for both contests is Nov. 30.

Theme for both is "Quincy's Pride: Patriots, Presidents and Possibilities."

For each contest there is a $300 first prize, a $100 second prize, a $50 third prize, four $25 prizes and 20 $10 prizes.

That's 48 prizes in all: two $300, two $100, two $50, eight $25 and 40 $10.

One industrious resident, Joe McShane of 56 High St., South Quincy, has submitted 10 slogans. Among them: "Quincy: Birthplace of Statesmen, Builder of Ships" and "Quincy: Backbone of Granite Born To Endure".

Other samples taken at random:

Isabelle Mann, 55 South St., Quincy Center: "The Past Points To The Future".

Mrs. Kathryn M. Burke of 27 Willow Ave., Wollaston: "Quincy's Pride: Inherited From Patriots - Bequeathed To Posterity".

Burke Opposes Move

To Tax Disabled Vets Pensions

Congressman James A. Burke has sharply criticized Congressional proposals to impose, for the first time, taxes on the pensions of disabled military personnel.

Burke said he is unalterably opposed to such a tax and will lead the fight in the House Ways and Means Committee, on which he serves, to kill the proposal when Congress reconvenes in late November.

Burke added: "At a time when tax loopholes exist in the law which allow the oil companies to escape paying billions of dollars in taxes, it is unconscionable that Congress could even consider taxing the pensions of those who have suffered untold losses in the service of their country."

Applicants 'Eager'

3,000 Seek Work At Job Fair

Quincy's third Job Fair held last Saturday attracted an estimated 3,000 persons seeking employment.

Harold Davis, Chamber of Commerce economic development manager, described fair participants as "eager".

"They seemed to come earlier this year," he said. "There were about 400 people waiting outside before the doors opened at 10 a.m."

He said many companies noted the experience of the job applicants.

"Companies commented that the job seeker's background was the best in all three Job Fairs," Davis related.

A total of 40 companies and agencies representing some 400-500 job openings conducted preliminary interviews at the fair. Davis said that companies interested in an applicant usually contact the individual after the fair and conduct a second interview. He noted, however, that Jordan Marsh has already hired 15-20 people who attended the Job Fair.

The South Shore Council for Full Employment sponsored Saturday's Job Fair which was held in Quincy's Vocational Technical School gym.

The Council consists of representatives from the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, the Mass. Division of Employment Security, the Quincy Area Manpower Services, the Norfolk County Labor Council and the South Shore Woman's Caucus.

Also available at the Fair were several thousand job listings from Boston's Job Bank as well as "several hundred" job openings from fee-paid employment agencies.

Davis' office is now in the process of contacting every company and agency which participated in the Fair to attain an accurate count of the number of people who actually found employment at the Fair. The study, which will include a complete breakdown of jobs landed from companies, fee-paid employment agencies, and Boston's Job Bank, will be finished in two weeks, Davis said.

Ask Investigation Of Tidegate 'Tampering'

Rep Thomas Brownell and Councillor Leo Kelly have requested three city agencies to launch "an intensive investigation" to find out who is tampering with the Rockland St. tide gate bordering on the Houghs Neck marsh.

After receiving flooding complaints from residents, Brownell and Kelly investigated the area and discovered the half-inch metal tide gate had been smashed in two.

The pair have contacted Quincy Police Chief Francis X. Finn, Commissioner of Public Works James Ricciuti and Commissioner of Natural Resources Richard Koch, asking their aid in the search for the person "intent on sabotaging the tide gate."

Brownell noted that the same gate had been intentionally propped open with wooden planks less than a week before this most recent tampering incident.

Both Brownell and Kelly asked residents to report to the proper authorities any person seen tampering with the tide gate.

Sheets Opposes W. Quincy Elderly Housing Complex

Ward 4 Councillor James A. Sheets will oppose construction of a proposed eight-story, 107-unit housing complex for the elderly at the Miller and Copeland Sts., West Quincy.

Labelling West Quincy as "under siege by developers", Sheets said that the Miller-Copeland location proposed by Sprague Industries of Boston was "not the appropriate site." He said the front of the site would border a car wash and the northeasterly side, a gas station. The proposed site is also located across from a fire station, Sheets noted.

He said, "heavy traffic travelling down Miller St. and turning into Centre St. would flow "right in front" of car and pedestrian access to the project, hampering movement and creating "an unpleasant atmosphere because of the noise involved."

Sheets noted there is only one bus route along Centre St. He said, too, that the site is not a convenient one for shopping.

In order to build the proposed eight-story, 107-unit building, Sprague Industries would have to secure a variance changing the zoned land from Business "B" and "Residence "B". This present zoning allows for only a five-story building of 46 units. "West Quincy is under siege by developers who buy up small undeveloped pieces of land - often mixed with zoning - demolish the houses, and then build the maximum sized apartment or condominium," Sheets said.

The decision to locate an elderly housing unit at a certain site is one which should be made with "the people and their elected representatives working together," he said.

He said that he supports the development of elderly housing in West Quincy but would favor the investigation of alternate sites for the building of this particular housing project.

STRICTLY PERSONAL Be glad wife likes her dogs

By PAT and
MARILYN DAVIS
Copley News Service

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

My wife is great in most ways. She is an excellent cook, keeps our home neat and clean, and always has time to chauffeur our children to their various activities.

However, I do have a problem. A few years ago Marg suggested that we buy a dog for the children. I agreed that this was a good idea and she purchased a dalmatian pup. This puppy became an adult and had a family. We sold four and kept two. My wife then became interested in showing animals and spends, what I consider, too much time at dog shows, club meetings, etc. I've told her how I feel but she refuses to give up the dog business because she enjoys this activity so much.

I am tired of competing with dogs. I want my wife home more and I would just as soon have two less dogs. I can't understand all this time spent with the dogs.

Don

Dear Don:

Be glad your wife is spending her time participating in a harmless activity. We all need outside interests. Count your blessings and don't let your marriage go to the dogs.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

What can I do about a 30-year-old man who leaves his clothes where he steps out of them? We both work and I'm tired of picking up after Jim. I've asked him to be neat in 40 different ways. Nothing helps.

Do you have the answer?

Tired

Dear Tired:

The answer is that your husband was brought up this way. Nagging won't help. It will be easier for YOU if you pick up after him. It takes more energy to fight than it does to spend a few minutes hanging up pajamas and putting shorts in the clothes hamper.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

I've been married for six years. The first year was great; however, since that time, my husband has had seven or eight affairs that I know of and probably some I didn't find out about.

I have two children and can't decide which way to go. I feel unable to support my children and myself. Getting money from Fred would be like pulling teeth. As it is, we have a roof over our heads and food on the table. However, I am none too certain that I can live such a life. Should I try to cope or leave?

Sally

Dear Sally:

Only you can answer this question. Have you suggested counseling to your husband? A chronic chaser seldom improves without therapy. Your husband needs help although he may not realize it. He may picture himself as a great gift to women. When, in fact, he needs help with a sagging ego.

Today's Women

MINK IS ROMANTIC. young, always exciting. Feel the luxurious touch of this classic mink polo coat designed in SAGA mink from Scandinavia by Donald Brooks. Wear it casually over sportswear or with a glitzy belt and satin trousers for an evening at the theatre. The durability of mink allows it to be enjoyed anywhere, anytime.

MINK PACESETTERS: Two camel-dyed Saga Mink jackets teamed with knit... the perfect mates for today's wooly big skirts or pants. The jacket on the left by Pierre Cardin, the one on the right by Steven Burrows. Both manufactured by Michael Forrest.

CHECKLIST FOR MINK CARE

If you think mink is special, you're right. Its lightweight warmth and luster are like no other fur. And to keep your mink looking forever new, the Scandinavian Mink Association offers the following helpful hints:

- The most important thing to remember about mink is that it should never be exposed to heat... it damages the pelts. If your mink gets wet, just shake it out—never comb or brush it. Let it dry naturally in a cool place.

- Mink needs air. Give it plenty of hanging room. Use a broad-shouldered hanger and never store your mink in a plastic bag. During the summer months put your mink in cold storage with an experienced furrier.

- Mink is not compatible with spray perfume or hair spray. Neither does it like to be pinned with jewelry or corsages.

- Have your mink cleaned regularly by a fur specialist—about once a year if you live in the city, less often if you live in the country. Professional cleaning removes dirt, enlivens leather and brings back luster. It prolongs the life of the fur.

Mink today need not be something that comes out of the closet only on special occasions. Its beauty and practicality make it perfect for everyday wear. So treat your mink with respect and it will give you years of enjoyment.

Machine timing for knits

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

When you have a problem, you go to an expert, right? Well, this time the expert came to us, by phone, and here is what he said:

"Regarding the letter from one of your readers about skipped stitches on her machine, the advice you gave her was very good. However, if that does not solve her problem, there may be a couple of mechanical adjustments she needs to make.

"Knit requires perfect machine timing. It will give you trouble where woven fabrics won't; therefore, your machine may need to have the timing adjusted.

"The placement of the bobbin hook in relation to the needle is very important. It must be as close as possible to handle knits without skipping.

"Because knits are soft and flexible, they tend to move up and down with the needle which causes 'slack' in the thread loop." — Mr. Bob Wind, Bernina Sewing Machine Co., Overland Park, Kan.

ANALYSIS OF THE DRUNK DRIVER

New data has been added to the growing evidence that most persons arrested for drunken driving are basically problem people and not the occasional drinker who was unlucky enough to get caught.

An Oregon study of more than 1,000 convicted drunk drivers showed that many had a long history of personal problems, only one of which was drunken driving. The average blood alcohol level at the time of arrest was 0.21 percent — a level rarely attained among social drinkers, most of whom would be under the table at that level.

Other findings: One in four had criminal record; three in eight had a previous charge of drunkenness in public, not associated with driving; they had, as a group, three times as many previous traffic violations as the typical driver; one in four was driving with a suspended license or none at all.

ARIES: (March 21 to April 19 — Also Aries Ascendant) — Tensions appear to have eased. It's a good time to finish up old projects left hanging. Pay attention to details in legal matters — anything regarding contracts. Resist urge to just take off impulsively.

TAURUS: (April 20 to May 20 — Also Taurus Ascendant) — Remain calm and undisturbed in the face of problems. Use progressive techniques and methods in your vocational field. Be diplomatic and respectful with elders, superiors. You may reestablish an old relationship.

GEMINI: (May 21 to June 20 — Also Gemini Ascendant) — Use your versatility now to be active in several simultaneous areas. Opportunity for romance if you're single. Be understanding of children's problems. Guard health with rest and relaxation — get checkup if needed.

CANCER: (June 21 to July 22 — Also Cancer Ascendant) — Activity slows down. Catch up on home projects such as cleaning, redecorating, etc. Something started in the past that didn't "pan out" could come through now. Single Cancers may be tempted to tie the knot.

LEO: (July 23 to Aug. 22 — Also Leo Ascendant) — Lots of action this week. Good time to concentrate on creative writing, putting ideas down on paper. Home repairs, remodeling or redecorating are favored. Cooperate with children in school programs and activities.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22 — Also Virgo Ascendant) — Mate or partner is helpful with assisting in social obligations — don't reject advice. Buying things for the home, or clothing is favored. Ignore someone who may be chasing you in a romantic way — don't be disagreeable. Good news for someone in the family raises your spirits signaling a day off.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22 — Also Libra Ascendant) — Your recent cycle of inner change is culminating now and you can act upon things you've only thought about before. Finances are emphasized favorably. Possibility of monetary reward for past performance. Curb extravagance.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 23 to Nov.

21 — Also Scorpio Ascendant) — You could emerge victorious in a personal matter. Present your ideas and projects to superiors with authority but not aggression. Follow your sensitive knowing regarding relationships, but don't be suspicious.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21 — Also Sagittarius Ascendant) — New responsibilities of a public nature appear likely. Some honor or recognition is likely now too. Enjoy social life, but don't neglect reliability on the job. Rely on your own judgment regarding love matters.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19 — Also Capricorn Ascendant) — A job of work that has taken a long time should culminate now, bringing great relief. Relationships with mate take on a rosy glow as you have more time to spend with loved ones. A lucky time for you!

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18 — Also Aquarius Ascendant) — You are in the spotlight now. Popularity is high and you receive compliments. Give credit where credit is due for the success you now enjoy. Love could blossom — look at your romantic partner realistically.

PISCES: (Feb. 19 to March 20 — Also Pisces Ascendant) — Single Pisceans could marry now. Married ones could add to the family! You are formulating a philosophy of life inside yourself now — remember that all plans must be backed by honesty and integrity. Don't go in debt.

HOLLYWOOD HOTLINE

Andy, Claudine going to Europe

By NANCY ANDERSON
Copley News Service

ANDY WILLIAMS

HOLLYWOOD — While he was appearing at Caesars Palace recently, Andy Williams brought Claudine and the kids to Vegas for the 11th birthday of daughter Noelle, whose birthday party was held aboard the Caesars Palace yacht on Lake Meade. At Christmas time, Andy will treat the children to their first trip to Europe. He, Claudine and their tots will explore London together and then go to Gstaad, Switzerland, to spend Christmas Day and the rest of the holiday season in a castle.

If this sounds as though Andy and Claudine have resolved their marital problems and are living together again, don't be misled. They are still theoretically estranged though they may be the friendliest separation on record.

When Elvis appeared in Des Moines, a woman being fed introvenously in preparation for surgery was allowed to leave her hospital bed to attend the show since both she and her doctor were Elvis fans. Then, when El got to Niagara Falls, two policemen were so badly trampled by fans they were admitted to a hospital. Or so I hear from someone on the tour. In the same town, an usherette was pinned against a wall by Presley enthusiasts and was rescued by Elvis himself assisted by one of his "boys." So I guess she considered her experience worthwhile.

Mr., Mrs. Guy Faiella Observe 41st Anniversary

Nearly 400 relatives, friends and city officials attended the 41st wedding anniversary party held recently in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Faiella of 166 South St., Quincy Point.

The celebration was held at the George F. Bryan VFW Post in Quincy. An Italian dinner was served.

The Faiellas were married Oct. 22, 1933 in St. Peter's Church, Malden. Mrs. Faiella is the former Catherine Marie Migliozi of Malden.

Several members of the original bridal party attended the party: Miss Jeanette Colangeli, maid-of-honor; Mrs. Ida DiSalvo of Quincy, Mrs. Inez Manicini of Quincy, Mrs. Margaret Ghetty of Quincy and Mrs. Rose Ripa, Mrs. Faiella's sister, of California, all bridesmaids.

Ring bearer Louis Faiella also attended.

Members of Mr. Faiella's immediate family in attendance were Americo and Edward Faiella, brothers, and Jenny Sandomato, sister, accompanied by their spouses.

Relatives attending included the DiNicola, Ghetty, Pasquale, Faiella, Pettinelli, Sandomato, Giglio, Cook, Petrellis, DelPrete and Carullo families.

Officials attending included Mayor Walter J. Hannon, City Clerk John Gillis, Quincy District Court Clerk Dennis Ryan, Dist. Atty. George Burke, Police Chief Francis X. Finn, Fire Chief Edward Barry, Sheriff Charles Hedges, City Councilor-Rep. Clifford Marshall, Democratic candidate for state representative Robert Cerasoli, nephew and godchild of the Faiellas.

The Faiellas received a special citation from the House of Representatives, presented to them by Cerasoli.

Faiella, born in Chicago, came to Quincy in 1911. He has worked for the Malden, Quincy and Boston Arenas, for Stetson Fuel, General Dynamics Shipyard and Quincy Oil Co. He retired from Quincy Oil five years ago. He is now the chairman of the Quincy Board of Registrars.

The Faiella have been living at their present address for 34 years.

Miss Edith Cole Honored At Tea

More than 200 guests attended a retirement tea held recently in honor of Miss Edith L. Cole.

During the past 41 years, Miss Cole served as secretary to four Quincy High School principals: Ernest Collins, George Wilson, Edmund King and Lloyd Creighton, current principal of Quincy High.

Miss Cole received a dozen red roses and a "money bouquet" collected from the secretarial staff, teachers, former teachers and friends.

School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon as well as Wilson and Donald MacDonald, former assistant principal, paid tribute to Miss Cole.

St. Joseph's Mothers To Hear Food Lecture

Miss Shirley R. Grahame of the Boston Gas Consumer Information Division will present a program entitled, "Energy Ways - Energy Wise" to the St. Joseph Mother's Guild, Nov. 13 at 8 p.m. at St. Joseph's School Hall, Pray St., Quincy Point.

This is a food lecture which will not only give the members tips on planning and preparing interesting meals but, more important, with the energy shortage in mind, Miss Grahame will suggest many ways of saving fuel at the range and throughout the whole house.

This is just one of a wide variety of programs presented to men's and women's organizations by this division of Boston Gas.

Chairlady of the event is Mrs. Robert McBride of Quincy.

Market Report

Save Food Money:

Take A Computer To Market

If your arithmetic is reasonably good, and you can remember how many pints in a quart and ounces to a pound, you can save a goodly amount on your food budget by wise comparison shopping, says the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture [MDA].

If it is, and you can, you'll do even better with a pocket calculator. But if numbers are not your thing, you're at the mercy of the packaging industry, and you'd better bring a friend - plus a calculator.

For a one-ounce serving of corn flakes, for instance, you can pay two prices in the same store. You'll pay one price per ounce if you buy the 18-ounce package. And you'll pay twice as much per ounce if you buy the one-ounce single-serving boxes. And it's not a rip-off, either: Packaging 18 individual ounces costs a great deal more than boxing them all together.

The same kind of thing happens with mayonnaise and salad dressings. Two pint jars will cost you as much as 35 cents more than getting both pints in a single quart jar. The examples are endless. But none of this is a secret. Just check the unit prices on the supermarket shelves and see for yourself without a calculator.

The cost of packaging materials - glass, plastic, paper, printing - has risen enormously, along with the price of food. As a general rule, then, the larger package of food you buy, the more you can save.

Once, in the dear, dead days almost beyond recall, one found Oreo cookies displayed in large, square boxes, and bought them by the pound, in a paper bag. Pickles came in a barrel, and the clerk fished out the ones you wanted. Now you pick the same cookies or pickles off the shelf - attractively packed - and throw away the packages.

This is not to suggest that we return to those Depression days, nor to put the knock on the packaging industry. But wasteful we are, and it costs.

Look for specials on fowl this week, says the MDA, and on native Massachusetts Cortland apples, and cranberries. Bananas are cheaper - down around 15 cents a pound, from a recent high of more than 25 cents. Large grapefruit are selling eight for a dollar. Locally-grown cabbage, potatoes, yellow turnips and the native squashes are all good buys.

Eat well!

Boy Scouts Organize Bloodmobile Donations

Paul Palmer of 33 Mt. Vernon St., West Quincy, recently conducted a Mobile Blood Donor Center in the driveway of his home.

Paul, a member of Troop 32 of the Boy Scouts of America, wanted to become an Eagle Scout and needed 21 hours of community service to do so.

He contacted the Greater Quincy Red Cross Chapter and arranged to have the mobile unit at his home. Paul then recruited and registered 35 donors and distributed literature and pins.

Of those donors, 21 were productive. Six donors were deferred due to medical reasons and eight cancelled. Quincy residents contributing blood were:

Alfred M. Aimola, Richard L. Desrosiers, Robert M. DiSalle, James F. Duffy, John K. Fagerlund, William T. Hayes, Paul W. Hogan, Roberta M. Johnson, Richard A. Kelly, Gail M. Mattulina, Robert P. McEvoy, Phyllis L. McLaughlin, Dan A. McLaughlin, Valerie

Palmer, James A. Sheets, Agnes Shepard, Garrett E. Supple and Robert P. Tocchio. Also contributing were Irene Supple, Mass. State Employee; Fred E. Reynolds, Orphans Hope Lodge; and Martin L. Goldstein, Zerrubabel Lodge.

FORMER MAYOR Thomas Burgin listens pensively as Rabbi Jacob Mann in tribute to him says, "You are a blessing to our community". Standing at rear is City Council President-Senator Arthur Tobin.

Tom Burgin, This Is Your Life!

'Is There Something Going On Tonight I Don't Know About?'

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Tom Burgin, who began his political career as the "Boy Scout Candidate", attended Monday night's City Council meeting thinking he was supposed to be there to say something about the controversial windows at the Adams Academy.

He is a member of the Adams Temple and School Fund so there was nothing to get suspicious about.

But he started wondering when while waiting for the meeting to start, he became aware of a lot of old friends showing up in the Council Chamber.

He turned to Council President Arthur Tobin and asked: "Is something going on here tonight that I don't know about?"

Tobin, who had plotted with Rev. John Graham what was soon to come off, looked him straight in the eye and fibbed: "They're going to talk about the Adams Academy windows, too. And there's also come Chamber of Commerce stuff."

Then, before you could say Ralph Edwards, Tobin was on his feet saying: "This is your life, Tom Burgin."

And the crowd was on its feet, too, giving the startled guest of honor a standing ovation.

The occasion was the 50th anniversary of Thomas Scudder Burgin's entrance into politics and public service when at the age of 22 in 1924 he was elected Ward 1 councillor.

His political career since included: city council presidency, four terms as Plan A mayor [running unopposed in 1940 the only time that has happened in Quincy's history], one term as Quincy's first Plan E mayor, state representative and state senator, the latter in 1961-1962.

Three mayors-incumbent Walter J. Hannon and former chief executives Amelio Della Chiesa and James R. McIntyre—were among those giving tribute.

Rabbi Jacob Mann of Beth Israel Synagogue who gave the invocation, let the guest of honor immediately know that everyone there meant business:

"You are a blessing to our community," he said. "A true and generous friend. You did not take anything away from anyone. You can truly say, 'My hands are clean and pure.'"

From a sideroom over loud speakers came the voices of 10 hidden friends out of Burgin's past:

Russell Smollett, Quincy Savings Bank executive, and former employee of Burgin's; former Deputy Fire Chief

Robert Fenby; Richard Porter, lifelong friend; former Councillor Carl Anderson, City

Auditor Alexander Smith, Floyd Folmsbee, of the Quincy YMCA; Forrest I. Neal, of the MBTA Board of Directors; Rev. Bedros Baharian of Quincy Point Congregational Church; Della Chiesa and McIntyre.

"He was not a run of the mill politician but a master statesman whose name will go down in history with John Adams and John Quincy Adams," said Anderson.

"You are a person with deep integrity, considerate of others and held in high esteem," said Della Chiesa.

"Your humility, your humanity has benefited all of us and elevated Quincy's political life," said McIntyre.

Presentations to Burgin included:

A City Council resolve presented by John Quinn, "Dean" of the council, expressing the council's "sincere and profound appreciation" to Burgin, a resolve from the Massachusetts senate sponsored by Tobin and presented by McIntyre, a caricature from Ward 3 Councillor John Lydon into which Burgin's home has been redistricted and a plaque from Mayor Hannon.

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly introduced a resolve to name the intersection of Upland Rd. and Dimmock St. "Thomas S. Burgin Square" with a suitable engraved plaque.

Each city councillor stood to pay a personal tribute.

Friends—some old, some new—seated in the audience included: Massachusetts Supreme Court Judge Paul Reardon, George Reardon, president South Shore Chamber of Commerce, Robert Faxon, Frank Remick, Joseph Grossman, George Bonsall, A. Wendell Clark, Dr. Morgan Sargent, Z. Cranston Smith, Maurice Hughes, Hobart Holly, Rep. Joseph Brett, Rep. Thomas Brownell, former Councillors Frank McCauley, Charles Shea and Vincent Smyth, Kenneth Hills, George Wilson and George Ramsden of the Quincy Kiwanis Club, Fire Chief Edward Barry, former Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, Eric Swider, executive vice-president South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

Also attending were members of the Wollaston Glee Club who sang several numbers.

"These 50 years have been an experience I will never forget," said Burgin. "Tonight I feel more humble than I have ever in my life. I don't deserve this. This tribute cannot help but touch my heart."

Burgin recalled telling his father he planned to run for the Ward 1 seat Perley Barbour was giving up to, make a bid [successful] for mayor in 1924.

"Go ahead and run," his father told him. "If you win, the experience will be tremendous. If you lose, the licking will do you good."

Commenting on the Kelly resolve to name the corner of Upland Rd and Dimmock St. he noted: "Gosh, I appreciate that, but they usually wait until you're dead to do something like that, don't they?"

He recalled that when he first ran and won his slogan was: "On My Honor, I Will Do My Best."

"I was called the Boy Scout candidate because of that. It was the greatest thing that ever happened to me."

Now a young looking 72, he had this bit of advice for today's young city councillors and others:

"Take your job serious. Do it well. Be thankful you have an opportunity to serve your community."

Words of wisdom from an old pro.

Dorothy Lamour Should Have Been There

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Dorothy Lamour—or at least her sarong—should have been at City Hall the other night when they honored former Mayor-Senator-Councillor Thomas Burgin.

The occasion was the 50th anniversary of his election to the City Council and there were a lot of good friends and fond memories as he was surprised by the City Council with a "This Is Your Life" honor.

You may think of Bob Hope and Bing Crosby when you catch Dottie Lamour in a late, late TV movie but I also think of Tom Burgin and the day he and I shared her in Quincy. And that isn't bad sharing.

It was back in 1942 when Dottie was in "The Road To Victory"—making personal appearances selling war bonds. She came to Quincy, played to a full house at Veterans Memorial Stadium and sold—get this—$4,399,953 in war bonds in a few hours.

I was just starting out in the newspaper business and got to interview her—my first big moment with a celebrity.

"How are you?", she smiled as we were introduced. I froze.

"I-I-I-I", I stammered. It looked like the shortest interview in newspaper history until she came to my rescue.

"Isn't Quincy lovely?" she purred. "I think it's a wonderful place. And the people are so friendly. It's one of the nicest cities I've ever been in."

"How do you like Quincy?" I asked—realizing too late that she had just told me. She giggled.

She led me through the entire interview—actually interviewing herself—so that a young cub reporter could get what to him was his first big story.

Tom Burgin was mayor then and escorted her through the city and introduced her to the crowd. And I can still see him with his arm around her.

Well, 11 years later I met Dottie in a Boston nightclub and we had a good laugh together. And just to tease me, while her husband William Howard smiled, she slipped an arm through mine, pulled me to her, and said: "Come on you're not a cub anymore."

Apparently Tom Burgin made an impression on her.

And as we chatted and reminisced about her visit to Quincy, she said: "You know, I really did enjoy Quincy. And tell me, how is that cute mayor!"

★★★

WELL, you'd have to say that Mike Dukakis and Si Spaulding really campaigned right down to the wire. On Tuesday, election day morning, both were at the Quincy Center MBTA station shaking hands. Dukakis also visited the General Dynamics shipyard.

★★★

GRACE SAPHIR had them guessing on election day. Coffee, with her compliments, was served to poll workers. And she had stickers which said merely, "Saphir". No office designation...but maybe getting ready for either mayor or councillor at-large in next year's city election?

★★★

NICE GESTURE DEPT: The North Quincy Associates ran far short of money to hold their Halloween party for area youngsters. But several city officials and businessmen dug down into their pockets at the last minute and came up with more than enough to make the party a success. They included: Mayor Walter Hannon, Senator Arthur Tobin, Councillor Dennis Harrington, Coletta Brothers, North Quincy, Inc. and DeMatteo Construction Co.

★★★

NORTH QUINCY'S Joe Gildea must be the envy of a lot of New England Patriots' fans. He's assistant to Pats PR Director Pat Horne and you can find him every Sunday in the press box. Joe has been with the Pats since they first started 12 years ago. And before that for 30 years was assistant to Frank Ryan, who used to broadcast the Bruins games. Some guys really get the good jobs.

WILLIAM ASH, outgoing commander of the Quincy Veterans Council, got a nice standing ovation at the luncheon at The Hollow following the Veterans Day parade and exercises.

He noted that next year, Veterans Day will return to Nov. 11 and expressed hope that Memorial Day will again be celebrated May 30. We're with him. Frankly, we think they've monkeyed around enough with our holidays.

★★★

MILESTONE: Mrs. Elizabeth J. Powers of Phipps St. has the distinction of becoming the 1000th member of the Quincy Historical Society. So reports William O'Connell, vice-president and membership chairman. O'Connell notes that Mrs. Powers grew up on an historic Quincy site—the Marsh homestead on School St. where once a lace factory stood.

★★★

GO WEST young man, Horace Greeley once said. And the old boy knew what he was talking about. Dr. George Scrimshaw, plastic surgeon and Quincy High School class of 1942 graduate, was on for a visit last week from the West Coast. And reported that in San Francisco, street cleaners are now making—get this—$22,000 per year.

Quincy JWV, Beth Israel Breakfast Sunday

The Quincy Jewish War Veterans and Beth Israel Brotherhood will hold their annual joint worship breakfast Sunday morning, Nov. 10, at Beth Israel Synagogue, Grafton St., Quincy Point.

Rabbi Jacob Mann will conduct the worship service at 8:30 a.m. The breakfast will be at 9:30 a.m. A short memorial service will be held.

Guest speaker will be Albert Schlossberg of Canton, Past National Commander of the Jewish War Veterans of the USA. He is chairman of the Media Commission of the Jewish Community Council of Metropolitan Boston, Past President Temple Shalom of Milton and has received awards and honors. He was co-recipient with Cardinal Richard Cushing and John Kenneth Galbreath of B'nai B'rith, Man of the Year in 1966.

Arnold Levine is Jewish War Veterans Commander, Morton Arons, president of Beth Israel Brotherhood. Past Commander Irving Isaacson is program chairman.

●Youth Speaks Out

● Even though trick-or-treat time is over, there still are a lot of scary people walking around.

● At Quincy High School people dressed up for Halloween, which may be a preview of the prom.

● Fall is upon us - leaves scattering away from the trees and politicians scattering away from the issues.

● Pity Great Western Sugar Corporation, their profits are only up 1200%.

● Muhammed Ali may have a big mouth, but it certainly wasn't a big enough target for George Foreman.

● If you should bite into a hot dog and one part of it is sawdust, don't be upset. After all in these times of inflation it's difficult to make both ends meet.

Panic Buttons.

Without the United Way, that's what doorbells would be. Because without it, the 200 agencies it supports would be ringing yours constantly.

Luckily enough, the United Way is still with us. But in order to continue to provide crucial social and health care services in your neighborhood, they need more money this year. Your money.

So before you sign a United Way pledge card at work or pass some cash through the door at home, remember that your one contribution not only helps one out of three of your neighbors, it keeps your doorbell from becoming a panic button all year round.

Quincy's Heritage And John Adams

'It Was Here America Learned To Crawl. . . Then To Walk'

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

greatest idea ever to emerge from a man's mind.

"John Adams not only helped to create a country," Hannon said. "It was this man from Quincy who called forth the fundamental truth of American freedom."

U.S. Navy Commander James Schneider presented the presidential wreath to the mayor and lauded John Adams as "an impetuous man...devoted to the causes he espoused." The wreath was later placed on the Adams' tomb in United First Parish Church where John Adams, sixth president John Quincy Adams and their wives are buried.

Although the day [Oct. 30] dawned raw and wet from an early-morning storm, a crowd of about 300 gathered in Quincy Square at 9:30 a.m. to hear patriotic musical selections played by both the Quincy and North Quincy High School Bands.

Throughout the hour-and-one-half ceremony, women from the Quincy Women's Club Juniors - dressed in colonial garb - served coffee and pastries to the crowd. The pastries were provided by the school system's Culinary Arts Department headed by Edward Repucci.

Helping the women were young boys dressed in knickerbockers and three-cornered hats and little girls decked in ruffled dresses and colonial bonnets.

The Charlestown Militia Fife and Drum Corps - complete with a pipe-smoking drummer - entertained from the steps of the historic church.

The audience included 23 fourth graders from the Merrymount School and 26 seventh graders from Central Junior High School.

Gathered around the speaker's podium were Mayor Hannon, McIntyre, Commander Schneider, Senator-City Council President Arthur Tobin and City

During ceremonies honoring the 239th birthday of Quincy-born patriot and president John Adams, keynote speaker James McIntyre sketched Quincy's vibrant and proud heritage but warned of "the trap" of complacency and inaction.

The former Mayor and Senator said last week:

"As our Bicentennial celebration draws near and Quincy's own 350th birthday next year, we must not fall into the trap of thinking our work is done and we may rest.

"Two-hundred years from now, the nation's citizens must not look back at our celebration today and say that we just held a two-year-long birthday party for ourselves.

"On the contrary, I hope that they can say...that we utilized the Bicentennial to rejuvenate ourselves through projects of ageless value."

He urged local businesses and civic organizations to commit themselves to community-oriented programs which would enhance the heritage of Quincy.

"Quincy, once again, must take the lead in showing the nation how to celebrate a Birthday Party that will always be worth remembering," he said.

Calling our second president "a prime sculptor" of our nation, McIntyre praised John Adams as the originator of the then-outlandish concept of self-government. McIntyre said:

"It was right here in Quincy, Mass. where infant America first learned to crawl. Then to walk. And finally, through the American Revolution, to stand on its own two feet, asking no quarter from mother England and giving none."

Mayor Walter J. Hannon, in accepting the traditional presidential wreath marking the birthday of Adams, also extolled the second president's concept of self-government as "the Councillors Leo Kelly, Dennis Harrington, James Sheets, John J. Lydon, Clifford Marshall and Rep. Thomas Brownell.

Prior to the delivered speeches, Tobin and Kelly presented American Revolutionary Bicentennial Flags to long distance runners from the 30 schools throughout Quincy. The runners, both male and female, then carried the flags to the city schools which conducted simultaneous flag-raising ceremonies at 10:30 a.m.

Youngsters from the Atlantic Junior High School Chorus, under the direction of Mrs. Marion Clancy, then refreshingly performed two snappy, cheery songs. In one song they pledged, "Under the umbrella of the red, white and blue, we'll do our best in every test of democracy - united as Americans." In the other they asked, "What's more American than Corn Flakes? I am! I am! I am!"

They also performed the serious, slow-tempo "Exodus", singing, "I see a land where children can run free, so take my hand and walk this lovely land with me."

To close the ceremony, members of the Air Force Junior ROTC from Quincy High School raised the American flag and the American Revolution Bicentennial Flag together on the City Hall flagpole as the North Quincy High School Band played "God Bless America".

The ceremony then culminated with the symbolic firing of 13 cannon rounds by the Charlestown Militia, in honor of the 13 original American colonies. During the firing, the Quincy High School Band played the "Star Spangled Banner" and the presidential wreath was placed on the Adams' tomb.

It was a day for Quincy to proudly hold hands with the past and to hopefully look to the future.

CLOUD OF SMOKE fills the air as the Charlestown Militia fires one of 13 deafening rounds of cannon fire sounded in honor of the 13 original American Colonies.

NQHS Language Dept. Presents Variety Program

In observance of American Education Week, the World Language Department of North Quincy High School presented to the public a variety program in which 30 students participated.

This event was organized and presided over by Mrs. Nancy Kelly, teacher of French and Spanish.

A humorous skit, "Un Norteamericano en Mexico", co-directed by the Misses Anyarita Martiak and Maria D'Arcangelo, with the assistance of Miss Betty Ann Cullinan as drama consultant, opened the program.

This was followed by a presentation of slides on Germany by Miss Kathleen Hutchinson, with a running commentary made by a student in her class. Six French songs, by a second-year French class, under the direction of Mrs. Lucy Medaglia, head of the World Language Department, concluded the program.

Typical European refreshments prepared by students and teachers were served after the performance.

Panarelli Distinguished Cadet

Cadet John P. Panarelli, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas A.

Panarelli of 623 Quincy Shore Drive, North Quincy, has been named a distinguished military cadet in his Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps (AFTOTC) unit at Norwich University, Northfield, Vt.

Panarelli was selected for the honor in recognition of his "outstanding leadership, high moral character, military bearing and scholastic achievement."

He is working toward a degree in business administration and will be eligible for a commission as an Air Force second lieutenant upon completion of his AFROTC requirements and graduation from college. He was graduated in 1971 from North Quincy High School.

League Of Women Voters Launches Financial Drive

The Quincy League of Women Voters has launched a financial drive throughout the business and professional community in an effort to raise at least $1,300 for League programs.

Mrs. Jane Sullivan of 60 Buckingham Ave., Wollaston and Mrs. Mary Flavin of 45 Albion Rd., Wollaston are co-chairmen of the drive.

The League is presently involved in a study of health care delivery in Quincy. The League recently completed a study of handgun control and will make its findings available to the public.

Wednesday, Oct. 30 marks a special meeting at Adams Shore Library during which local and state political figures as well as representatives from Common Cause will discuss the six referendum questions on the Nov. 5 ballot.

The League's Observer Corps, which regularly attends City Council and School Committee meetings, is in the process of publishing a booklet listing the times and places of all city board meetings.

The League of Women Voters is dedicated to the idea of keeping government - national, state and local - responsive to the needs of all its citizens through an informed and involved citizenry.

President of the League is Mrs. Janet Poole and vice-president is Mrs. Ida Cutler. Anyone wishing to join the organization - male or female - should contact Membership Chairman Mrs. Agnes Cooney of 40 Cushing Ave., Wollaston.

Wollaston Mothers Club To Hold Christmas Workshop

Members of the Wollaston Mothers Club will participate in a Christmas workshop at the Franklin E. and Jessie Dawes Memorial, Quincy Shore Drive, today [Thursday] from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m.

The workshop is to prepare for the fourth Art and Hobby Fair to take place Nov. 16 at St. Chrysostom's Parish Hall from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. Proceeds will benefit the scholarship fund for Quincy students.

Mrs. Arthur Rochelle Jr. is chairman of the Christmas workshop. Hostessing the event will be the Literary and Arts Committee. Members should bring their lunch. Coffee will be supplied.

Wollaston School PTA To Hear Dr Luleen Anderson

Dr. Luleen Anderson, director of the Quincy Team at South Shore Mental Health Center, will be the guest speaker at the first open meeting of the Wollaston School PTA Monday.

Dr. Anderson will speak on "Children and How They Grow" beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the school auditorium. She will discuss such topics as peer pressure and influences on children from outside the school. Following a question and answer period, cake and coffee will be served.

For the past two years, Dr. Anderson has worked with groups of parents and teachers in the Quincy school system as chief consultant to its Department of Pupil Personnel Services. Interested friends as well as PTA members are welcome to attend her lecture.

Den 6, Pack 14 Cub Scouts Visit Sun

Five Quincy cub scouts from Den 6, Pack 14 of the Wollaston Congregational Church, recently visited The Quincy Sun office to learn the workings of a newspaper.

Edmund O'Riordan, James Garrity, Ryo Hirose, Albert Coletta and Brian Shea toured The Quincy Sun's production department and watched newsstories being written, set into type and pasted into final form in the paste-up department.

The scouts were accompanied by their den mother Mrs. Diane O'Riordan. The boys meet once a week at 333 Adams St., Quincy, the home of their den mother.

The youngsters had the opportunity to observe the setting of a newsstory headline on the headliner machine and they were also able to read a finished copy of a newsstory relating their visit to the office.

Each scout received a complimentary copy of this week's Quincy Sun before leaving the office.

Airman Glenn Ball On Security Duty

Airman Glenn D. Ball Jr., son of retired Technical Sgt. and Mrs. Glenn D. Ball of 50 Hamilton St., Wollaston, has graduated at Lackland AFB, Tex., from the U.S. Air Force security policeman course conducted by the Air Training Command.

Ball, who was trained in security and law enforcement, is being assigned to Dover AFB, Del., for duty with a unit of the Military Airlift Command. He attended Quincy Vocational Technical High School.

UNICEF Films Now Available At Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library now has a collection of 16 millimeter UNICEF films available for circulation to the public.

The films deal with UNICEF's activities in many parts of the world, and the collection contains films suitable for all age groups, from pre-school children to adults.

One film that would appeal to the very youngest children is "Bozo's Adventures in Ecuador", in which Bozo the Clown visits a small boy who lives high in the Andes Mountains, where a school and a health center have recently been built.

Another film for this age level is "Paper Kite", a charming puppet film about a little Norwegian boy who brings the marvels of UNICEF assistance to needy children, with the aid of his magic kite.

Older children will enjoy "Village On Stilts", the story of a boy in the Republic of Dahomey, Africa, or "A Grain of Sand", which features a day in the life of a Tunisian youngster.

Films on the adult level include "When a Man Hungers", an excellent documentary of the 1966-67 drought in Bihar, India. People of all ages will enjoy "Danny Kaye - The Pied Piper", starring Danny Kaye as he clowns his way into the hearts of children everywhere.

The films may be borrowed by anyone who holds an adult library card.

Mayor Kills Cable TV Contract

The board said it was the latter, that "motivated this advisory board, to work so diligently to develop a contract which included these amenities. To now settle for so much less at a higher cost to subscribers seems to be a giant step backwards. We, the advisory board, feel that the City of Quincy is ready for cable television but that cable television is not ready for our city and its needs."

Signing the recommendation were advisory board Chairman Paul Ricca, of Quincy's CETA program, Warren Watson of the Thomas Crane Public Library, Arthur Gillis of the Quincy Public Schools, and Pearl B. Andrews of the Quincy Housing Authority. Councillor Warren Powers and Quincy Fire Alarm Supt. John Smock did not sign the recommendation.

Mayor Hannon said he would like to see cable television in Quincy, but that the system would have to meet the long term cable needs of the community.

"There are still serious questions to be asked about technological limitations of cable television and the ability to deliver this service to subscribers at a reasonable price," Hannon said.

Youth Gets 8-Point Buck

Seventeen-year-old Joseph Taylor of Wollaston bagged a 180-pound, 8-point buck while hunting in Sandwich, N.H. Sunday.

A senior at North Quincy High School, he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Taylor of 7 Albion Rd.

His father and five other men were in the party but young Taylor was the only one to bring back a prize.

It was the second deer for him. His first was also in New Hampshire when he was only 12.

He plans to return to the woods this weekend in hopes of landing a bear.

● Junior Football Central, A-N In Tie

The Atlantic-North ninth grade team kept a slim lead in the Quincy Junior High School football league following a scoreless tie last week with Central.

A-N has a 4-1-2 record, followed by Sterling, 3-0-3, and Central, 3-1-3. Both defenses were outstanding with North holding Central on the 10 one time. The game ended with North on Central's seven.

The eighth grade teams also played to a scoreless tie, enabling Central to keep a close lead over Broadmeadows. Central is 4-1-1 and Broadmeadows 4-1-2. Central once held on its seven-yard line and another time Central fumbled on A-N's 15.

Earlier last week the Broadmeadows ninth graders had wallpopped Point, 34-14. Mark Giordani, Kevin Connors, Ron Donovan, Frank Dragone and Tony DelGrecco had the winners' touchdowns and Donovan and Giordani added two-point conversions. Michael Breen and Michael Cortese scored the Point touchdowns and Breen added the points.

Broadmeadows eighth grade team won, 14-6, with Mickey Drew running 50 yards for the first BM touchdown and Jack Campbell adding the conversion. Peter Griffin scored for Point but the try for points failed and Campbell scored the second BM touchdown.

The seventh grade season had ended the previous week with Broadmeadows and Sterling city co-champions with 5-1 records.

● Youth Football St. Gregory's Clinches Title

St. Gregory's Raiders clinched the Quincy Youth Football League championship Sunday with a 12-0 win over the Quincy Elks. The win was the fifth in a row for the Raiders and their third successive shutout.

The Raiders' outstanding defensive unit again played a great game with Jim DeLuca coming up with his fifth pass interception. Capt. Brian Murphy recovered two fumbles.

Jackie Boyle scored his fourth touchdown on a reverse and Jackie Moran passed to Dan Knee for 30 yards and the other touchdown. It was Knee's first touchdown reception.

The North Quincy Apaches defeated the Quincy Point Panthers, 14-0, Jim Halloran passed to Rickey Gale for the first touchdown and Halloran rolled out for 12 yards and the second touchdown. Gale rushed for the two-point conversion.

Standouts defensively were Jimmy Nazaro, Paul Barry, Bobby Gordon and Jeff Teriaut. Sunday the Raiders will attempt to complete their first unbeaten season since joining the league when they face the Apaches at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Rocked Raiders Host Tough Waltham

North Quincy's football team faces a rough assignment Saturday when it tries to snap a two-game losing streak against once-beaten Waltham, a Division One and Suburban League power, in a 1:30 p.m. game at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The Raider's job, hard enough at full strength, was made all the more difficult last week when its outstanding runner, Brian Doherty, was injured early in the third period and forced to sit out the rest of the game as North was upset by underdog Brookline, 7-0.

"When Brian, who had run well as usual in the first half, went out, our attack sputtered and I feel I have myself to blame," Coach Ralph Frazier said. "I had depended too much upon him and he was out workhorse on offense. It is extremely doubtful that he will play against Waltham and this isn't going to help us at all against a strong club like Waltham.

"However, we have some other fine running backs who do a good job filling in for Brian and we will work hard with them during the week."

Doherty, who had gained over 100 yards in every game and over 130 in three, had picked up 71 yards last week before being sidelined.

Frazier hailed quarterback Mike Meehan for another fine game on offense and ends Mark Reale and Cooper Jordan also were singled out for their performances.

"We just made too many mistakes on offense and the defense also broke down on occasion in the first half," Frazier admitted. "We made some adjustments in the second half and the defense in particular was outstanding." North held Brookline three times deep in Raider territory.

Brookline drove 68 yards for its touchdown the first time it had the ball, Paul Piatelli scoring from the one and Ralph Castain kicking the point.

North came right back and went all the way to the Brookline four for a first down but fumbled on the two.

Meehan took to the air several times but wasn't given enough protection as the big Brookline line hounded him.

Presidents Face Brockton

By TOM SULLIVAN

In past years defense was one of the strong points of the Quincy football teams but this year it is giving Coach Hank Conroy fits.

In the season's opener Dedham mauled the Presidents, 40-6, the most points scored against Quincy since 1966.

Two weeks ago Malden blasted them, 54-22, believed to be most points ever scored against Quincy.

Last week most people expected Quincy to rebound against an in and out Weymouth North team, but the Presidents again were walloped, 26-8, the most points scored by Weymouth in some time.

And things get worse for Quincy every week. All it has to do this Saturday is face Brockton's powerful Super Bowl champions in a 1:30 Suburban League game at Brockton's Marciano Stadium.

Although Brockton has lost two games this year, both outside the league, it still ranks as a Division One power and Conroy isn't at all pleased that it was upset last week by Leominster, 17-7.

Brockton, unbeaten the past two years, was shocked by Natick, 21-14, in its season's opener, but came back to roll over New Bedford, 32-0; Newton North, 40-7; Weymouth North, 28-0 and Brookline, 46-19.

"We are not going up there to lose and we are hopeful of giving them a good game," Conroy said. "We had a fine series with them before it ended a few years ago and since then we have had some great scrimmages. But, they will be tougher than ever after losing to Leominster. We'll just give it the best we have and hope it will be good enough."

Conroy felt that Preston Carroll, hampered by a bad knee, and Paul Ramponi ran well last week and hailed for a good two-way performance was End Joe Megnia, who scored the only Quincy touchdown. He has come into his own during the past two weeks.

"They moved the ball better than we had expected and jumped into an early lead and forced us to adjust our game plan," Hank continued.

Weymouth's pass defense was a major factor in the win as the Maroons intercepted six Quincy passes.

Weymouth drove all the way to Quincy's three on its first drive but this time the Presidents dug in and held.

The next time the Maroons got the ball they went all the way with a 13-yard pass from Brian Keefe to Joe Bean scoring.

The next time it had the ball it tallied again with Keefe scoring from the 10 on a keeper.

A 37-yard bomb from Jimmy Forrester to Mike MacKenzie moved Quincy to the Weymouth 29 and the Presidents went to the 18 but a pass interception in the end zone stopped them.

The half ended as Quincy, sparked by three pass completions, reached Weymouth's 25.

Weymouth made it 18-0 late in the third period on a one-yard plunge by John Murray. Early in the final period Weymouth scored its final touchdown when Murray made his team's fourth interception and returned it 20 yards for the score.

Frankie Guest took over as Quincy's quarterback and completed four straight passes, the final one to Megnia for 12 yards and the touchdown. He passed to Tony Cedrone for the points.

Weymouth gained a net of 127 yards rushing to 101 for Quincy. The Presidents picked up 162 yards passing on 12 for 25 while Weymouth had 63 yards with four for 10. Quincy had 12 first downs, Weymouth eight.

Woman's Day Sunday At Quincy Junior

The Women's Center at Quincy Junior College is holding a Woman's Day at the college, Sunday, from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m.

A group of community women, in conjunction with Joan Sullivan, advisor to women at the college, have prepared an afternoon of workshops dealing with topics of special interest to women. A coffee hour will follow.

The workshops planned include: Career guidance, legislation affecting women and how to be involved, women and their legal rights, sex-stereotyping in the schools, early childhood education, and continuing education opportunities for the adult.

The career guidance course will be given by Catherine M. Fitzgibbon of Quincy Junior College. Kathy O'Donnell, South Shore Women's Political Caucus and Rachel Tedesco, Quincy Chapter of NOW, will lead the legislation workshop. Women and their legal rights will be discussed by Atty. Betsey Leebos. Marilyn Panaro and Pat Desmond of NOW will speak on sex-stereotyping in the schools. An early childhood education workshop will be led by Carole Neitlich and Naomi Saltzman of the Jewish Community Center. Continuing education opportunities for the adult will be discussed by Virginia Waller, from Quincy Junior College.

Area women are invited to attend. There is no charge. For further information contact Mrs. Pam Spring [773-7852] or Mrs. Kathy Roberts [479-8280].

5 Honored At Houghs Neck Banquet

Houghs Neck residents Wednesday night honored a Quincy doctor and four residents at the annual Good Neighbors banquet of the Houghs Neck Community Council at St. Thomas Aquinas Hall.

For the first time a general practitioner, Dr. Albert Davis of 191 Sea St., received a plaque for Community Service along with Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Denvir, Jr. of 111 Spring St. and Hugh Kenny of 69 Lenox St. Mrs. Waymon O. Giggey, Jr. (Mary Giggey) of 143 Sea Ave. was chosen the 1974 Good Neighbor.

Dr. Davis, a graduate of Massachusetts College of Pharmacy and Middlesex Medical School (now Brandeis), has been a general practitioner in Quincy since the late 1930's.

He has been physician at the Serpous Clinic since it opened in 1953 at the Atherton Hough School. He served as a captain in the Army's Medical Corps during World War II. Dr. Davis and his wife, Helen, have two children, Mrs. Sally Miller and Quincy School Committeeman Harold Davis, and three grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Denvir, Houghs Neck residents for 16 years, have four daughters. Mr. Denvir, a past president of the Houghs Neck Community Council, is also former adjutant of Houghs Neck Legion Post and president of its building corporation, a member of Harvey's Salt Water Fishing Club, and a consultant to the Quincy Conservation Commission.

He was ways and means chairman for the Quincy Band Parents Organization which raised funds to send the Quincy High School Band to Dallas, Tex., two years ago. His wife was treasurer of the group, is a past president of Atherton Hough PTA, and for seven years was a Girl Scout leader and neighborhood chairman.

Hugh Kenny of 69 Lenox St., a resident since 1957, is now in his seventh year with Boy Scout Troop 35 of Most Blessed Sacrament Church, serving first as assistant and then as Scoutmaster for five years. He and his wife have four children.

Mrs. Giggey, the mother of four, has been a Cub Scout den mother for seven years at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church where she is also junior choir director and a Mothers'

Club member. A resident for 19 years, she is media aide at Great Hill School. She is also a member of the Protestant Social Service Bureau.

Arnold Beresen, a former Good Neighbor, was master of ceremonies.

'Inadequate Facility'

Creedon Fears North Will Lose Accreditation

Speaking at Tuesday's meeting of the Quincy Lion's Club, School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon reiterated his stance that the building of a new North Quincy High School is essential.

Again calling the present structure "an inadequate facility," Creedon warned that the school will soon lose its accreditation or be put on probation.

North Quincy High School's two-year accreditation from the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools expired in June. Creedon said that updated reports have been sent to the Association which will issue a decision on the school's status in December of this year.

Clarifying a comment he made in response to an audience question, Creedon told The Quincy Sun:

"I have no concrete evidence that says North Quincy High School has lost its accreditation. But it is my responsibility to say what I think will happen. Either the school will be put on probation or its accreditation will be terminated."

Creedon said an accreditation loss would disqualify North Quincy High School students from receiving "certain kinds of scholarships" for continuing their education. A scholarship application from North Quincy High would be put "in the negative pile," said Creedon, when in competition with an application from an accredited institution.

A loss of accreditation would say to the city of Quincy, "Your school facility is not up to contemporary standards," Creedon said. He cited the example that Quincy's neighbor Braintree boasts 306 high school courses while North Quincy High offers only 188.

In addressing the Lion's Club members at Dutton's, Dr. Creedon noted deficiencies in physical education facilities at North, saying, "We have an obligation to provide adequate and equal facilities for both boys and girls."

He cited, too, space problems in the North Quincy High School cafeteria, noting that one group of students must have lunch at 10:30 a.m. in order to accommodate the entire school.

"Who wants to eat lunch at 10:30 in the morning?" Dr. Creedon asked.

Creedon said the school's so-called "music suite" is in fact a converted custodial supply room.

Creedon showed slides sketching present space on each floor at North as well as the estimated additional space needed to update the floor to "contemporary standards."

Creedon reported the state's Department of Education approved only two of the school's 11 science laboratories as meeting contemporary space and equipment standards.

"There is a very critical need for a new North Quincy High School," Creedon said. "The easiest solution to the problem would be to renovate and be done with it. But you cannot put a size 10 foot into a size five shoe."

According to Creedon, North Quincy High School needs 300,000 square feet of gross space to accommodate 2,000 students. Presently, North has 167,000 square feet of gross space.

Although Dr. Creedon acknowledged the decline in student enrollment, he emphasized the decline "doesn't take away from the need for a new North Quincy High School." He quoted a projected estimate of enrollment at North in the 1980's as 2,000 students.

Dr. Creedon called the proposed construction site at the old Squantum Naval Air Station "the best available location."

Total construction costs for the new structure is $15 million, according to Creedon. Interest at 6.5 per cent for a municipal bond would add another $10 million to that figure, bringing the total cost to $25 million. The 65 per cent state reimbursement [which will dip to 50 per cent in June, said Creedon] brings the net cost to $16 million.

"Our kids are being short-changed," Dr. Creedon concluded. "And it's our obligation to see that they're not short-changed for the next 10 years."

Exhibit "A"

Percentage increase in savings deposits, South Shore National Bank (US) vs. the savings banks (savings banks in Norfolk County), 6 months ended June, 1974.

What you see here is sort of a progress report on "South Shore National Bank versus the Savings Banks."

As you can see, people are catching on: They're putting more and more of their savings dollars into the same bank where they have their checking accounts. South Shore National Bank.

It's true that the savings banks can pay 1/4% more interest. But for most people, who average somewhere under $1,000 in savings, that comes to only around $3 a year.

Which is not a very compelling reason to go out of your way to put money into a savings bank.

On the other hand, with your savings dollars in a Multistatement account at South Shore National, you can earn yourself a free checking account. Which can amount to quite a savings in itself.

Plus you can earn yourself 10% refunds on the finance charges on your loans.

Is there any doubt in your mind as to why we're winning?

Quincy Per Pupil Average Cost $1,290

A survey by School Management Magazine shows that the city of Quincy spends, on the average, $1,290 for every pupil in the school system.

School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon quoted the figure taken in January, during the recent meeting of Quincy School officials and the city's department heads.

Creedon also listed the following other categorical costs per pupil in Quincy: national average per pupil, $1,170.40; average per pupil cost in New England, $1,224.46; average per pupil cost in a same-size district, $1,163; average per pupil cost in a same-size district within Quincy's region, $1,279.10. Communities throughout the nation voluntarily submitted information for the School Management Magazine survey. Not all communities participated.

Creedon said that Quincy's average falls "in the middle of the top 25 per cent" of the schools surveyed.

Creedon said, "That's a place we'd like to be and we should stay there."

The town with the lowest cost per pupil is Millville which spends an average of $604 on each student. Gosnold has the highest per pupil cost, spending $6,477 on each student.

Survey Shows Opposition But--

Multi-Million Dollar Benefits Seen From West Quincy Project

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

A Planned Unit Development [PUD] proposed for the former Quarry St. dump area would create an estimated 3,000 construction jobs with a $40 million payroll and other benefits to the city according to the developer.

Harry Kanavos of Kanavos Enterprises, a former Quincy resident, outlined the benefits to business leaders prior to a City Council public hearing scheduled for Wednesday night at City Hall.

Kanavos said the multi-million dollar, high-rise, 1986-unit complex which is described as bigger than State Street South would also:

- Create an additional 500 retail jobs in Quincy.
- Increase retail sales by $20 million.

- Return to the city over $1.7 million in real estate tax revenue per year.

- Increase bank deposits by $16 million.

- Reduce water runoff from Quarry St. by an estimated 40 per cent thus lessening flooding problems in the Adams St. area.

- Provide free use of land for the construction by the city of a new water supply tank to improve water pressure in the area.

Also prior to the public hearing, Councillor James Sheets reported that he and a staff of 17 canvassed 456 Ward 4 homes located in the area of the proposed project.

Residents, he said, were asked if they supported the construction of the Kanavos project. According to figures released by Sheets, 80 per cent of occupants of the homes polled opposed the project, 8.7 per cent favored it and 10.3 per cent registered no opinion.

The survey was conducted Nov. 9-11. Residents on 20 [Cont'd on Page 20]

Public Hearing Set Tonight On Community College's Impact

A public hearing will be held tonight [Thursday] at 7:30 p.m. at Broad Meadows Junior High School regarding the environmental impact report on the proposed $25-$30 million South Shore Community College.

The 2,500-student facility would be built on a 100-acre site on Broad Meadows off Sea St. and open according to present plans in 1980.

Quincy Junior College would be incorporated into the new facility.

The impact report has been submitted to the state's Secretary of Environmental Affairs in accordance with state law by the Bureau of Building Construction, a state building authority which oversees the planning design and construction of most state buildings.

Copies of the report are available at the Thomas Crane Public Library, the Quincy Planning Department, Quincy Conservation Commission, Metropolitan Area Planning Council and certain state offices concerned with such a report.

At the hearing representatives from W. Chester Browne & Associates, architect of the proposed college, Helden Associates, conductor of the environment study, and Tippetts-Abbett-McCarthy-Gratton, conductor of a traffic analysis will all give a synopsis of their reports and findings and field any questions from the audience.

The Environmental Impact Report includes discussion of [Cont'd on Page 20]

MDC Rate Up

Why Water Bills Are Higher

The higher water bills which residents are getting in the mail are a result of increased water charges to the city by the MDC water division, Mayor Walter J. Hannon reports.

The Mayor was responding to inquiries by citizens who are concerned about the increase coming at a time when so many other cost of living items have escalated so sharply.

The city was required to adjust the rate from 40 cents to 60 cents per 100 cubic feet last May, Hannon said. This was necessary, he said, because the MDC rate of $120 per million gallons was increased over 66 percent this past January and presently costs the city $200 per million gallons of water.

According to city Treasurer Robert Foy, only one third of the city's consumers have received water bills under the new rate.

The rate increased by the MDC, as well as rising city costs of materials, maintenance and operation, left the city little latitude in setting the water rates, the Mayor said.

WANTED: 10 Needy Families To Enjoy Christmas

Ten deserving Quincy families will be able to buy Christmas presents this year with funds left in a trust by the late Agnes V. Philben of Quincy.

Before her death in 1966, Mrs. Philben established a 10-year trust which provided for the payment at Christmas time of $50 each to 10 Quincy families with young children. The money is to be used to buy Christmas presents.

Stephen T. Keefe, Jr., Mrs. Philben's attorney, is asking veterans posts, welfare and social agencies, clubs, churches and the media to submit to him the names of needy families.

The organization or individual should include the complete names and addresses of all family members, the ages of the children as well as a summary stating the basis for selection.

All information must be submitted before Monday, Nov. 25.

It may be sent to Mr. Keefe at 1359 Hancock St., Quincy, 02169.

The funds will be awarded to the 10 selected families one or two weeks before Christmas.

Mrs. Philben worked in the accounting department of the New England Merchants Bank.

Day, Evening Schedule Planned 200 Attend Open House At Quincy Women's Center

afternoon at its headquarters in the old Quincy District Courthouse on Coddington St. Following registration and orientation, the women participated in workshops on various subjects, including: "Legislation Affecting Women", "Women and Their Legal Rights", "Sex Stereotyping in the Schools", "Early Childhood Education", "Adult Education", and "Consciousness Raising".

Joan Sullivan, advisor to women at the junior college, commented on the success of the afternoon program and said that while 200 was a good turnout, there are still a lot of people who don't know of the center yet. "After today," she said, "many more will know what it is about."

The Women's Center is a non-profit, multi-service center, providing personal, educational and career guidance for women. It is sponsored by the Division of Continuing Education and is maintained by community women.

Pam Spring of Wollaston, a member of the committee that set up Sunday's open house was also pleased with the turnout.

"Once the center is in full operation," she said, "I hope these people will take full advantage of it."

She said the turnout indicated that enough women in the area were interested in what the center will have to offer.

"Many women have become aware and involved," said Kathy O'Donnell, head of the South Shore Women's Caucus. "I'm glad to see what was begun two years ago, with the first women's day, has grown into a working, women's center. The most exciting thing about it is the fact that the center is not just for the junior college but for all the women in the community."

A cross-section of age groups and occupations was represented. Mandy Cohen noted that many attended with specific interests in mind. She noted the young mothers in particular who attended the Early Childhood Education Workshop and who were anxious to improve the educational experiences for their youngsters.

Kathy Roberts of the Women's Center Committee reflected the enthusiasm of those attending as she described the collection of books and pamphlets on display in the center's library in the former judge's lobby in the court house. She said the library will have daytime and evening hours and that the schedule will be announced shortly.

A number of city officials were on hand for the open house. Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets represented Mayor Walter Hannon, who had also sent a spray of flowers for the registration table. Rep. Thomas Brownell, School Committeeman John Sullivan and Junior College President Dr. Edward Pierce also attended.

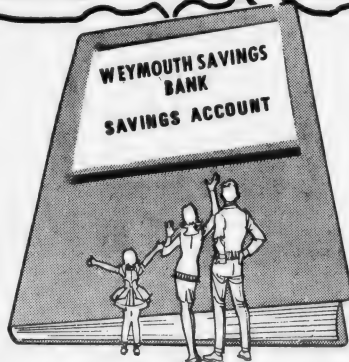

Workshop leaders were drawn from local talent who, all either live or work in Quincy: Laurie Handlers, Virginia Waller, Naomi Saltzman, Carole Neitlich, Pat Desmond, Marilyn Panaro, Bertsey Warren Lebbos, Rachel Tedesco and Kathy O'Donnell.

The Women's Committee includes, Joan Sullivan, Pam Spring, Kathy Roberts, Vicki Smith, Rose DeVore, Mandy Cohen, Cathy Fornaro, Eileen Rabs and Ann Keating.

Resignation Triggers Action

QEA Seeks Equal Pay For Women Sports Coaches

Robert Laing, president of Quincy Education Association [QEA], was to appear before Quincy's School Committee Wednesday to discuss a coaching salary increase for women teachers throughout the school system.

Last month Miss Gretha Ruark, Quincy High School's gymnastic coach for four years, said she resigned her coaching position in an effort to call attention to a plight common to women coaches in Quincy Public Schools - unequal pay.

She received an additional $425 for a four-month coaching season. Male gymnastic coaches receive an additional $830 for a three-month season and work with an assistant. Miss Ruark does not have an assistant.

Working after school hours until 6 p.m. - and later on meet nights - Miss Ruark estimated her hourly wage as approximately 60 cents per hour. She said:

"I wouldn't mind working for that amount if everyone else received a similar scale."

Laing, who hopes to be bargaining with the School Committee on a salary increase by early December, said:

"Women coaches will be put on the same status as men if we have our way. We support Miss Ruark wholeheartedly. We realize that women coaches are grossly underpaid. I'd be surprised if some sort of adjustment is not made."

Charles T. Sweeney, vice-chairman of the School Committee, said he wants the committee to have "all the information" on the matter before making a decision. He did say, however, that his "immediate inclination" was "equal pay for equal work".

"If I knew it was literally equal work [being done], I could say unequivocally 'equal pay for equal work.'"

Despite her resignation, Miss Ruark has informed Carl Leone, director of athletics, she will continue to coach the girls gymnastic team during November and December - without pay. The season runs through February.

"She has done a good job in the past," said Leone. "She's a good person and she's good for the kids. I feel badly she resigned."

A fellow teacher-coach at Quincy Point Junior High School, Kathleen Bertrand, wrote a fiery letter to Leone and to members of the school committee expressing her "deep dissatisfaction and disgust...knowing that Quincy and its stalling red-tape priorities are letting a coach of Miss Ruark's calibre and dedication slip through their hands." She asked:

"Is it too much to ask someone to take the initiative and equalize Miss Ruark's pay immediately?"

Houghs Neck Man

Takes Part In Rescue

Coast Guard Fireman Paul F. O'Neil, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard E. McCourt of 17 Sea Ave., Houghs Neck, recently participated in an at-sea rescue 18 miles from Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

He is a crewmember of the Coast Guard Cutter Hamilton, which teamed with a Coast Guard helicopter and seaplane to rescue eight persons from a cabin cruiser which sank in rough seas. After putting the survivors ashore in Miami, the Hamilton continued on a law enforcement patrol in the Caribbean.

A 1971 graduate of Quincy High School, he entered the Coast Guard in August 1972.

Council Votes Procedure Change In Public Hearings

A procedure change for the public hearings on the proposed North Quincy High School and the Kanavos Enterprises Planned Unit Development for West Quincy were announced by Council President Arthur Tobin.

Tobin said the council voted to conduct the hearings [Kanavos Wednesday night and NQHS Nov. 21] thusly:

Proponents will be given the first hour to speak and 15 minutes to record themselves in favor. Opponents will be given the second hour to speak and 15 minutes to register themselves in opposition.

"We do not want to shut off anyone," Tobin said. "So if there are then proponents and opponents left to be heard from, we will give each side a half-hour to be heard."

Tobin noted that proponents are always heard first.

He said that large crowds were expected at both hearings and that i just would not be fair to have proponents speaking possibly for hours before opponents had their opportunity.

The Kanavos project hearing was set for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday night at the Council Chamber. NQHS hearing Nov. 21 will be held at the Vocational Technical School gymnasium.

If the Kanavos hearing drew a larger than capacity crowd, Tobin said, plans were to shift it to the Vocational Technical School gym.

STRICTLY PERSONAL

Let your boss be himself

By PAT and
MARILYN DAVIS
Copley News Service

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

What can I do about my boss? Do I dare tell him that his sloppy dress and smelly cigars are repulsive to many of our customers? When you walk into his office, you could cut the smoke with a knife. His clothes are unpressed and out of style. This man looks so unkempt that it is hurting business. What can I do?

Secretary

Dear Secretary:

You can do what you were hired to do — secretarial work. If the boss feels he needs help, he can enroll in the local charm school. Don't try to recycle him or you may lose your job.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

I hope you can help me with my problem. My husband, Rod, was married before and this woman is driving me crazy.

Susan and Rod had to get married and the child is now 2 years old. They were married only a few months because Susan was sleeping with anyone and everyone. She was the one who wanted the divorce; but, as soon as Rod and I were married, she started calling and won't leave us alone.

This girl has been married twice since the divorce and this must be some kind of record. Yet, she continues to harass us. Except for her, we are very happy. We've considered moving or taking court action against her. We've asked her to leave us alone. What else can we do?

Don't suggest a psychiatrist — she's gone to one.

Plagued

Dear Plagued:

She hasn't gone long enough. Consult an attorney and ask him to get her out of your life. He can find a way.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

What can I do with a husband who falls asleep right after dinner and stays in this condition until bedtime?

It wouldn't be so bad if he did this only at home; but can you imagine my embarrassment when we are invited out to dinner and Fred falls asleep, with head nodding, on the sofa. He is not in poor health. He can hike miles to fish, can play golf in the hottest of weather, and has never been sick a day in the last 20 years.

What is the answer? Could he be all that bored?

Ruth

Dear Ruth:

You didn't mention whether or not Fred drinks. This can put many a healthy person to sleep if done in excess. Why not have the family doctor give Fred a complete check-up? He might find the answer.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

I'll bet you've never heard this one. When my wife wants the children to come home for dinner, she rings a cowbell. I swear it can be heard for miles. I've asked her to think of another way to call the children but she continues to ring this darn bell. Jan is great in every other way and I hate to be picky but I can't stand this bell-ringing act. How can I tell her without hurting her feelings?

George

Dear George:

Tell your wife that she is the one girl who really rings the bell as far as you are concerned but that the cowbell has to go. If she is the person you say, she will understand.

Is Thanksgiving losing out?

By ANN RUDY
Copley News Service

No one can deny we've come a long way since that first Thanksgiving dinner at Plymouth Rock so many years ago.

One might have thought so as recently as the appearance of that charming Norman Rockwell painting of an entire family seated around a Thanksgiving table.

They were an ordinary family and Rockwell captured the simplicity and joy of such a family — from the small, pigtailed girl anticipating the crimson cranberry sauce, to the elderly grandparents enjoying the sight of their family all together in celebration.

But something is missing this year for me and, since I am not much different from anybody else, I am wondering if others feel it too. There are forces in our society today that make such a recent painting appear to be "old fashioned."

It is becoming less usual for such gatherings to take place. Many grandparents are moving to retirement communities where the homogenized environment deprives them of the reality of the life cycle. They see only the old.

Married sons and daughters may be scattered all the while of large corporations so that visits to grandparents are few due, not to neglect, but to necessity. The necessity of earning a living — refuse a promotion, and there may be no more offers.

The children of these sons and daughters experience their grandparents through letters and snapshots.

All during their formative years, it may never be possible for them to ride a bike a few blocks to Grandma's house because she is working on the turkey dressing which the whole family will eat the next day. Never know the smell of mince, newly waxed floor and Grandma's special fragrance as she pulls a child near who is warming her heart with his enthusiasm.

Or a child's mother may be working such long hours outside the home that she is too tired to cook a large dinner for an entire family. Then, if other relatives do live nearby, there may be resentment because she doesn't take her "turn."

As I say, it worries me a little. But there is one ray of hope: I have checked, and all the franchised hamburger and taco stands will be closed Thanksgiving day. Let us bow our heads.

Wedding guests foot hotel bills

By RIV TOBIN

Copley News Service

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

Our daughter is a divorcee and is to be married again soon. This is the first marriage for her fiancé. We realize that under the circumstances the proper thing is to have a small informal ceremony. My question is: What is her father's responsibility in regard to providing hotel accommodations for our family and friends and those of the bridegroom? Our daughter lives a great distance from our home, as does the young man's family. There will probably be around 20 couples from each side arriving for the event.

Mother of the Bride

Dear Mother:

Each guest is responsible for their own expense. When you know who is arriving and when, your daughter should make reservations at the local hotel or motel. She should notify each guest what she has done. If money is a problem she should tell Mr. and Mrs. Doe that she has reserved a double room at such and such a rate. She should also ask the guest to reconfirm for himself. This would allow the guest to change the reservation to suit his pocketbook.

ARIES: (March 21 to April 19 — Also Aries Ascendant) — Use this week to wind up projects in progress. Use your executive abilities by assisting in community and political activities. Don't be so wrapped up in yourself you can't encourage and enjoy others.

TAURUS: (April 20 to May 20 — Also Taurus Ascendant) — You may discover you have spread yourself too thin with several projects going on simultaneously. Pay sufficient attention to each and don't get pressured. Don't get involved with people who gossip.

GEMINI: (May 21 to June 20 — Also Gemini Ascendant) — Catch up on work that needs a finishing touch. Clear out all projects so the decks are clear for a new activity cycle coming up. Don't get sidetracked with petty concerns — keep your eye on crucial matters.

CANCER: (June 21 to July 22 — Also Cancer Ascendant) — The early part of the week seems emotionally charged. Channel this energy creatively. Romantically, be very discreet. Try your hand at writing, if at all feasible. Some-

LEO: (July 23 to Aug. 22 — Also Leo Ascendant) — Don't let your feeling of pressure to complete a job of work make you rush into mistakes. Take time to do the necessary research; watch details. If energy runs low, fit in short rest periods and take time out to eat.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22 — Also Virgo Ascendant) — If someone is sharply critical of you and you feel put down — don't take it too seriously. Other people are especially kind and considerate which takes the sting out. Possibility of a modest investment venture.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22 — Also Libra Ascendant) — Good time to take a trip you've always promised yourself to do what you really want to do. If writing is one of your talents, this is a favorable time to rework manuscripts. Finances favored in unusual ways.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21 — Also Scorpio Ascendant) — You can be helpful in solving a problem that your associates are involved in. Be especially cooperative now and open up communications with others. Get involved in community or cultural affairs in leadership way.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21 — Also Sagittarius Ascendant) — Guard against feelings of jealousy and envy just now. Emotional joy can be yours. Pay attention to details regarding the mails and communications. Good time to entertain in small groups. Cooperate with mate.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19 — Also Capricorn Ascendant) — The pressure is easing in areas of finances of others, your own, and your career. Activities with friends are favored. Your career and income could get a boost through a tip from a friend. Be alert.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18 — Also Aquarius Ascendant) — You are extremely self-confident and more open and relaxed. Creativity is high — use it! Help, favors, cooperation are easy to get now with your charm and personality. A great idea comes from a woman fleetingly encountered.

PISCES: (Feb. 19 to March 20 — Also Pisces Ascendant) — A very favorable time for contemplation and realization of your philosophical beliefs. Good time to bring out projects previously dreamed of. New men may come into your life and changes are in the offing.

Shelby Grant gets her own role

By NANCY ANDERSON
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — "Dr. Gannon's performed surgery on me three times," Shelby Grant chuckled over her scarcely tasted Singapore sling. "He knows my anatomy pretty well."

And that he should. That he should.

Because Shelby is in actuality married to Dr. Gannon or rather to Chad Everett who plays the medic in the CBS series "Medical Center."

In his role as doctor, Chad operated on Shelby for the third time in a "Medical Center" episode.

Called "The Prisoner," it recounted the traumas of a wealthy young lady stricken with a critical blood malady.

The Everetts' little daughters, Katherine, 5, and Shannon, 3, are too young to stay up late and see "Medical Center" which may be just as well.

The second time Shelby was in her husband's series, she played a nun who was raped, and Katherine, who saw the show, was terrified by her mother's ordeal.

"She'd seen Chad in fights on the screen, and she'd even seen him in bloody makeup, and that didn't bother her," Shelby said. "When he came home wearing the makeup he'd worn in an automobile accident scene, Katherine understood that was part of acting."

"But, when she saw me lying in an alley moaning after I'd been raped and beaten, she was so upset it took me a long time to quiet her."

"I kept explaining that it was make-believe, that I wasn't hurt at all, but, since I'm not on the screen as often as Chad is, she had trouble comprehending that I was acting too."

Dee Presley has filed for legal separation from Vernon but says, "We're still as close as the telephone. We talk almost every day."

Meanwhile Elvis, who is fond of his stepmother, has given her a new, baby blue Eldorado convertible, his way of saying that no matter what becomes of her marriage to his father he wishes her well.

Dee says, separated or not, she has absolutely no plans for divorce, adding:

"I'm seeing someone, but I still hope Vernon and I will get back together someday. There'll never be another love for me like ours has been."

Excess pounds can take not only years off your life but dollars off your salary. A study to determine employer preferences which was conducted by a major executive employment firm, indicated that there is a direct correlation between weight and wages.
According to the findings of the study, the poundage penalty may run as high as $1,000 an excess pound. Only nine percent of the people placed by the major employment firm who earn between $20,000 and $50,000 annually were more than ten pounds overweight. Among executives earning $10,000 to $20,000, however, 39% were 10 or more pounds overweight.
During the past 25 years, this major executive placement agency has filled thousands of positions for employers who wanted employees "on the thinner side." Only once did the agency receive a request for an overweight executive. That request came from a manufacturer of clothes for "big men."

Market Report

Pass Up The Sugar-- Eating Money Is Cheaper

Inflation is accomplishing what all the dentists in America have tried to get us to do for years - cut down on sugar consumption, says the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture (MDA).

Sugar earned the rating of Worst Possible Buy this week as the price of five pounds jumped another 30 cents, and two major supermarket chains urged consumers to leave it on the shelves.

As a food with one of the highest calorie and lowest nutrition contents you can find, sugar was never a very good purchase to begin with, even at its old prices. Today, its purchase is almost as ridiculous as the price of oil...and a lot less necessary.

It may be hard at first to substitute fresh and canned fruits for rich baked sweets and pastries, or to take your tea and coffee neat, but you'll be healthier and happier in the end, says the MDA.

There are other common foods that are less than economical, and could well be left off the shopping list. Luncheon meats, bacon and sausage, for example, all have more fat and less protein than fresh meats and poultry. Among dairy foods, yogurt is cheaper than sour cream, and provides more nutrition. Margarine is better for you than butter, and usually less costly. Dry milk powder costs less than whole milk, and does as much for the family.

Whether we like it or not, our food buying habits are changing, and very likely for the better. There may come a time when we will no longer be the fattest country in the world.

For continuous daily information that will help you make economical substitutions, call the MDA Food Shopper's Hot Line. If Boston is a local call for you, dial 727-7937. From out of town, call toll-free: 1-800-392-6026. The three-minute message is updated at least twice weekly. Take notes and save money.

The MDA's Division of Poultry has a new list of sources of fresh-killed turkeys for Thanksgiving. If you'd like it in writing, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Turkey Farm List, MDA, 100 Cambridge St., Boston 02202. Or you may call direct, to 727-3033.

On the produce counters this week you'll find iceberg lettuce at three heads for a dollar; California broccoli, 39 cents a bunch; juice oranges, five pounds for 79 cents; Florida grapefruit, eight for a dollar. Our native winter squashes hold steady at ten cents a pound.

Wollaston Mothers Club Hobby Fair Saturday

Wollaston Mothers' Club is sponsoring its fourth annual Art and Hobby Fair Saturday at the Chrysostom's parish hall, Wollaston.

The fair will begin at 10 a.m. and run until 4 p.m.

250,000 Bees Tenants

It's 'Holy Honey' Time At Bethany Congregational Church

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

Rev. John D. Banks, pastor of Bethany Congregational Church, has been a bee-buff for 28 years.

His parishioners know, but perhaps not many others do, that the Bethany rooftop houses 250,000 honey-producing bees, in five colonies.

In fact, for the past 15 years, the Bethany-bee honey has been jarred and sold at the church's annual two-day fair—grossing a total $2,500.

During this year's two-day fair held last week, approximately 210 pounds of pure honey and 40 pounds of comb honey - all extracted from four colonies - were sold.

"The honey was completely sold out in three hours," said Rev. Banks. "We had to limit each customer to three jars."

Many people regard bees as bothersome, bold insects which always seem to buzz far too close to the vulnerable human body.

But Rev. Banks asserts that bees need not be feared. In fact, he claims bees can trigger friendships.

"When I was in Fremont, Neb., a farming community, I naturally became interested in agriculture," he recalls. "My mother-in-law's father was a pioneer beekeeper and I asked her many questions about beekeeping. When she could no longer answer all my questions, I went to the library to learn more on my own. I soon found that beekeeping was a hobby which would give me an 'in' with farm people."

Mrs. Paul Mayo To Be Honored By Stella del Nord

The Stella del Nord Lodge, Order Sons of Italy, will hold its Anniversary Dinner Dance Friday at Sons of Italy Hall, Quarry St., Quincy.

Mrs. Paul Mayo of 39 Penn St., South Quincy, has been selected "Woman of the Year", and will be the guest of honor. Mrs. Mayo is one of the founders of the Lodge and an active worker.

She has held many offices, including venerable, treasurer, delegate to state conventions and grand deputy. She was the Although Quincy is far from a beekeeping farming community, Rev. Banks still has an "in" with Quincy residents: honey, thick, golden and luscious.

The bee world is an intricately organized and specialized world. Worker bees feed the Queen bee "royal honey" and they search their surroundings for honey for the hive. The drones have one function: to mate a virgin queen. They are later driven out of the hive.

Rev. Banks noted that bees are, in fact, "in a cycle with nature." The number of bees per hive varies greatly throughout the year with a low-point coming in February when a colony's population dips to around 10,000.

Rev. Banks explained that bees do not actually hibernate. "They cluster," he said. "Bees even fly out of the hive in mid-winter. Actually there are only three months when the bees bring in almost nothing. But if the temperature reaches 60 degrees, they will fly out."

An excellent source of nectar is the linden tree. Rev. Banks said:

"I rejoiced when the city of Quincy planted linden trees in the McIntyre Mall area near the Quincy Bank."

He noted too, that bees travel up to three miles in all directions in search of nectar, despite a source nearby the home-hive.

"Some of my bees are out as far as the Expressway," Rev. Banks boasted.

Springtime is brood-rearing time for the bees. By April or May, the queen bee is laying 1,000 eggs daily. By late June, she has laid approximately 50,000 eggs.

Rev. Banks estimated that during mid-summer, 250,000 bees representing four colonies were active. The colonies are situated on the Bethany rooftop, a vandalism-free area affording about one-tenth of an acre of land. Rev. Banks nurtured one 100,000-bee colony towering seven feet tall. The other three colonies each housed approximately 50,000 bees.

Rev. Banks admits that "the nastiest job of all" involves the removing of the bees from the comb.

"I just have to shake them off," he said, "and it's almost impossible to do the job without a few stings."

But in defense of the little creatures, he added:

"Bees are not as prone to attacking people as some might imagine. I could prove that when people say they were 'stung by a bee', they were probably stung not by a bee but by a hornet or a wasp."

Rev. Banks explained that the worker bees have a special honey stomach in which to store the liquids gathered. Enzymes then convert the material to a simple sugar which the bees can disgorge at will.

The bees then rhythmically and instinctively extend their hinged tongues in and out, in and out, making a film out of the liquids. As more and more water evaporates from the substance, it becomes thicker and thicker, finally reaching the consistency of honey.

The bees then store the honey in the upper part of the honeycomb cells. Rev.

BETHANY BEES - Wearing a bee veil and thick, protective gloves, Rev. John D. Banks, pastor of Bethany Congregational Church, examines a swarm of bees taken from one of five colonies on the rooftop of the church.

[Quincy Sun Photo]

Banks noted that these cells are so constructed, by the bees that the honey then runs down into the cell, filling it. The insects finish the process by capping the cell, locking in the honey.

overcrowd the colony, causing the bees to swarm and then to search for a new home. Rev. Banks noted that he does leave enough honey in the hive to serve as food for the bees during the long winter season.

Honey is pre-digested, invert sugar and is more healthful than simple cane sugar. It can be coupled with almost anything to make a nutritious and tasty meal or snack - honey and oatmeal, honey and toast, honey and tea.

Rev. Banks noted that honey's delicious quality - a quality which allows the honey to absorb water and moisture - makes it an excellent baking ingredient. Bread, muffins, cupcakes and candy made with honey retain for a long time, their moistness and freshness.

A surplus of honey would House program at the Adams School in observance of American Education Week.

Following classroom visitation, all students, staff and parents participated in the special flag raising ceremonies on the school grounds in conjunction with Heritage Day ceremonies at First Parish Church.

Principal Dr. Henry F. Paterson, Jr., spoke. During the raising of the American and American Revolution Bicentennial Flags, the assembly participated in the flag salute and sang appropriate songs.

Returning to the school Media Center, parents viewed a slide presentation prepared by Miss Kathleen Farley, Media Specialist, with the assistance of teachers and pupils. Refreshments were served by members of the PTA.

Atherton Hough Teacher Serves Breakfast To Students

Miss Arlene Lapon, a third grade teacher at Atherton Hough School, recently served breakfast to her 22 student upon their arrival to school.

Since the beginning of the school year, Miss Lapon has been teaching a unit entitled, "The Importance of Breakfast".

Throughout the unit, she emphasized that students should select foods from four of the five basic food groups: fruit, cereal, eggs, bread and milk. Miss Lapon then planned the students' breakfast menu following that basic rule of sensible, nutritious eating.

The third graders enjoyed a breakfast of orange juice, cereal and bananas, doughnuts and milk.

There Was An Old Tree

There was an old tree, Who liked to drink tea. He was so old, He was starting to mold. That poor old tree.

One day he drank tea, Then he yelled out to me, "This tree is very bitter, I am going to be a quitter. No more tea, no more for me!"

The tree did not drink tea, He did not speak to me, One day he yelled out, While I was about, I do not like tea, but I like coffee.

SUPER SNOWMAN

Once upon a time there was a snow man but he wasn't like any other snowman. He didn't like the cold. He lived in an igloo in the North Pole. He wished he lived in the city. Every night he would dream he lived in the city. And one day the snowman found out that the sun was coming out. All the snowmen started to melt. But not Super Snowman for he liked the cold, but then he turned to his dog. He was melting away too. So he threw snow balls at the sun until it was all gone. Then he liked the cold from then on.

Why Not A Higher Rate Of Return For Savings And Loans

By Philip J. Lawrence
President

COLONIAL FEDERAL SAVINGS And Loan Association of Quincy and Holbrook

8 - 6 Weekdays
8 - 7:30 Thursdays

Why should savings and loans be allowed to offer a higher rate of return to savers than banks? This is a question that we in the industry are often asked.

There are several good and valid reasons which even some bank officials are ready to admit. One of these is that the savings and loans are in business to provide financing principally for the construction and purchase of homes by U.S. families. The giant home construction industry depends for its vitality upon savings and loans as the primary source for the capital that enables American families to buy the homes it constructs.

As the author "Adam Smith" notes in his best-selling Super-money, "When the Congress wants to encourage something, it writes a favorable tax law." He adds that "as a social objective Congress wants everybody to own his own home, so it triple-subsidizes personal housing, which incidentally makes a house one of the best investments you can make."

The three ways he mentions in which Congress encourages home ownership are 1. by establishing an agency like the savings and loan industry and an insurance-supportive agency like the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, 2. by allowing deduction for income-tax purposes of real estate taxes and the interest paid on mortgages, and 3. by deferring capital-gains taxes when the house is sold if another is bought within a year at comparable or higher price.

A review of accounts at any S&L will reveal that these institutions are used principally by rank-and-file Americans.

Commercial banks initially lent almost exclusively for business purposes, though they have become increasingly interested in providing credit to consumers.

Savings and loans are restricted in the investment of their deposits almost exclusively to personal housing. Banks can invest their deposits in a total range of business and personal ventures that offer higher levels of return than are found in home mortgage loans.

Though Washington remains interested in home investment by American families, it can-and sometimes does-forget itself. What happened, for example, when the Federal Reserve System removed the limits last year on interest rates paid on four-year savings deposits under $100,000? Money poured out of the S&Ls and into the banks at such a rate that bank savings deposits tripled between July 25 and September 12.

The Government further muddled its thinking by competing with the S&Ls through the offer of Treasury bills in low denominations at extraordinary rates, intensifying the raid on S&L funds reserved for financing of housing. Happily, Congress put a stop to what one commentator called a "Texas-style poker game" by a resolution forcing Federal agencies to place ceilings on all classes of consumer savings accounts and certificates.

We have noted the warning of the chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board that if housing collapses this year, "it could take the whole economy down the drain with it." What is needed for the housing industry is not a lower but a higher savings rate differential of one-half per cent between S&Ls and banks.

A total of $600 in gift certificates will be awarded in "Picture Quincy's Heritage" photo contest co-sponsored by Quincy Heritage and Delano Camera of Wollaston.

Contestants may enter one or each of the three categories of competition; current black and white photos, current color photos and historic photos. Each photo should capture the heritage of the City of Quincy.

The black and white entries must be glossy prints photographed by the submitter and must measure no more than 8 by 10 inches.

The color entries must also be photographed by the submitter. Enlargements from slides or negatives can be no larger than 8 by 10 inches.

Historic entries submitted may be any print, new or old, which typifies the historic character of Quincy. The submitter of an historic print need not have taken the photograph. Pictures in all three categories must be mounted and should capture Quincy's heritage.

First-prize winners in each category will win a $100 gift certificate from Delano Camera. Second-prize winners will receive a $50 gift certificate and third-prize winners, a $25 gift certificate all from Delano Camera. Also awarded will be five, $5 gift certificates in each category.

Contestants may enter as many times as they wish, in as many categories as they wish. Each photo must carry on the back the submitter's name, address and telephone number. A picture title may be included.

Pictures will be judged on photographic quality, originality in choice and treatment of subject and the sense of heritage reflected. No artwork or retouching on prints or negatives from which they were made is permitted.

All entries are to be submitted to Delano Camera, 675 Hancock St., Wollaston by Saturday, Dec. 14 at noon.

Delano Camera and Quincy Heritage retain publication rights on winning prizes as well as the right to use the photos for promotional purposes.

Employees of Delano Camera and Quincy Heritage are not eligible to enter the contest. Prizes will be awarded Jan. 15, 1975.

The following judges will choose the prize winners: Jack Powers, advertising director, The Quincy Sun; Doris Oberg, photographer and librarian of Quincy Historical Society; Arthur Gillis, director of library services for Quincy Public Schools; Charles Flagg, Miller Studio; Everett Tatreau, staff photographer, Patriot Ledger; William Berchen, nationally-known photographer; and Jon Delano, owner of Delano Camera and Supply.

Granite Co-op Joins Drive For Tax Break On Savings

Granite Co-operative Bank is participating in a drive to collect signatures on petitions urging Congress to give savers a tax break on their savings interest.

Mrs. Mary Holmes, treasurer, said the petitions urge Congress to approve a bill providing tax-free earnings from savings accounts of up to $500 for individuals and $1,000 for couples filing a joint return.

"This would give a long-needed tax break to the middle-income people hardest hit by inflation," Mrs. Holmes said.

"It would also help fight inflation, channel new funds to the housing market and give hard-working American savers recognition for their contributions to the economy."

Mrs. Holmes urged non-customers as well as customers to sign the petitions, which are available at the institution's offices. The bill, H.R. 16994, has already been approved by the House Ways and Means Committee. It covers savings interest from all financial institutions, including savings associations, commercial banks, mutual savings banks and credit unions.

Mrs. Holmes said the thrift incentive would help dampen inflation because as people saved more, they would spend and borrow less. She pointed out that the legislation's chief long-range benefit would be to help build more savings capital to make it possible to increase the nation's productivity without risking runaway inflation.

"By channeling new savings to thrift institutions that lend to people who want to buy homes, a tax incentive for saving would also provide immediate relief to the hardpressed housing industry, which gets most of its new mortgage funds from savings accounts," she said.

"And it would show that Congress finally recognizes that it is just as important to encourage Americans to save as it is to foster more sophisticated types of investments."

Mrs. Holmes noted that for years, tax laws have provided tax advantages to buyers of such investments as stocks and municipal bonds.

The drive to circulate the petitions is being sponsored by the Federal Savings League of New England and by the United States League of Savings Associations.

Mrs. Holmes said the apparent loss to the Treasury in tax revenues from the bill would be more than offset by new tax revenues generated from the housing sectors and other businesses benefiting from more savings capital.

By stimulating the depressed housing industry, she said the bill would also reduce unemployment taxes and the need for new housing subsidies.

Naval Sea Cadets Seeking Volunteers

The U.S. Naval Sea Cadet Corp is seeking new volunteers for its youth program.

Boys aged 14-18 qualify to join the Sea Cadet Corps which is jointly sponsored by the U.S. Navy and the Navy League of the U.S.

Thirty-five Quincy boys have become members of the Corps and 10-15 are in the process of training for the Corps. The boys meet every Friday evening at the Quincy Naval Reserve Training Center where they learn Navy traditions.

During the summer and holidays, the cadets train at naval bases and aboard naval ships at sea. They can also participate in an exchange program in which U.S. Sea Cadets train on ships of allied countries while foreign cadets train on U.S. ships.

The Sea Cadet Corps has been in existence for 14 years. The Quincy corps began in 1968.

There is no military obligation involved in joining the Sea Cadet Corps. But if a cadet wishes, he may qualify to enlist in the Navy at advance rates.

Anyone wishing to join the Corps can call the Quincy Naval Reserve Training Center Friday evenings only, beginning at 7 p.m.

Living, Today

By Dr. William F. Knox
Personal Counselor

'I Just Won't Cow-Tow'

A maiden lady...now in her 60's...stylish...$15,000 job...nice apartment...cruise in the summer... Florida in the winter was speaking with Nancy, her niece who was in the fifth year of her marriage...sharing with aunt some of the disappointments of her marriage to Terry. Said the aunt... "See how you can't even wear make-up...have to ask Terry if you can go to a musical. I wouldn't want to be married...I'd rather be an old maid than to cow-tow to any man."

Being an old maid may not be nearly as bad as some have thought. This aunt and niece figured that for each member of her family of three children to have as much as the aunt that Terry would have to have about a $85,000 income. Terry's income was $17,000. The individual standard of living was way below their maiden aunt's. She had many of the good things of life which Nancy never expected to have...especially freedom. She didn't have to cow-tow to any man.

What about this problem of women not being able to "wear make-up"...or go to the musical? she desires to attend? Is that what she committed herself to when she got married? Did she intend that her life was to be submerged to all the whims and desires of her husband? In her fifth year of marriage that's exactly what had happened to Nancy. No...this isn't what she intended at all. What went wrong?

The first thing was that Terry and Nancy "fell in love" (whatever that means) and married on the basis of superficial...not basics. They had never talked through their philosophy of marriage...their concepts of raising children...their rights as individual persons. Terry's father was one of these "self-made men" He ruled at home and his mother was subservient to his father. To Terry there was no other way. He was following the script of his father...big man husband to little girl wife.

Nancy's mother and father had a confused marriage. Her father traveled much so her mother was usually the parent in charge of the home. Nancy didn't want to be a wife as with her mother or Terry's. She hoped for something better. But Nancy did nothing to make it better...after dating for a year she became pregnant...they married...she quit school...Terry finished. The basic considerations never got considered.

The second thing that went wrong was that Nancy allowed Terry to "tell her what she could wear...where she could go" even when they were dating. It was her way of showing him that "I love him"...she said. She'd sit in her dorm night after night and Terry wouldn't call. "Why did you do it?" I asked. "Because I loved him" Nancy hadn't learned to be her own person...she went into the marriage thinking to be deserving of her husband by cow-towing to his whims. This is not love. This does not win love...it only leads to disgust and unhappiness.

Fortunately...Terry and Nancy are seeing that they were both participants in this collusion of cow-towing. Both are learning that they must be their own persons...rather than the shadow of what the others want her/him to be. Nancy learned that she can have freedom to be a person...even though married.

Community College Hearing

the natural environment - geology, oceanography, salt marshes and meadows - and the human environment - transportation, economy, housing, public utilities, air quality and noise. It also discusses alternatives to the proposal, such as access to the site, high rise structures instead of low rise, or no project at all. Measures to minimize environmental damage are also included.

Official state agencies, city or town officials and the public at large may comment on the report, offering constructive information for consideration and adoption into a final report to be re-submitted to the Office of Environmental Affairs.

The public hearing is a part of a 30-day review period required by state law during which verbal and written recommendations on the environmental impact report may be submitted for consideration. Verbal comments will be recorded at tonight's hearing. Written suggestions may be sent to the Bureau of Building Construction and the Office of Environmental Affairs, 18 Tremont St., Boston. All comments must be received on or before Friday, Nov. 22.

Although an architectural draft of the proposed college has not been finalized, the building will occupy 400,000 square feet, or approximately one-tenth of the total four million square-foot [100-acre] site, according to Robert E. Simon, associate civil engineer for the Bureau of Building Construction.

The proposed college will be designed to accommodate approximately 2,500 commuting students serving the communities of Quincy, Southeastern Boston, Milton, Braintree, Weymouth, Hull, Hingham, and other coastal towns on the South Shore.

The functions of the present Quincy Junior College will be incorporated into this new facility. According to Simon, the college, if approved and constructed, would be open to students in 1980.

Officers of the Association are Tracy Adams, president; Harold Crispo, vice-president; Marge Catrumbone, secretary; Gayle Mackay, acting secretary; Jean Sheehan, financial secretary; and Mary Piscatelli, treasurer.

City Councillor Leo J. Kelly will answer citizens' questions at tonight's [Thursday's] meeting of the Rock Island Cove Improvement Association.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. at the Rock Island Clubhouse, Allerton St.

Format To Be Decided

3 Moderators To Determine Ground Rules For Height Debate

Three moderators selected to oversee the 10-story height limit debate will soon meet to determine the groundrules and the format of the debate.

Henry Bosworth, editor and publisher of The Quincy Sun, Robert Sears, City Hall reporter for the Patriot Ledger, and Herb Fontaine, news editor of WJDA, will also decide the date, time and place for the debate.

All three moderators were approved by Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin and Quincy Citizens Association (QCA) President Pasquale S. DiStefano, the debaters.

DiStefano has appointed Atty. Richard P. Ward, 120 Putnam St., Quincy, as his official QCA representative in working out ground rules and procedural details.

In a letter to Ward, Tobin wrote:

"I commend Mr. DiStefano for his choice of you as a representative. I do not have any representative speaking, for me, but I have always known you to be fair, impartial and objective."

Tobin expressed hope that the debate would "clear up this matter once and for all."

Tobin had recommended the three moderators who were then approved by DiStefano.

Last week Tobin was quoted in the Patriot Ledger as accusing DiStefano of "using this issue as a smoke screen." According to the article, Tobin said:

"Maybe after this, I'll challenge him [DiStefano] to a second debate on how he and other social workers disperse taxpayers' money in Quincy Welfare office."

Reacting to that statement, Joseph Quirk, vice-president of Local 509, Service Employees International Union, AFL-CIO of the Mass. Social Workers Guild, called Tobin's remarks "grossly unfair and irrelevant." He said:

"What welfare has to do with the 10-story height issue is beyond comprehension. If Mr. Tobin would like to debate the 'welfare issue,' I would suggest he contact the Commissioner or the Legislature [of which he is a member] which set up the Department of Public Welfare and forgot to staff it. It would seem that Mr. Tobin is the one who is using a smoke screen."

Mixed Reaction To PUD Project

different streets responded to the survey workers, Sheets said.

The survey included a second question if the person polled responded negatively to the building of the project. These individuals were asked if they would support the building of 750 units or less instead of the 1,986 units proposed. Sheets said sixty-six per cent responded negatively, 29 per cent positively and five per cent had no opinion.

Sheets said several reasons given by residents' for their opposition to the proposed project included such fears as:

- Increased traffic on residential streets due to driver short-cutting to avoid mainstream traffic.

- Increased danger to children playing on these residential streets.

- Aggravation of the water run-off problem in the area by increasing the velocity and volume of water flowing into already-under-sized pipes.

- Possibility of flooding due to increased pressure on the water table added by the water in retention basins proposed by Kanavos.

Rev. Bedros Baharian, chairman of the Quincy Planning Board, estimates the entire project cost as $40 million "at today's prices." In 10 years, the cost could jump as high as $60 million, he said.

The purpose of Wednesday's hearing - required by law - was "to sound out community reaction," said Rev. Baharian. He hailed the project as even larger than the State Street South complex, to date.

Citing beneficial effects of the proposed project, Rev. Baharian said:

"It will help spread the tax base and prevent the tax rate from going up another $10 per 1,000 when completed.

"I'm not saying that the tax rate won't go up but the development will help to hold down the rate."

Area residents have long been plagued by inadequate water pressure due to the high elevation there. The new tank will supply the necessary source and pressure to assure proper fire protection and domestic service for residents in the entire area.

Calling the former quarry site "an eye-sore" and "a rat-infested area," Baharian said, too, the development would transform the area into "a beautiful section of the city."

Carmine D'Olimpio, president of the Building Trades Union, called the planned development "a huge, gigantic step forward for the city."

"It will be a boost to the shopping area," he said.

Regardless of the approval or disapproval of the proposed complex, the city of Quincy will construct a 100-foot high, $800,000 water supply tank off Quarry St.

To guard against compounding the flooding problem experienced by residents along Furnace Brook and Brown Brook, Kanavos will utilize a series of six retention basins which will be landscaped areas temporarily collecting rainfall.

The flow of the rainwater into the basin will be controlled so as to lessen present water run-off at the site.

A short time after the storm - "within a few minutes or even an hour or so," according to Kanavos Enterprises - the retention basins will dry up, become green landscaped areas once more, and bear little or no resemblance to their principle function.

In speaking of the complex, D'Olimpio mentioned only one possible disadvantage - traffic. He noted, however, that with the widening of Quarry St., any traffic problem would "be minimized."

To insure minimal traffic congestion, Kanavos has confined access to the complex on Quarry St. to two locations. The developer rejected a plan for three additional entrances to the complex. Traffic analysis results show that the intersections at Common and Whitwell Sts. and at Furnace Brook Parkway would "function satisfactorily," causing a delay of 15 to 20 seconds in passing through traffic signals during peak hours.

The developers plan to initiate a shuttle bus service to the Quincy Center MBTA Station located only a mile from the proposed site in order to provide quick, convenient and energy-saving transportation for residents.

The complex will be built in four stages with the first two complete in five years and the final two complete five years later. Two basic building types will be erected - 12-story and 15-story structures. Available to residents of the development will be swimming pools, tennis courts, squash courts, exercise rooms and health facilities. Garages, parking decks and on site parking will accommodate a total of 2,496 cars. Most of the parking will be below the building, leaving most of the site as open space.

The proposed 73.7 acre site was once granite quarries which were then filled with construction and rubbish debris. Engineering studies costing $1 million performed by Haley & Aldrich of Cambridge revealed only 3.5 acres of the land as suitable to support the project's buildings. Construction cannot occur on top of the quarry holes or within 75 feet of them. The engineers concluded that "vertical structures, as opposed to sprawling or horizontal structures, would be logically preferred."

Taxpayers Got Their Money's Worth In Alexander Smith

By HENRY BOSWORTH

City Auditor Alexander Smith is retiring after 25 years on the job and not many people will get very excited about it.

After all, people come and go and the city and world keeps on turning. Nobody is indispensable—no really.

But Quincy taxpayers really got their money's worth in Alex Smith. They toss the word dedication around pretty freely these days, but Smith had it—still has.

To give you an idea, he'll leave the city a $35,445 "bonus" when he retires officially Feb. 20, 1975. He's going to take some vacation time beginning Dec. 20 but he will leave unused:

Some 196 sick days he could have had. Some 221 vacation days he never took. His salary is $23,000 a year, or $85 a day. So the unused 196 sick days and 221 vacation days will add up to $35,445 the city gets to keep.

Why didn't he take the days when he was entitled to them?

"You have to be an auditor 24 hours a day," he laughs.

He just got used to working at an early age.

When he was only three years old, his mother, brother and sister and he went to visit his mother's parents in Dundee, Scotland in 1913. When World War I broke out, they wouldn't let them return to the U.S. because of German U-boats sinking ships. So they had to stay in Scotland until after the war. At the age of seven, Alex went to work over there picking potatoes.

Insiders report there are a half-dozen or so applicants or contenders for the job. Among them: City Treasurer Robert Foy, Budget Director William Grindlay, Assessor John Comer.

The same insiders say that a present popular and qualified department head could have it for the asking. But he hasn't yet indicated that he would like it.

Another strong contender, if he were interested, would be John Quinn, "Dean" of the City Council and chairman of its Finance Committee. He's a good man in the figures department.

Anyway, this is one appointment the City Council will get to make. Let's hope they come up with one like Alex Smith.

ONE BIG POLITICAL question to be answered in the wake of the state election: Will Sheriff-elect Clifford Marshall give up his Ward 2 council seat in January, setting the stage for a special election?

If Marshall moves into the Dedham house provided by Norfolk County for its Sheriff, he would have to vacate the Ward 2 seat because he no longer would be a resident of Quincy.

If he stays in Quincy, he could hold both jobs.

Political observers expect to see at least a partial re-run of the First Norfolk District state representative primary if Marshall moves to Dedham.

Atty. Thomas Williams and James Papile who lost the Democratic primary to Rep.-elect Robert Cerasoli are seen as almost sure contenders. And, of course, Cerasoli could get into it, too.

THE QUINCY POLICE Mutual Aid Association holds its annual banquet tonight [Thursday] at the Bryan VFW Post Hall. There's a surprise in store for someone who's going there to speak. WJDA's Herb Fontaine will be the emcee.

DID YOU KNOW Tom Fitzgerald, North Quincy assistant football coach, coached Dave DeBusschere, former New York Knicks and Detroit Pistons basketball star, at Austin High School in Detroit? Tom coached him in basketball and baseball.

"He pitched seven no-hitters in high school and signed with the Chicago White Sox," Fitzgerald said. He threw the ball so hard I used two catchers every time he pitched and despite sponges, each had a sore, red hand."

DeBusschere pitched a season with the White Sox while still playing in the NBA but gave up baseball to concentrate on basketball. He is now general manager of the New York Nets of the ABA.

OLD FRIEND Baron Hugo puts on a Big Band Night for Milton Rotary Club Friday at Chateau de Ville, Randolph. Baron will have a 15-piece band playing the original arrangements of Glenn Miller, Tommy Dorsey, Jimmy Dorsey, Harry James, etc.

Baron, who came out of West Quincy, used to have the house band at the Totem Pole, sharing the spotlight with those very names. Baron has become a regular with the Miss Quincy Bay Race Week Pageant.

INCIDENTALLY, Judie Owens of Whitman, fourth runner-up in this year's Miss Quincy Bay Race Week Pageant left last week for Australia where she is going to teach for a year. Beauty and brains.

At one time, eggs were so plentiful, it was considered wasteful to pay for them!

The Republican Party Needs Real Republicans

BOSTON — Gov. Sargent will have enough problems trying to explain to Governor-elect Michael Dukakis some of the interesting surprises he'll be inheriting without being nettled by an army of "I-told-you-so's."

Today's lesson, then, is not intended as a put-down or an invitation to dine on sour grapes.

It's just that a certain political matter has come up and some very nice people, like Frank Sargent, should be discouraged from tormenting themselves with needless fantasies while they are trying, as Lt. Governor Donald Dwight puts it, "to come to grips with it all."

The matter in question is the state — no, the non-state — of the Republican Party. No, the non-Republican Party. No, the Republican non-Party. Well, you know what I mean.

In his reminiscences on the morning after, the Governor confided, in a general way, some of the plans he had tucked away in abeyance for revitalizing the Republican Party. Owing to the outcome, however, the Governor has lost a lot of the clout that would have been helpful in undertaking that task, he admitted.

The suggestion implicit here is that Gov. Sargent somehow senses a calling or a responsibility to sweep up the pieces of the fractured organization that turned on him and glue it back together.

With the passing of a little time, the Governor will see that he was straining, in the immediate aftermath, to cope with a problem that didn't confront him. He is trying to solve something that simply isn't there.

The remains of the Republican Party have eschewed to the people who used to be Republicans. The task of leadership in structuring a political organization out of the rubble has reverted to those who shared the Republican ideological doctoring of the pre-1960 era.

Leverett Saltonstall is probably the only Yankee Avi

"Why abandon a belief merely because it ceases to be true? Cling to it long enough and it will turn true again, for so it goes."

—Robert Frost

Nelson and Carroll Sheehan are going to tolerate in the Republican Party — and only if Mr. Saltonstall promises never to anger a digestive tract by uttering the name of his relatives or his neighbors in Dover, the catastrophes Cabot and Sargent.

Should the Republican Party of the future become broad-based in any sense, it will not be big enough or tolerant enough to accommodate Mr. Sargent. That, you see, is what this election was all about.

That may not be the reason there was a Democratic landslide. But it sure as hell has the same net effect.

On election night, while the television stations were carrying vote returns opposite the Jack Cole Show on WBZ-TV, Secretary-of-State-elect Paul Guzzi was busy prognosticating that on the basis of returns, Si Spaulding, the "Republican" who lost less excruciatingly than any of the other "Republicans" running state-wide, probably would emerge as the man responsible for resurrecting the corpse in the months ahead.

We hope Paul gets his thinker fixed before Inauguration Day. Si Spaulding can keep his Republican registration if it would make him happy, but he will have no more to say about Republican Party affairs than Ignatius Turnbull. Who is Ignatius Turnbull? When you learn that you will pass the course.

Nor will John Quinlan find a home in the Republican Party. Nor Martin Linsky. Nor even, maybe, Henry Cabot Lodge.

Donald Dwight is a toss-up. Appropriately penitent for his passive complicity in the crimes against dogma, he might be approved for instruction in the ways of the lodge. Then again, maybe not.

Elliot Richardson, naturally, is absolutely gonzo.

And if Senator Brooke refuses to yield to therapy, he may wind up running against a Democrat who has the endorsement of the Republican State Committee. If you think that's funny, don't!

John Volpe is safe. As long as he stays in Rome.

What the Carroll Sheehans of this ordeal set out to do was restore the Republican Party to Republicans — not people who call themselves Republicans, but people who think like Republicans. Winning the governor's office—or any office, for that matter—was not the prime objective.

The idea was to re-establish a political arrangement that would offer people, in Barry Goldwater's words, "a choice, not an echo," without putting victory ahead of principle and without driving disenfranchised voters into the clutches of a third party headed by a John Bircher just because he was the only pumpkin who spoke English.

The people who used the Republican Party as the vehicle they left on the scrap heap November Tuesday couldn't do that.

So now, if you want to count the Republican Party as one of them, Massachusetts has three political parties. George Wallace may cringe at the support of Bircher Leo Kahian heading his American Party here, but there should be enough joy in his bosom to send Frank Sargent a box of Coronas and Ed Brooke a bouquet of roses and Elliot Richardson a gift certificate for a box of petit fours.

The reassembling of the political parties into a system that might have appealed to a solid conservative, like Norman Thomas is now in process. Barry Goldwater will be here in December to survey the ashes. Gov. Sargent should buy a ticket. Brooke can come for free.

Opposes Historic District Commissions

Editor, Quincy Sun: "Massachusetts, there she stands".

Can we naively believe that creating Historic District Commissions, with another act enshrined on the books in Boston, is the answer?

More political force for conforming control of real estate, seems, to me, to be just one more opportunity for swindling legal practitioners. Shelter is a necessity of life, not a Chamber of Commerce artifact.

Community control, by tax paying residents, is vital. And so is cooperation between neighboring communities. Moral suasion through example and education are the only enduring historic values.

Like morality, good taste can never be legislated.

Youth Speaks Out

• With the price of eggs, sugar and cocoa, The Chocolate Cake may become obsolete.

• Wilbur Mills should be our number one diplomat. If he could persuade his wife that his evening out with "The Argentine Firecracker" was on the up and up, he should be negotiating for the United States.

• With inflation what it is Santa may have to lay off some elves.

• The first order of business for newly elected politicians should be the removal of all campaign signs.

• With the cost of being a senior — being left back almost looks attractive.

• Soft drink companies blame their recent price hikes on the cost of sugar. If that's true then why did the price of Sugar-Free soda also go up the same amount?

15 Local Girls Receive Marian Medal

Fifteen girls from North Quincy and Wollaston recently received the Marian Medal Award at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross in Boston.

Mrs. Marion Vaughan, assisted by Mrs. Kay McKenna, guided the following 10 North Quincy girls from Sacred Heart Parish to the completion of the Marian Medal requirements: Jean Bouton, Rosie Croke, Kathy Flynn, Beth Grant, Bonnie Kennedy, Mary Mahoney, Jacquie McCloskey, Mary Ellen McKenna, Reeney Shea and Joanne Vaughan.

Mrs. Alice Cogliano, assisted by Mrs. Francis Flynn, advised the following five Campfire Girls in fulfilling the Marian Medal requirements: Marie Flaherty, Carol Flynn, Betsy Hackett, Betty Lou Murphy and Jane Vallier.

Mrs. Louis Cogliano of Quincy is Greater Boston chairman for the Camp Fire Girls; Mrs. John Chisholm of Dorchester for the Girl Scouts; and Mrs. John O'Connor of Cambridge for the Junior Catholic Daughters.

Kathleen Cogliano, a Camp Fire Girl from St. Ann's, Wollaston, led the dedication of the Rosary ceremony and the crowning of the statue of the Blessed Virgin.

Marian Medals were conferred on 129 Girl Scouts, Camp Fire Girls and Junior Catholic Daughters.

Rt. Rev. Robert W. McNeill,

Archdiocesan CYO director and chaplain, gave the address of welcome, with Rev. Joseph M. Carney, associate pastor at St. Jeremiah, Framingham, giving the spiritual talk. Rev. Francis L. Gallagher, pastor of St. James, Medford, and state chaplain for the Junior Catholic Daughters, celebrated Benediction.

The one-year program is conducted with both the Girl Scouts and the Campfire Girls, in co-operation with the Catholic Youth Organization.

The Marian Medal Award, bestowed by Roman Catholic Church, symbolizes a girls' knowledge of her faith as well as her commitment to helping others.

Bethany Festival Of Choirs Shifted To Thanksgiving

The Third Annual Festival of Choirs at Bethany Congregational Church will be held Thanksgiving evening at 7 p.m. in the sanctuary.

The original date was Nov. 17.

Sponsored by Bethany's Music Committee, the festival will bring together church choirs of the South Shore area for performance of four compositions as a combined choral group. Each choir will also sing one or two selections of its own choosing.

Mrs. John E. Krasinski, chairman of Bethany's Music Committee, is in charge of the event.

Series Planned In St. Johns Parish Homes

St. John's Church is planning a faith renewal program during the mornings and evenings of Dec. 2-6 and 9-13; the first two weeks of Advent.

Volunteer homes will host groups of parishioners gathering to share their faith through reflection on God's Word in Scripture and in prayer. Members of the parish team, both priests and sisters, will be leaders and participants in the groups.

The program, started in response to Pope Paul's call for a year of reconciliation in 1975, aims at helping each parish member to understand the need to be reconciled with himself, with his family, friends and neighbors, and with God.

William Flavin To Give Lecture At First Parish

William Flavin, historian of United First Parish Church, will present an illustrated lecture Monday, Nov. 18 on the life of Alexander Parris, the designer of the church.

The lecture will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the church. Flavin will also discuss important features of the city's historic landmark. The public is welcome to attend.

'Mortals And Immortals' Christian Science Lesson-Sermon

"Mortals and Immortals" is the subject of Sunday's Lesson-Sermon at the First Church of Christ, Scientist, 20 Greenleaf St., Quincy.

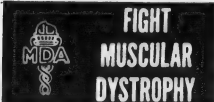

"And Jesus said unto them, 'I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst. And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which He hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day.'" John 6: 35, 39.

Church service and Sunday School convene at 10:45 a.m.

•Cross-Country Quincy, North Wind Up Seasons

The Quincy and North Quincy cross country teams completed their first Suburban League seasons last week and North Coach Lou Tozzi was extremely pleased with the results.

The Raiders defeated the Presidents for the second year in a row, 22-35, and finished with a winning 5-4 league record. North is 7-4 overall and Tozzi planned meets this week with Blue Hills Regional and Boston Latin.

Both teams competed in Tuesday's all-league meet at Brockton and will enter the state meet Saturday over the Franklin Park course.

For Quincy Coach Tom Hall it wasn't such a pleasant finish as his team, which lost its three top runners even before the season opened, for a variety of reasons, had only a 1-8 record.

Last week also saw the end of the first cross country season ever for the Quincy and North girls and each finished 3-3 after North had won the finale over the First Ladies last week, 25-35.

North Quincy was sparked this fall by the brilliant Bart Petracca, a junior who lost only one race and even in that one he broke one of his five records.

Petracca, who first established and then broke the new Quincy course record and also broke the Weymouth, Waltham and Milton course marks, finished first in last week's league finale with Quincy. He wound up unbeaten over his home course.

North's Mark Canavan was second, Quincy's Bob Thorne third, North's Ken Barrett fourth, Quincy's Kevin O'Brien fifth and his brother, Ken, of North sixth, Quincy's Frank Yee seventh, Dennis McCarthy of Quincy eighth, North's Marty Levenson ninth and Mike Morin of North 10th.

"I am really pleased with our performances this year and I think it is a tribute to the boys desire that we had a winning season," Tozzi said. "Interest in cross country, which has been at a low ebb, has increased tremendously and our boys have been improving by leaps and bounds. This was a fine meet with Quincy. Tom Hall received a real tough break when his top three runners failed to report this year. He had little experience as a result but his boys also showed great improvement during the course of the season."

Although the North girls won the finale against Quincy, the First Ladies' Dottie Irvine, only a ninth grader at Central Junior High, won the race. Although er scores don't usually count, Tozzi agreed to let her score count in this meet and her performance delighted both him and Hall. Tozzi directed the weekly meets of the Quincy Track Club during the summer and Dottie was one of his standouts. She has been among the First Ladies' top finishers all season.

Quincy's Sally Rickson was second but North swept the next five places with Roberta Mahn third, Debbie Farren fourth, Maureen Tracey fifth, Maryann Sylvester sixth and Michele Seltzer seventh. Kelly Tobin of Quincy was ninth and North's Brenda Santos 10th.

"This was the first season of girls' cross country and we felt it is a good program," Tozzi said. "Tom and I want to give a lot of credit to Carl Leone, director of athletics. He's done a lot for track in the city."

"The girls at both schools did a fine job and I was glad we were able to count Dottie Irvine's score against North," Hall said. "It is kind of tough to tell her that her scores don't count. Lou has her in class at Central and he quickly agreed to count her score in this meet. She does a tremendous job and has a bright future."

Atlantic Flames Seek Third Win Against Lynn

The Atlantic Flames, long one of the top amateur hockey teams in the state and winner of the Quincy Senior Summer League title last summer, in a North Atlantic League game, will face the Lynn Blades Saturday night at 8:30 at the Quincy Youth Arena.

The Flames, who include Quincy's Russ Sullivan in their lineup and who feature many former college standouts, blasted the City Point Clovers last Saturday, 18-5, at the Quincy Youth Arena to make their league record 2-0. They now have scored 27 goals in their first two games with only two power-play goals included.

Every forward except Capt.

Ray D'Arcy scored in last week's romp with Steve Burlamachi, the team's top scorer, having four goals and five assists for a total of seven goals and six assists in two games. Terry Toal, one of Northeastern's top scorers a year ago, had four goals and four assists, Carl Panneton the hat trick, Bob Reardon and Jim Dillon two goals each and Mike O'Connell, John Lovell and Al Finkle one apiece. Tod Blanchard played the entire game in goal and suffered somewhat from the wide open style of play in front of him.

Admission to the Flames' games is $1 for adults and 50 cents for children.

•Pee Wee House

Keohane's In No.1 Spot

Keohane's took a three-point lead over McInnis in the Pee Wee House League with a 7-1 romp over Team Quincy.
